REVIEW

CHICAGO'S GRAND FLORAL FESTIVAL

The modern flower show is quite a different affair from what it was in the days when beautiful blooms were enough to attract the public, but, forgetting the sideshow features, the flowers are finer than ever and the arrangement improves each year. The retailers have come to appreciate the value of the shows for gaining business.

A Good Show.

Passing the stunts to attract the populace, the show that opened in the Coliseum, Chicago, November 9, is good enough to win the praise of flower lovers. From the point of view of the critic, perhaps, it is deficient in big stuff, but the arrangement is so good non-professionals are not likely to notice such a shortcoming. Lincoln park sent a fine group of palms, but the other parks held aloof because of the commercial flavor of the show. Poehlmann Bros. Co. and George Wittbold Co. each put in well arranged large groups of decorative plants that helped greatly. As one enters, the place of honor is held by an excellent table of orchids by Poehlmann Bros. Co. Back of this, occupying the center of the hall, is a large trade exhibit by D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., a rockery, with pool and lawn showing evergreens. Back of this is the band and the dancers' platform; to the right the private gardeners' classes, to the left the miscellaneous plant displays, while around the outside of the hall, under the balcony, are most of the trade displays.

Retail Displays.

To the public, quite easily the most attractive feature of the show is the retailers' work. A quite unusual method was followed in that large cash prizes were offered to induce the retailers to make competitive entries and that they were asked to buy space for their non-competitive displays. They responded well in both directions.

The big feature of the opening day was the class for display of chrysanthemums arranged for effect. The premiums were $200, $150, $100 and three of $50 each. The class brought out five entries, from George V. Wienhoeber, O. J. Friedman, John Mangel, Schiller and the George Wittbold Co., the premiums being placed in the order named. So keen was the competition that a protest resulted and the entire board of jurors rejudged the class, sustaining the original awards by a vote of eight to three. Both the Wienhoeber and Friedman displays were large, costly and splendidly arranged and the class went a long way toward making the show an artistic success.

Six retailers bought space for non-competitive exhibits. Five of these each used one of the sections between the steel girders of the building as they come down through the balcony, but O. J. Friedman used two spaces. The exhibitors were the E. Wienhoeber Co., the George Wittbold Co., W. H. Kidwell & Son, Simpson & Le Mer and Schiller. In each case a background was erected and decorated, the public roped off and tables, baskets, vases, novelty receptacles, etc., installed.

JUST plain flower show no longer by its unembellished beauty serves to interest a satiated public, so this week we have a "Grand Floral Festival," with maidens in classic costume doing flower dances to the music of an orchestra; we display floral novelties "for personal adornment," on living models advertised to parade with the patrons of the exhibition; we show pictures, we lecture, we get Sunbeam ladies to help sell our tickets, and we hire a press agent whose fertile brain supplies anything that seems to be lacking to make a story worth the telling—all to get the people in. Introduced by Chairman Henderson, the Mayor of Chicago opens the show with a neat little "Welcome to our fair city," and the Governor's daughter christens a seedling mum, giving it the name of the state while the band leads the great gathering of "flower lovers" in singing "Illinois."

To the old-time florist the modern publicity stuff gives a peculiar feeling that the art of the cultivator is no longer considered as it once was; but the old-time flower show is there just the same, little altered, but improved as the quality of stock has improved and bettered as the art of arrangement has advanced.

The Cut Mums.

Seldom if ever has a Chicago show been stronger on big cut chrysanthemums, but much smaller shows have had larger showings of pompons and singles. Turner is the king of the big fellows, but for yellow old Bonnaffon holds its place. Enguehard does not take a back seat for Chieftain, which seems light in color this year. Splendid big vases in many varieties are shown by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Wietor Bros., E. G. Hill Co., Bassett & Washburn, Fred H. Lemon, E. D. Smith & Co., Vaughan's Greenhouses and Fritz Bahr, with many splendid smaller vases by the private gardeners.

The Roses.

The rose classes were not staged until the second day, but at the opening Wellworth Farm, Downers Grove, Ill., through the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, staged fine vases of Killarney Brilliant, Killarney and White Killarney for exhibition only.

The competition on roses November 10 was the closest seen in many a day. There was the largest number of contestants a Chicago show ever has brought out and prizes were well distributed. A perusal of the list of awards will show the appearance of several new exhibitors and the advance to the front of others who have not heretofore gone in for this form of advertising. Beauties were few in number and two out-of-town growers carried away the first premiums! Milady and Hoosier Beauty put Richmond out of the running.

Among new roses, Tipperary, Champ Weiland and Gorgeous made their debut, while Lady Alice Stanley also was staged as a novelty, all in such form as to indicate their value. The quality of all the rose exhibits was unusually high. The awards were as follows:

Twenty-five American Beauty—Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., first; Bassett & Washburn, second; Peter Reinberg, third.

Chrysanthemum Plants.

Western shows never are strong on chrysanthemum plants—unless they import some big specimens from the east. Curiously, in this show the largest plants are from John Reardon, of the Iowa State College, Ames, Ia. The gardeners from Lake Forest and Lake Geneva have fine plants, but not large. Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Vaughan's Greenhouses exhibit specimens and groups of commercial pot plants.

The following were the awards in the commercial classes:

One specimen plant, any color—Iowa State College, first on George W. Childs; Vaughan's Seed Store, second.

Miscellaneous Pot Plants.

There have been other Chicago shows stronger in palms and ferns, but none so strong on cyclamens and crotons. There are six excellent groups of cyclamens, from the Merriam Park Floral Co., St. Paul; A. H. Schneider, Oak Park; Aurora Greenhouse Co., Aurora, Ill.; Frank Oechslin, Anton Then and Poehlmann Bros. The Gardeners' Exhibits.

The private gardeners hold a more prominent place in this show than in any heretofore held in Chicago, one of the features being a competition between the gardeners of Lake Forest and Lake Geneva for collection of vegetables. These and the fruits were staged on two long tables, 3x75 feet, back to back, and afforded Chicago people a new idea of the perfection to which articles of food from the garden can be grown by one who knows how. The exhibits from Lake Geneva occupied three express cars.

The awards to non-commercial growers were:

The Gardeners' Exhibits.

The private gardeners hold a more prominent place in this show than in any heretofore held in Chicago, one of the features being a competition between the gardeners of Lake Forest and Lake Geneva for collection of vegetables. These and the fruits were staged on two long tables, 3x75 feet, back to back, and afforded Chicago people a new idea of the perfection to which articles of food from the garden can be grown by one who knows how. The exhibits from Lake Geneva occupied three express cars.

TOLEDO, O.

Toledo's first annual flower show, held November 7 to 9, was credited as a grand success. On the day of the opening, 10,000 people passed through the turnstiles.

The Museum of Art, which was secured for the occasion, was handsomely decorated, the main entrance and lobby being trimmed with southern smilax and large banks of palms and crotons. To the right and left of the main entrance the wholesale florists had their exhibits of chrysanthemums, pompons, carnations and roses. Here the choicest of these blooms, staged in groups of twenty-five, made an excellent showing and display. Many new varieties were among those exhibited and the visitors certainly wondered at the size and perfection of the large-flowering chrysanthemums.

The show was free to the public and the building was crowded with spectators at all times. The smaller rooms leading from the main display room were used by the retail florists for displays of fancy table decorations, corsages, wedding bouquets and fancy baskets.

Among the most unique table decorations was one by Metz & Bateman, consisting of a large table with covers laid for six. The center of the table was covered with a plat of Ophelia roses, from the center of which there was a miniature Maypole, with strands leading to six dolls, which were dressed

TOLEDO, O.

Toledo's first annual flower show, held November 7 to 9, was credited as a grand success. On the day of the opening, 10,000 people passed through the turnstiles.

The Museum of Art, which was secured for the occasion, was handsomely decorated, the main entrance and lobby being trimmed with southern smilax and large banks of palms and crotons. To the right and left of the main entrance the wholesale florists had their exhibits of chrysanthemums, pompons, carnations and roses. Here the choicest of these blooms, staged in groups of twenty-five, made an excellent showing and display. Many new varieties were among those exhibited and the visitors certainly wondered at the size and perfection of the large-flowering chrysanthemums.

The show was free to the public and the building was crowded with spectators at all times. The smaller rooms leading from the main display room were used by the retail florists for displays of fancy table decorations, corsages, wedding bouquets and fancy baskets.

Among the most unique table decorations was one by Metz & Bateman, consisting of a large table with covers laid for six. The center of the table was covered with a plat of Ophelia roses, from the center of which there was a miniature Maypole, with strands leading to six dolls, which were dressed in silk and wore small corsages of Sweetheart roses.

The Lindley Floral Co. table consisted of a setting for six, with dishes and flowers carried out in a unique gold effect. The centerpiece was a basket of Sunburst roses and bronze pompons. Corsage bouquets, as favors, were carried out in the same color effect and tied with gold lace and cord.

The S. N. Peck table, named "Golden Wedding," was handsomely set with dishes painted by Mrs. Peck, and trimmed with small yellow pompons. There were favors to harmonize with the centerpiece.

A table handsomely trimmed with Ophelia and Sunburst roses, with lace cups filled with Sweetheart roses, won honors for Miss Helen Patten.

The largest exhibit in the retail florists' division was that of Schramm Bros., who had an entire room for their entry. The table decoration consisted of a cornucopia on a base. The two separate parts of this were filled with Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley, with a shower of fine ribbon falling to the base. The favors were corsages and boutonnieres of the same flowers. The table was styled the "Bride's Table" because of the showers. From this centerpiece to each plate there were streamers of Adiantum Farleyense, covered with valley and orange blossoms. To the left of the table a colored waiter stood to receive the guests. In another corner of the room was the "Living Picture." This was a large picture frame, with a background of green velvet, containing a group of twenty-five Bonnaffon chrysanthemums. Two figures of boys were placed in front of the frame, as though gazing at the flowers. This was the finishing touch to the display, which was noteworthy because of the exactness in the pose of the figures and the resemblance in the two faces.

A corsage of orchids and valley, an exact reproduction of the corsage being sent daily by President Wilson to Mrs. Galt, was shown by the Lindley Floral Co.

I. Oberstag exhibited fancy wedding bouquets, and baskets of new designs. Christ Winterich, of Defiance, O., exhibited choice potted plants of begonias, Gloire de Chatelaine and Cincinnati.

The Scottwood Greenhouse displayed many baskets, groups of chrysanthemums and several fine banks of palms and crotons.

The awards for chrysanthemums were as follows:

Twenty-five blooms of Chieftain in vase—George Bayer & Son, first; Harry Heintz, second.

Twenty-five blooms of Wm. Turner in vase—George Bayer & Son, first; George Ford Estate, second.

Twenty-five blooms of Major Bonnaffon in vase—George Bayer & Son, first; Scottwood Greenhouse, second.

Pompons—Emil Kuhnke, first, with Buckingham, Diana, Iva, Fairy Queen, Garza, Kroeschell, Zenobia and Minnesota; Emil Kuhnke, second, with Diana, Buckingham, Golden Climax, Alma, Kroeschell Sport, Garza and Bronze Klondyke.

In the carnations, the following were winners:

Twenty-five O. P. Bassett—Krueger Bros., first and second.

Twenty-five Matchless—Henry Miller, first and second.

BANGOR, ME.

Maine's first state-wide chrysanthemum show, held under the auspices of the recently organized Maine State Florists' Society, opened November 1 for a two days' display with large and varied entries of Maine-grown mums.

The predominating variety was Chrysolora, with blooms averaging seven inches in diameter. There were several entries of William Turner, which were grown at Portland. As the show was held for the purpose of showing Maine people what wonderful mums could be grown in the Pine Tree state, it may well be counted a success, for the blooms certainly were of extra quality and the attendance larger than what was expected.

Among the exhibitors were C. S. Strout, of Biddeford; J. W. Minott Co., of Portland; Mt. Desert Nurseries, of Bar Harbor; P. M. Olm, of Bath; E. Saunders, of Lewiston; J. Burr, of Freeport; Miss M. A. Clark, of Ellsworth; A. J. Loder, of Bangor. The

NEW YORK MUSEUM SHOW.

Viewed by Many Thousands.

The annual autumn exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York was held November 4 to 7, at the American Museum of Natural History, as usual, where no admission fee can be charged. It was the greatest flower show, as to attractiveness and attendance, ever seen in New York. Up to Saturday night over 100,000 visitors had been counted. The doors were opened Sunday at 1 o'clock and at that hour a crowd of many hundreds had assembled, the line in the street reaching a block away. The big building was filled to its capacity for four hours and 88,593 persons passed the counter, bringing the total attendance to 194,024. No such interest and enthusiasm has ever been seen at a flower show in this country. It is a promise of a great success at the spring exhibition here.

The special feature of the show were John Canning's enormous bush chrysanthemums. A. A. McDonald, gardener for J. B. Duke, had a wonderful bank of palms and ferns, fruits, vegetables, roses, orchids, mums, lilies and autumn foliage built up from floor to ceiling. Special prizes and gold medals were awarded these gentlemen and they were richly deserved. Canning's big plants were R. F. Felton, Lady Lydia, Blackhawk, Greystone and Ramapo, the largest, Felton, being seventeen feet in diameter and carrying over 1,400 perfect flowers.

The bush plants filled the rotunda and the general exhibits occupied nearly all the available space of the entire ground floor of the museum. A visitor in making the rounds and "keeping to the right," was first greeted by P. W. Popp's extensive display of dahlias. A. L. Miller's Otaheite oranges and Salvia Greggii were next in line. R. G. Wilson's new fern was greatly admired; it is a distinct novelty and gives every promise of general acceptance.

Guttman & Raynor staged Laura Weber carnations, which received special mention. Cottage Maid won for Cottage Gardens and Matchless for Scott Bros. L. G. Forbes showed Yellow Prince and R. Hughes, of Flushing, received a silver medal for his carnation exhibit.

Max Schling, not for competition, had a Thanksgiving table decoration of fruits and flowers. He staged Totty's new rose, Gorgeous, effectively in vase and basket and also showed his preserved autumn leaves, baskets of mums, orchids, frames and plaques, all greatly admired by the crowds.

W. A. Manda had fine exhibits of his new dahlias, junipers, golden privet and ferns.

The orchid display was excellent. Lager & Hurrell and Joseph Manda were the trade exhibitors and Clement Moore and George Schlegel sent splendid groups. Mr. Milosy, gardener for Mr. Schlegel, also staged his beautiful new seedling anemone. One of the most interesting exhibits of the show was James Stuart's collection of cut nerines, in beautiful shades from pink to crimson, rivaling the orchid.

L. A. Noe was there with his first-prize American Beauties, as usual. F. B. Pierson Co. staged a grand lot of roses in variety. Wm. Tricker's new hardy mum, Arlington, seems to be a valuable novelty. He also showed everblooming Nymphæa Panama-Pacific and winter-flowering hybrid tuberous begonias. The Julius Roehrs Co. displayed outdoor mums only.

C. H. Totty's magnificent chrysanthemums were up to his high standard. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, sent an extensive collection of hardy mums, not in competition. James Stuart's single mums, in twenty-four varieties, were superb.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., had a table of their new single and pompon mums and some splendid roses, including Radiance, Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia and Mrs. Hearst.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The liveliest spot in Worcester November 4 and 5 was Horticultural hall, where the Worcester County Horticultural Society had its annual chrysanthemum show. Lovers of flowers packed the hall both days.

The general idea of the exhibition was a garden, with walks banked with bay trees and palms. Other greens outlined the displays, each presenting a small garden. In the center of the hall there was a 6-foot vase of chrysanthemums banked with ferns, displayed by Harry Randall. The orchestra was screened from view by palms and foliage plants furnished by H. F. A. Lange.

A new carnation called Miss Theo was exhibited there by Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass. The table decorations were a center of interest. H. F. A. Lange, who received first prize, had a table with a reflector in the middle, banked with maidenhair fern, valley and Mrs. Ward roses, with silver vases of valley and Sunburst roses resting on a glass plate. The

All the stock not of amateur production was donated by well known trade firms, probably out of compliment to Mr. Rye. Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., showed some of his 1915 creations, such as Mrs. J. P. Mitchel, Mrs. L. J. Ruter, Bob Pulling, Earl Kitchen-er, A. S. Baldwin, Mrs. G. L. Wigg and many varieties of pompon mums. Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, showed Calumet, Algonac, Artista, Kewanee, Silver King and Josephine Foley mums. In the roses Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, showed vases of Sunburst, Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Shawyer, Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Mrs. Charles Russell. The Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn., showed vases of fine Ophelia and Mrs. Russell. Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, showed vases of Hadley, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Richmond, Sunburst, Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Taft, Killarney and White Killarney. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., showed vases of Killarney and White Killarney.

J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., sent seven vases of fine flowers, the Princess Dagmar making a big hit. Wilcox & Sons also had three vases of nice blooms. A. T. Pyfer & Co., Chicago, showed their new Wilmette, a beautiful red.

mercial flowers, which took first prize. Enomoto & Co., of Redwood City, Cal., were specially mentioned, having sent ten vases which were on the road over four days and arrived in fine shape. The Thompson Co. and Gullett & Sons also showed some fine blooms. H. S. Ely & Co., of Neosho, Mo., showed three blooming plants which did them credit.

The sweepstakes prize, a loving cup, was won by a Chicago exhibitor, Poehlmann Bros. Co. Its flowers arrived for the exhibition in an excellent state of preservation. George Rye promises the public of Fort Smith that the success of this exhibition will assuredly stamp it as an annual event.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE SHOW.

The American Institute's eighty-fourth flower show, or "fair," was held in the Engineering building, 25 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, November 3 to 5, and, as usual, proved a splendid success. Unfortunately, New York was called on to welcome two large flower shows on the same dates, but it is a big city and equal to all calls made on it.

The institute show was a gem as to quality of exhibits and lacked only space to make it the Mecca of all flower lovers; its fruits and vegetables and plants and cut flowers being in keeping with its almost century-old reputation. Charles H. Totty carried off the honors in the mum classes, Peter Duff in specimen plants, Harold Cottam in fruits, Lager & Hurrell in orchids and Max Schling and G. E. M. Stumpp in floral novelties, baskets, plaques, bouquets, etc. The prize-winners were:

WORCESTER, MASS.

The liveliest spot in Worcester November 4 and 5 was Horticultural hall, where the Worcester County Horticultural Society had its annual chrysanthemum show. Lovers of flowers packed the hall both days.

The general idea of the exhibition was a garden, with walks banked with bay trees and palms. Other greens outlined the displays, each presenting a small garden. In the center of the hall there was a 6-foot vase of chrysanthemums banked with ferns, displayed by Harry Randall. The orchestra was screened from view by palms and foliage plants furnished by H. F. A. Lange.

A new carnation called Miss Theo was exhibited there by Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass. The table decorations were a center of interest. H. F. A. Lange, who received first prize, had a table with a reflector in the middle, banked with maidenhair fern, valley and Mrs. Ward roses, with silver vases of valley and Sunburst roses resting on a glass plate. The the stock not of amateur production was donated by well known trade firms, probably out of compliment to Mr. Rye. Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., showed some of his 1915 creations, such as Mrs. J. P. Mitchel, Mrs. L. J. Ruter, Bob Pulling, Earl Kitchen, A. S. Baldwin, Mrs. G. L. Wigg and many varieties of pompon mums. Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, showed Calumet, Algonac, Artista, Kewanee, Silver King and Josephine Foley mums. In the roses Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, showed vases of Sunburst, Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Sawyer, Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Mrs. Charles Russell. mercial flowers, which took first prize. Enomoto & Co., of Redwood City, Cal., were specially mentioned, having sent ten vases which were on the road over four days and arrived in fine shape. The Thompson Co. and Gullett & Sons also showed some fine blooms. H. S. Ely & Co., of Neosho, Mo., showed three blooming plants which did them credit.

The sweepstakes prize, a loving cup, was won by a Chicago exhibitor, Poehlmann Bros. Co. Its flowers arrived for the exhibition in an excellent state of preservation. George Rye promises the public of Fort Smith that the success of this exhibition will assuredly stamp it as an annual event.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE SHOW.

The American Institute's eighty-fourth flower show, or "fair," was held in the Engineering building, 25 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, November 3 to 5, and, as usual, proved a splendid success. Unfortunately, New York was called on to welcome two large flower shows on the same dates, but it is a big city and equal to all calls made on it.

The institute show was a gem as to quality of exhibits and lacked only space to make it the Mecca of all flower lovers, its fruits and vegetables and plants and cut flowers being in keeping with its almost century-old reputation. Charles H. Totty carried off the honors in the mum classes, Peter Duff in specimen plants, Harold Cottam in fruits, Lager & Hurrell in orchids and Max Sehling and G. E. M. Stumpp in floral novelties, baskets, plaques, bouquets, etc. The prize-winners were:

ly known as the chrysanthemum show, was held November 4 to 7 and proved to be one of the finest this society has yet held. Chrysanthemum blooms of specimen size were fewer than usual, though of splendid quality, and trained plants were not so numerous as usual, but they were not missed particularly, for the huge blooms and plants have long ago ceased to attract Bostonians. In their place were shown large numbers of single, pompon and anemone chrysanthemums, splendid groups of flowering and foliage plants, orchids of grand quality, superb carnations, numerous decorated dinner tables and mantels, and fruits and vegetables of superb quality; in fact, if the big blooms had not been shown at all, they would have been but little missed. Thus tastes change!

For the best group of flowering and foliage plants covering 300 square feet, A. M. Davenport won with a well-arranged group, in which splendidly flowered Mrs. Heal begonias were a feature, in addition to chrysanthemums; the W. W. View in the Autumn Exhibition at Boston, Showing Central Groups.

T. J. Grey Co. put up a wonderfully comprehensive collection, finely arranged in 150 varieties, unquestionably the best exhibit of the kind ever seen at a Boston show. Every catalogued vegetable was to be found here, and of fine quality. Awarded a silver medal and a first-class certificate. The Boston Market Gardeners' Association had an extensive display of choice vegetables.

The show was tastefully arranged, well attended, favored with good weather except on the second day and set a new high record for fall shows here. November 7 the attendance from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m. was so large that it was difficult to move around the halls. The spreading of the competitive classes over the four days of the show was also a welcome innovation.

PHILADELPHIA.

That the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was able to put up, November 9, so good a show in the face of discouraging conditions is commendable. Many things are against it. The war has caused retrenchment and the Great Reaper has been at work. John Hobson did not feel like exhibiting on account of his great loss; Joseph Hurley could not come, out of respect to his employer's memory, and, worst of all, at the last moment William Kleinheinz withdrew the Lynnwood Hall entries on the death of Peter A. B. Widener. These defections caused a gap, but the ranks closed up bravely. The show is a good exhibition, though not a large one.

The central floor arrangement comprises groups of handsome specimen chrysanthemums, with a central Cibotium Schiedeii or Kentia Forsteriana in each. There are pergolas covered with smilax, autumn foliage and ferns on each side, where visitors may sit and look and listen.

Dreer has filled the stage with one of those carefully chosen collections of foliage plants that give a comprehensive idea of what is grown at River-ton. Opposite is Louis Burk with his orchid case, with an addition this time, and his charming orchid picture. Nearby is a fine group of foliage plants and crotons from John Wanamaker.

Cater-cornered from this exhibit is the Robert Craig group of highly colored crotons and dracaenas edged with early cyclamens in bloom. The show has always been noted for its fine ferns from the private greenhouses in and about the city. Quite a number of these are here in their old-time glory. There is a commercial addition in the shape of a beautiful table of Asplenium Nidus-avis from William K. Harris.

The cut chrysanthemums are superb, though not numerous in the Japanese type. The pompons, including singles and semi-doubles, are evidently increasing in favor. They afford a wide range of color, in many lovely shades. Stroud, Meehan, Vincent and Michell have added beautifully arranged collections to those of the private gardeners. The Meehan collection was arranged in baskets as well as in vases.

Philip Freud had an electric reminder that it is time to plant Michell's hyacinth bulbs, its effect enhanced by pretty pompons, while opposite him John S. Hay showed flower movies for Dreer.

While all is still bustle and preparation, for the judges are coming soon, these few notes will give an idea of the show staged this week in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia. Phil.

MISS WINDMILLER'S SHOW.

The traveler familiar with the highways and byways of the Gopher state will remember, at this prompting, the enterprising town of Mankato, situated on a bend of the Minnesota river. The traveler probably also may recollect that this place is the home of the Windmill Co., a concern consisting of a live-wire corps of workers, headed by the energetic Miss Pauline Windmill.

Always with a keen eye for schemes that will create sales and new customers, Miss Windmill every little while startles the other members of the company by putting over a topnotch, business-getting stunt. Miss Windmill was born to be a florist and saleslady. Just by way of diversion one season she captured first and second prizes for exhibits at the Minnesota state fair and won a diploma at the South Dakota state fair, the sweepstakes of the show.

The latest achievement of Miss Windmill and her fellow-workers is the Mankato flower show, held in the National Guard armory, November 2 to 4. To say that the show was a success would be putting it mildly. It not only was profitable to the Windmill Co., but also advertised the concerns that sent exhibits.

Now, large flower shows, to which admission is charged, are, as everyone plans are being made for a bigger show in 1916. The company received columns of space in the local papers, which was one of the things desired. If other florists were to follow suit along this line there would be an appreciable advancement of the florists' business and a liberal education in flowers for the public.

The following concerns sent complimentary exhibits to the show:

M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, artificial wreaths.
A. N. Kinsman, Austin, Minn., chrysanthemums.
O. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., roses and chrysanthemums.
A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, plants.
E. C. Amling Co., Chicago, orchids.
E. W. McLellan Co., San Francisco, violets and calla lilies.

The Windmill Co. also feels indebted to the following for advice and cooperation: L. L. May & Co., of St. Paul, Minn.; Penn the Florist, of Boston; Clark the Florist, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; W. L. Rock, of Kansas City; J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia.

HOUSTON FLOWER SHOW PLANS.

All plans for the state flower show, which will open at the Auditorium, Houston, Tex., November 17, directly after the carnival festivities, are now completed. The show will be introduced by a great flower parade on the morning of the opening day, headed by fifty automobiles containing pretty girls and great bunches of chrysanthemums.

Atlanta, Ga.—A distinctive flower store has been opened by the Whitehall Floral Co., at 11 Whitehall street. W. A. Gresham, president of the company, owns 600 acres of land north of Atlanta, where several all-steel greenhouses will be erected.

Huntington, W. Va.—Thomas Bros., well-known growers of southern Ohio, who own five greenhouses near Augusta, Ky., have opened an elaborate store at 1050 Third avenue, under the name of Huntington Seed & Floral Co. A greenhouse is being erected at the rear of the store. The four brothers, Paul F., Carl H., Victor and B. M. Thomas, are sons of W. L. Thomas, who launched his business forty years ago. The company has an extensive business at Cincinnati, Portsmouth, Ironton and Charleston.

knows, quite common in large cities, where they are usually sponsored by trade societies. It has remained for the Windmill Co. to show how a flower show on a fairly large scale can be a success even when held under the auspices of only one member of the trade.

As the Mankato flower show simply had to win and pay for itself, Miss Windmill and her fellow-workers did things thoroughly. They went after retailers and growers alike, asking them to send exhibits to the show. A week previous to the show, the Windmill Co. came out strongly in the local papers, advertising the show, its features and its exhibits. There was music and dancing to attract the young folks. The price of admission was 25 cents.

The returns from the show were so gratifying to the Windmill Co. that mums. It is arranged that all those who are participating in the home garden contest, embracing some 150 entries, will be included in the parade, together with many women's clubs which are interested in the flower show.

R. C. Kerr, of the committee on arrangements, states that the Auditorium will be packed to capacity with exhibits and that 200 florists within the state and fifty florists from other states are expected to attend the show.

Special features have been arranged to attract the crowds. There will be living models wearing elaborate gowns and showing the uses of made-up cut flower pieces, such as shoulder sprays, corsages, tango bouquets, etc. The anklet bouquet, the latest scream in bouquets, will be specially featured. There also will be mock marriages, in which the bride, bridegroom and bridesmaids will demonstrate the florists' wares used on those occasions. Mr. Kerr thinks this year's show will be 100 per cent better than the one of last year and that the attendance will be twice as great as that of last year.

ECHOES ON GODFREY CALLAS.

The article on Godfrey callas which appeared in The Review for September 2 brought several comments from successful growers of this calla in this country. Now there comes an echo from the originator of the Godfrey calla, W. J. Godfrey, of Godfrey & Sons, Exmouth, Devonshire, England, who wrote to the Horticultural Advertiser, The Review's contemporary in England, as follows:

"In a recent issue of the Horticultural Advertiser you give a note from The Florists' Review, of Chicago, Ill., U. S. A., respecting the Godfrey calla. It was my fortune to perfect the Godfrey calla, which is now fairly well known throughout the United States, several continental countries, but especially in the Channel Isles, as well as in this country. In Jersey and Guernsey it is grown by the acre, and growers there claim for it that in addition to its other good qualities, it is semi-hardy.

"Many who grow the Godfrey calla allow their stocks to remain in the ground throughout the winter. However, the main object of penning these lines (we have no stock to dispose of), is to draw attention to the fact that the variety has not been honored in any way by the Royal Horticultural Society.

"Twenty years ago I placed blooms and plants before the floral committee on three occasions, but their merits were ignored. Some of the committee asserted the variety was the Little Gem, a quite useless and shy-blooming variety.

"However, by merit alone, the Godfrey calla has forged its way to the front and has practically ousted the older and once popular variety, for ninety-nine out of 100 blooms we find in Covent Garden just now or before Christmas are of the variety mentioned. It is, nevertheless, to be regretted that the Royal Horticultural Society allowed the Godfrey calla to pass without recognizing its merits."

ARISTOLOCHIA SIPHO.

Will you please advise me as to the propagation of Aristolochia Siphon?

A. D.—S. D.

I have tried propagation by both half ripe and mature wood, but only a small proportion have rooted. As A. Siphon produces seed freely, this is the general method of propagation. Sow the seed as soon as it is ripe, or, if you have no seed, procure it from a firm specializing in seeds of trees, shrubs and climbers, and sow in heat in pans of sandy loam. Pot off singly and later plant out in the field. It can be propagated by layering, but not readily. C. W.

FREIGHT ON MOSS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that the carload rate and minimum weight applied to the transportation of sphagnum moss in carloads from City Point, Mather, Sparta, Tomah and other points in Wisconsin taking the same rate, to Oklahoma City, Okla., are unreasonable. A reasonable rate and minimum weight are prescribed for the future and reparation is awarded to the complaining company, the Barteldes Seed Co., of Lawrence, Kan., and the Oklahoma Traffic Association.

The moss is pressed into bales 14x18x40 inches, weighing 25 to 35 pounds and worth at the shipping point 50 to 60 cents per bale. The railroads, in the argument of the case, said no good reason could be assigned for the old rate on moss, which was 3 cents higher than the rate on lumber, and it was canceled. The fifth-class rating was adopted by the classification committee. The western carriers established a fourth-class rate, with a car minimum weight of 15,000 pounds from Chicago territory, and applied the rate to Kansas City, Springfield and Joplin, and other points at which the complainants allege they encounter competition with dealers and distributors of moss. The railroads said they were willing to apply the same basis to Oklahoma City, but opposed the establishment of a commodity rate. The record showed no movement to Oklahoma City since 1913 and only an inconsiderable movement previously. The complaining company said a reasonable charge for a 50-foot car would be between $135 and $150. They suggested the present fifth-class rate of 68 cents, minimum 15,000 pounds, or that moss be given the benefit of the western classification rating for moss not otherwise indexed by name, fifth-class, minimum weight 20,000 pounds for cars of any size.

The specific shipment complained of was moss over the Green Bay & Western railroad, 15,079 weight; 49½-foot car used, the minimum weight thereon being 33,360 pounds. The fifth-class rate of 68 cents per hundred pounds was assessed, the charges amounting to $226.

The commission says the rates and minimum weights complained of were and are unreasonable to the extent that they exceed from City Point, Mather, Sparta, Tomah and other points in Wisconsin taking the same rate the fourth-class rate of 87 cents per hundred pounds, and from Phillips the fourth-class rate of $1.01 per hundred pounds with a minimum weight of 15,000 pounds per 36-foot car. For the future the rates will not be in excess of the fourth-class rates concurrently in effect, says the commission, which awards $45 refund to the complaining company.

Streator, Ill.—The cucumber stock of the Davis-Steiner Co. was damaged by fire and smoke October 27 to the extent of $3,000. The fire was caused by burning grass along the railroad tracks, which had crept to the greenhouses and started the flames while the workmen were at lunch. This branch of the Davis-Steiner Co. is in charge of Charles Elliott.

CARNATIONS

STEM-ROT AND OTHER DISEASES.

Noticing so many references in The Review to stem-rot and other diseases of carnations, I thought I might venture to say something about my methods, as they have produced good results here, near San Francisco, Cal. Out of 5,000 plants I believe I have not lost one; neither are any of them diseased in any way, as far as I know.

When transplanting to the field in early spring, I use hydrated lime on the soil at the rate of about 1,500 pounds to the acre. After the ground has been spaded or plowed, the lime is applied and thoroughly raked or harrowed in.

When lifting in the fall, I dip the tops of the plants in a fungicide prepared as follows: Put twenty-five pounds of quicklime in a 50-gallon barrel; add enough water to slake, and while it is boiling add ten pounds of flowers of sulphur. Keep this well stirred with a shovel or paddle until it is thoroughly slaked; then fill up the barrel with water and stir thoroughly again. Then let it settle and it will form a golden-colored liquid. Use one part of this liquid to one part of water. For mildew on roses and all fungous diseases, I spray the foliage and the ground around the plants, as well as the plants in the houses, with this solution. Dipping field-grown plants in this fungicide kills all red spider and the spores of most of the diseases that the carnation is heir to.

This liquid will not evaporate in the barrel, as it forms a scum over the top. After using the first mixture, fill the barrel again with water and stir thoroughly. After it has settled, use the resulting liquid clear, not adding any water.

GRUBS IN CARNATION FIELD.

Last season we had a considerable number of grubworms in our carnation field, the white kind, with reddish heads. They have not done a great deal of damage, but when we lifted the plants we found a great many, of different sizes, which, of course, we destroyed. We intend to plant our carnations in the same ground next season, and should like to know whether there is anything we can do to kill or drive away some, at least, of those which we did not find at lifting time. What is the average life of the grubworm and into what sort of insect does it develop? What is the life of the cutworm, the kind which feeds at night, and into what insect does it develop?

C. B.—Ohio.

The grubworm you complain of is the common white grub, which is more destructive than any other of the numerous varieties of that species. It is usually found only in limited numbers, so that, by digging around the roots of a plant that shows injury, we can in a short time find all that happen to be in a bench. In aggravated cases, it is recommended to use a poisoned bait, like bran, arsenic and sugar. Carbon bisulphide, applied to the soil, is also supposed to destroy them. In the field, however, a different problem presents itself, because it is practically impossible to treat a field in the same way as one would a bench. If you have chickens, one of the most effective methods is to plow the field and allow the chickens to follow the plow. They will find more than you could possibly reach in any other way that I could suggest. I would also advise that you plow this field as late as possible this fall, in November or later. The life cycle of this grub is supposed to be three to four years.

The variegated cutworm produces at least two generations annually. The eggs are laid by a rather large-sized moth, and these go through the several stages, one of which is the cutworm you refer to. Poisoned baits are the best remedies.

A. F. J. B.

POOR GROWTH AFTER BENCHING.

Under separate cover, I am sending two White Perfection carnation plants which have some sort of disease. Will you kindly let me know what the trouble is? We planted them inside about September 15. They were shipped to me with no soil on the roots. They wilted badly at first, and then one branch after another would wither until the whole plant was dead. I have lost 1,000 out of 3,000 so far, and about half of the rest look as if they might die. They are planted in the same kind of soil as the rest of my carnations, most of which were grown by myself. There are 12,000 to 15,000 of these and they are doing well.

The soil was plowed down outside early in spring, after spreading cow manure on it. Nothing has been used on the soil since then, except a light sprinkling of air-slaked lime. The roots were dipped in water before being planted and the house was shaded. The beds have had just the right degree of moisture since planting time, but the roots did not take hold well.

Though I would not be justified in giving a positive opinion, the behavior of your White Perfection plants may be due to the ordeal of being lifted and shipped. If the plants were soft from excessive rains, or if the weather conditions were unfavorable, such results might be brought on. You state that they wilted severely. That fact would tend to prove the correctness of my conjecture, unless they were neglected, and you say they were not. The loss of foliage and even of branches and whole plants could result from this severe wilting.

I notice that these plants are throwing numerous breaks from the hard wood, which shows that the plants are taking hold now. If you trim out the dead stuff, they will probably make a fair growth. The crop, of course, will be late and possibly unprofitable. Whether it would pay you to trouble with them, is a question you will have to determine for yourself. A. F. J. B.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

AZALEAS IN THE SOUTH.

Azaleas intended for Christmas flowering should be in a house with a night temperature of 65 degrees. The varieties mostly forced in the south are Mme. Petrick, Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner and Vervaneana. Six weeks in the temperature mentioned will bring these varieties into flower and allow for hardening them off in a cool house. They keep a long time at this season of the year; so let the flowers develop well before removing them to a cool temperature.

The newly imported plants are the only ones that can be forced in the south. Plants carried over from the previous year begin to throw scattering flowers during summer, so that when the fall comes the plants have almost finished blooming. This is more particularly true of the early varieties. The later varieties, especially in the northern section of the south, do well. In the southern section none of these plants can be held till Easter. To have them make an even head of bloom, it is necessary to give them a little fire heat at night, so as to provide a temperature of 50 degrees. This tends to maintain a kind of average between the high and low temperatures which prevail in the south, and causes the plants to flower evenly. A lower temperature, on account of the vagaries of the weather, will result in ragged-looking plants.

There are some parts of the northern section of the south, however, where freezing weather is common, and the plants can be wintered successfully in deep coldframes, specially constructed to exclude frost. In extremely cold spells an additional covering of long, strawy manure can be laid on top of the sashes. A cold spell in the south rarely lasts over two or three days, and the covering can safely be left on the sashes as long as the cold spell lasts. Remove the sashes entirely when the weather is warm and give plenty of air on all favorable occasions.

To carry the plants during the summer, plunge the pots in ashes in a frame, or plant them out in a light soil containing plenty of leaf-mold and a little well rotted manure. They do much better when planted out. L.

Sweet Peas

STARTING SWEET PEA PLANTS.

I am erecting a small greenhouse, in which I wish to grow sweet peas this winter. The house will be completed about November 15. About ten or fifteen days ago I planted the sweet peas in paper pots and placed them on the cellar floor, where I thought they would develop root growth and not be too warm. I now find that they are up about one inch and are quite delicate looking. I placed them under glass in a coldframe, but fear they have come up too soon. Do you think the ones started will come out all right? If not, how shall I proceed with another planting so that I shall have blooms, if possible, in January or early in February? E. H. S.—Pa.

The sweet peas should not have been placed on a cellar floor. It would have been far better to stand them in a cold-frame or on a greenhouse bench. It is probable that your plants are not spoiled, however, and will harden up after a few days in the light. If they show signs of deterioration, start another batch at once. Sow in flats of sand in a temperature of 55 degrees at night. If your house is not ready for them when they are fit to transplant, pot off singly in 3-inch pots and later transfer to the beds. C. W.

SWEET PEA VINES DYING.

We are sending you under separate cover a few stalks of our sweet peas, to see whether you can tell us what is wrong and what to do for them. We potted the seeds August 15 and put the seedlings in the house September 26, but they do not seem to make much headway. Some of them are growing fairly well, while others are at a standstill, like the ones we are sending you. The lower leaves begin to turn yellow; this discoloration works gradually toward the top of the plant, and the stalk becomes hard. We are carrying a night temperature of about 45 degrees. We took out all the old soil and replaced it with new soil when they were planted in the house. We have been fumigating them twice a week and spraying with nicotine for aphids, but we do not seem to get results. The plants are practically clean of insects. B. L.—Ohio.

The sample vines sent were certainly sickly, and, if they are a fair sample of your plants, I am afraid they will prove to be of little value. It is not at all easy to tell why the vines have so stunted and sickly an appearance. If you kept them in pots until the roots became matted, they would give poor results. You say you have used new soil. Are you sure it is not too acid to suit peas? Sweet peas need a generous soil. The ideal one consists of decayed pasture sod and loam, with a liberal quantity of rotted cow manure added, as well as some fine bone. In solid beds they should have a foot of soil, but of course they can be grown successfully on raised benches in half this depth. The drainage should always be liberal. Sometimes growers allow their seedlings to get somewhat leggy before planting them, and then bury several inches of the stems to improve their looks. Stem-rot follows, of course. Your fumigating should keep the plants clean, and the night temperature is all right. It should be 5 degrees higher at flowering time, however.

If the majority of your peas are like the samples sent, I would suggest sowing again in flats of sand, transplanting from the sand to the beds. Perhaps none of the foregoing suggestions may fit your case, though they are given in the hope that some one of them may help you. C. W.

FERTILIZER FOR SWEET PEAS.

Instead of stable manure, how much pulverized sheep manure and bone meal can be used in an 800-foot row for sweet peas, the fertilizer being placed in the bottom of the row before sowing the seed for outdoor culture and the planting being done in the fall for spring blooming? Last season I had good results from 100 pounds of pulverized sheep manure and 100 pounds of bone meal scattered in the row, harrowing them in before sowing the seed. I used this amount in an 800-foot row. Is this enough fertilizer to grow good sweet peas? In the spring I top-dressed the row with 100 pounds of sheep manure. What kind of bone meal is best to use for this purpose, dissolved or raw ground bone? Also, how much bone meal will the peas stand without being affected? W. R. D.—Pa.

You can safely use 500 pounds of sheep manure in the drills for a row 800 feet long, if it is well harrowed in, and 150 pounds of fine, raw ground bone. For a top-dressing I would use only the sheep manure. Spread it eighteen inches on each side of the drill and work in with a hoe or cultivator. A moderate top-dressing would be given with 250 pounds, but double the amount would be even better. Sweet peas root deeply and, therefore, the deeper down you can work some of the sheep manure, the better results you will have. C. W.

MILDEW ON SWEET PEAS.

Enclosed you will find some leaves from sweet pea plants. The white substance on the leaves, I think, is mildew. It appeared on some of the plants about four weeks ago. It seems to check their growth and it now seems to be spreading all over the plants. Can you give me a remedy for this? M. M. S.—Ill.

It will be a difficult matter to get rid of mildew when it is present in so virulent a form. The usual cause is cold drafts, but careless spraying, particularly on dull days, and allowing the plants to remain wet over night, will pave the way for it. Use greater care in ventilation. Keep a drier atmosphere and a more even temperature. Spray your plants with Fungine, one quart to twelve and one-half gallons of water, or you could, if preferred, dust them with flowers of sulphur. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamens.

Do not keep the cyclamens as warm as the begonias; 50 degrees at night is ample and even now, in the hottest part of the day, a little shade is beneficial. Let this be a removable shade, as a permanent one will only have a tendency to draw up the plants. The red varieties are the best sellers for Christmas. Give these a light bench, merely breaking the sun a little from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m. By the early part of November no further shading should be necessary in the northern states.

Plants wanted for spring flowering must be kept cool; 40 degrees at night is all they need in winter and in such a temperature the plants are much stockier than when grown warmer.

Do not overlook the little seedlings coming on for next season. If they are still in the seed flats, keep the surface soil pointed over. As soon as the plants have made their second leaf it is time to prick off into flats containing a light, sandy soil. Use plenty of leaf-mold and a smaller proportion of loam. Do not use any manure at this first shift unless it be old and much decayed, such as will crumble up in the hand. These small cyclamens should have a shelf in a house kept at 60 degrees at night for some months yet.

Cinerarias and Calceolarias.

Now that we have cool nights, cinerarias and calceolarias are making rapid headway. Look them over from time to time and keep them potted along before the roots become at all matted. Use a light but rich compost. The cinerarias need stronger soil than the calceolarias, but both want as cool treatment as possible. While mums and other plants crowd the houses, there is no need to move them from the coldframes. If they have a good layer of coal ashes below them to exclude worms and the frame is tight, they can easily be kept without fire heat until December, using matchboard shutters and mats, of course, on frosty nights.

Early Bougainvilleas.

Where some bougainvilleas are wanted in flower early and the plants have been kept tolerably dry for some weeks, they can be placed in a warmer house, 62 to 65 degrees at night, freely syringed and given a light location. It will not pay to start too many plants now, as the major portion sell better for Easter.

Hydrangeas.

We have had an open fall so far and quite tender plants are blooming early in November. A cold snap is likely to come at any time and it will not pay to take any chances on plants of at all a tender nature after this time. Hydrangeas will withstand quite a little frost if they are fairly dry at the roots favor and the demand has increased greatly in the last three years. They are impatient of heat and must never be subjected to warm treatment, except it may be when they are making their growth. For Christmas they are excellent sellers and growers should aim to flower as many as possible at that time. If the buds seem a little backward, move them into a slightly warmer house, but not over 50 degrees at night. Spray once a day in clear weather. This helps to swell the buds and keep the foliage clean, but spray no more once flowers are opening.

Half Hardy Perennials.

There are some varieties of perennials which are quite hardy in the warmer states, but doubtfully so farther north. Much depends on the nature of the soil they are growing in and their location. Anemone Japonica, kniphofias, rehmannias, incarvilleas, pompon chrysanthemums and a few other varieties may winter in light, well drained soil if well mulched, but in heavy soil the majority would probably die. It is safer, therefore, to lift and store these in a cellar or coldframe before freezing weather arrives. Helianthus multiflorus plenus is another sub-nifica, superba, Veitchiana, etc. Quantities of suitable cuttings are now obtainable and these will be well rooted in a fortnight in a warm propagating bench.

PRIZE PLUS PUBLICITY.

The Association of Ideas.

The most widely advertised man in the world is said to be that distinguished teetotaler and ex-President of big stick fame who, when he is at home, resides at Oyster Bay, N. Y. In the minds of many of us, Mr. Roosevelt is associated with prominent teeth, eyeglasses, cowboys and rivers of doubt, even as his peace-loving, would-be contemporary, Mr. Bryan, is associated with grape juice and the dove of peace. That little habit we have of unconsciously hitching a certain thought with other thoughts is what the psychologist fondly terms the association of ideas. This mental process is said to occur in the mind of everyone, woman, man or child. For instance, what child can think of Christmas without an immediate afterthought of Santa Claus?

This scientific fact, the omnipresent association of ideas, is one of the principal weapons of the advertising man. It is that intangible factor of advertising which has made our great commercial institutions. Advertising men have used the association of ideas in training American minds to instantly associate certain articles with the names of the manufacturers and the trademarks of the articles. Then when one goes to the store to buy soda crackers one unconsciously says Uneda.

Getting Down to Brass Tacks.

In the florists' business there is one form of advertising in which the florists seem to act in disregard of this fundamental law of advertising, the association of ideas. Hundreds of florists every year participate in parades by entering decorated floats. In most cases these floats are automobiles or wagons expensively bedecked with flowers. In thinking of flowers, one woman will have afterthoughts of sweet odors, another will recall her flower garden of last summer and a third probably will think of her wedding day, when there were hundreds of flowers. Therefore it logically follows that if flowers do not represent the florists' business they do not advertise the business, at least not on a trade float.

As large sums of money are spent in this form of inefficient advertising, it is gratifying to note that several florists are getting into line and designing trade floats that toe the mark from an advertising standpoint. The latest and best that has come to the attention of The Review is the recent trade float of Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill. The float is illustrated herewith.

Eight-Cylinder Advertising.

As can be seen in the illustration, the float of Gullett & Sons consisted of a display of flowers and plants within a miniature greenhouse mounted on a large truck. The greenhouse was 15x17 and constructed true in every detail. The interior of the small house was electrically lighted. Two boys went about the duties of a florist in the miniature greenhouse, potting and watering and the wood is firm and well matured, but if the foliage is still dark green they are easily damaged. After this date they should be stored in coldframes, pulling the sashes over them on cold nights and during rainy spells. Keep the plants tolerably dry, to assist in ripening the wood, and give all possible sunshine. The French varieties are more tender than Otaksa and must be kept a little warmer than that variety.

Mahernia Odorata.

Mahernia odorata, the small yellow-flowering plant, has a most delightful odor and is sometimes seen well grown at small country establishments. It is easily propagated and is certainly a good seller. To have plants in the best condition, it should have a cool greenhouse, and I find the best way to get shapely plants is to tie the shoots over a small wire frame and suspend them from the roof. This is an old-fashioned plant, but it is just this kind of plant that many people are asking for today.

Camellias.

Camellias are steadily growing in ject of doubtful hardiness which it is safer to store. Any perennial seedlings which may be classed as at all tender should be placed in coldframes. Canterbury bells, sweet williams, foxgloves, etc., will withstand severe weather if they have a mulch of dry leaves which can be held in position, but in many places it is safer to winter these in frames. Now is the time to do any of this work.

Buddleia Asiatica.

In order to have Buddleia Asiatica, commonly called the white winter lilac, in flower at Christmas, the plants must be placed in a temperature of 55 degrees at night. This makes a nice addition to the list of holiday plants. Red is the color much sought after at that season, but this buddleia is still a comparative novelty and should sell well. Like all buddleias, it is of easy propagation, and from cuttings rooted as late as June nice plants in 6-inch pots may be had for Christmas.

Speaking of buddleias reminds us that now is a suitable time to get in a good batch of cuttings of the various forms of B. variabilis, such as mag-the stock. Behind the float marched forty employees of the concern, carrying red torches.

This float was a splendid advertisement for Gullett & Sons. It unmistakably and immediately informed the spectators that Gullett & Sons were florists, growers and sellers of flowers. In the minds of those viewing the parade, a greenhouse is as rapidly and clearly associated with the florists' business as snow is an afterthought to winter.

The Gullett float was the work of Robert Sanderson, one of the employees at the greenhouses. It was entered in the industrial parade recently held at Lincoln and won the first prize of $25. The judges of the floats must have been unusually capable men, for they judged from an advertising standpoint as well as from the standpoints of ingenuity and originality of design.

The prize and bouquets are due Gullett & Sons. Every florist who follows in their footsteps can charge the expense up to advertising with a clear conscience.

heavily, or the plants will bloom disappointingly. Big bulbs sometimes will carry only one or two flowers, but if the plants had been grown tougher by exposure to stronger light, four to five flowers would be common to the sheath. It will pay to remove a few of the plants with sheaths most advanced to a warmer house. If they can be opened for the holidays there will be greater financial returns. These cattleyas, in common with all others not in flower, will be benefited by a light spraying on all clear, sunny days.

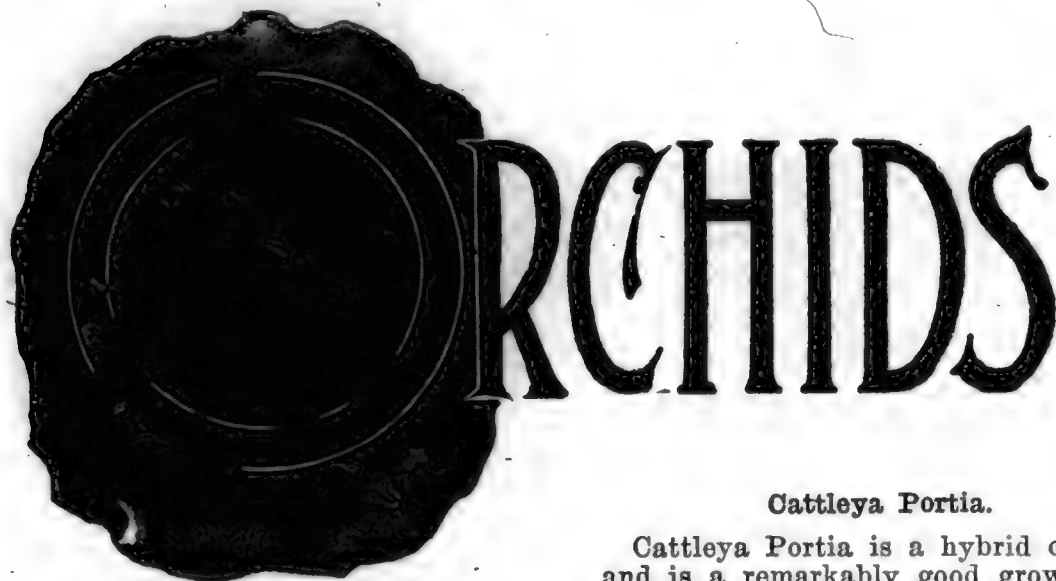

Dendrobiums.

D. Phalænopsis Schröderianum and D. formosum giganteum are splendid fall bloomers. The first named makes long, graceful spikes; the latter carries large, pure white flowers, almost equal to cattleyas in size and sometimes selling almost as high. Each of these varieties needs a brisk, moist heat during the growing season, but, as the flowers expand, it is best to move them to cooler and drier places. For anyone who can give it the necessary heat, D. formosum is a productive and profitable variety, sometimes carrying twelve, occasionally more, flowers per bulb.

D. Wardianum and many of D. nobile and its hybrids should now be resting in a cooler and drier house. Already nodes are showing on some pseudo-bulbs of D. Wardianum. These will require little water from now until the nodes are well advanced, but can be given an occasional spraying.

A REAL RED VERNON.

For ten years E. A. Groman and R. E. Groman, who do business at Saginaw, Mich., as Groman the Florist, have been selecting and reselecting their strain of Begonia Vernon until they have a stock of a real red type, with bronze foliage when grown outdoors, which they are confident will come true from seed; they say they have not had one come pink or white in five years. Visiting florists this summer have commented on a bed of it on the lawn, as shown in the accompanying illustration, which has been in fine flower all season, from July 1. The plants were about a foot high when the photograph was made.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cattleya Percivaliana.

Cattleya Percivaliana immediately follows C. labiata and pays well if it can be flowered before C. Trianae comes into season. Owing to its smaller size, it is handicapped when placed in competition with labiata or Trianae. C. Percivaliana is a good grower and blooms with great freedom. In order to secure as many flowers as possible for the holidays, give the plants a nice, light position and a few degrees higher temperature. It is possible to get $4 and $5 per dozen at wholesale for this cattleya at Christmas; C. Trianae makes $9 to $12, but Percivaliana pays better than Trianae, even if these prices can be had. Every grower needing a constant supply of cattleyas should try a few of this variety.

Cattleya Bowringiana.

Many of the flowers of Cattleya Bowringiana are now passing. It is one of the small-flowered varieties. The plant is a robust grower, the bulbs being of the long, slender type. It is a more desirable variety to use for table centerpieces than any of the large-flowered ones. It can be cut with a longer stalk. As a rule, ten to twenty-five flowers are carried to the sheath. On one occasion forty-seven flowers have been produced and I have a vivid remembrance of one grand old plant which produced 600 to 800 flowers annually. This is not one of the standard commercial cattleyas. It is rarely or never seen in the flower markets. It is more decorative than any other cattleya, is a good grower and worthy of culture. Bowringiana is not imported so heavily as other sorts, but can usually be had in an established or semi-established state. One good thing about it is that when given a good, elevated location with plenty of light, it will improve from year to year and not run out, as do other varieties.

Cattleya Portia.

Cattleya Portia is a hybrid cattleya and is a remarkably good grower. It is a cross between C. labiata and C. Bowringiana, two full-flowering varieties, but it flowers a little later than these varieties. A year ago we had it at its best for Christmas. The flowers on good plants are as large as those of C. Percivaliana and are of a much better color, carried six to ten on a stalk, and held up well. This hybrid is now fairly common, and those wanting a first-class and easily grown cattleya would do well to try one or two plants.

Cattleya Trianae.

Cattleya Trianae is the florists' cattleya par excellence. Its flowering season extends from December until the end of March, at which time Schröderæ arrives. It is an inexpensive cattleya to buy compared with labiata, and everyone handling orchids should grow more of Trianae than any other variety. The growths are completed and the sheaths well made up on the plants. Never shade this cattleya

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

GOOD COMMERCIAL VARIETIES.

Please tell me what varieties of chrysanthemums are best for commercial use, as I intend to grow them for the market only. Mention the best early, midseason and late sorts, in white, yellow and pink. F. C.—Ind.

I can answer your question in no better way than by giving you a list of the varieties we are growing. We grow for commercial purposes entirely and confine ourselves to varieties which make what is known as commercial blooms. Here they are, and they bloom in rotation as named:

White — Smith's Advance, Early Frost, Arlette Dubois, Alice Salomon, Mrs. Chas. Rager, Lynnwood Hall, White Dean and W. H. Chadwick. Yellow—Golden Glow, Comoleta, Chrysolora, Robt. Halliday, Lena Baum (Yellow Rager), Major Bonaffon, Dolly Dimple and Nagoya. Pink—Unaka, Fedora, Chieftain, Mayor Weaver and Maud Dean.

Wm. Turner is a large white, really better for exhibition than for commercial purposes. This is also true of the yellow Nakota and the pink Elberon. They must be grown into fancy blooms, to be of value. A. F. J. B.

CARE OF STOCK PLANTS.

I wish to ask you a few questions about chrysanthemum stock plants. We have some plants that were grown in the field and were lifted and potted about the end of August. We have sold most of them, but have some left which did not become nice and bushy and we wish to keep them for stock. Would these stock plants do well if put in a coldframe until about the middle of January? Or, when do you think would be the best time to bring them into a temperature of about 45 degrees, to get cuttings from them? These plants have been allowed to grow in their natural way, making many branches. Would it be advisable to wait until they have finished blooming before cutting off their branches? After bringing them into a temperature of 45 degrees, I think it would be best to take them out of the pots and plant them on the bench, so as to give them more vigor and a chance to make new roots and make better cuttings. Would this coldframe treatment also be good for stock plants of single-stem mums, most of which we wish to propagate in March or early in April? A. L.—Mo.

The stock plants will be all right if put in a coldframe, and lifted in the middle of January or whenever you wish to commence propagating. It would be well to cut off the branches that are blooming, in order to throw all the strength into the cuttings, unless the flowers happen to be worth money, in which case it may be worth while first to get all the flowers you can. When they are brought into the house, if space is available, it would be better to take the plants out of the pots or whatever they are growing in and plant them in the bench, as they will then make stronger and more healthy cuttings. Coldframe treatment is also good for the single-stem mums. In fact, any type of mum will come through well if handled in this manner.

GREEN FLY IN MUM HOUSE.

Please tell me what is the best way to kill green fly on chrysanthemums. I have tried many different remedies in my greenhouse and cannot banish the pest. I have used boiled tobacco-leaf juice, slaked lime and hellebore, but none of these does any good.

G. S.—N. Y.

The only sure way to kill green fly on chrysanthemums in a house is to fumigate with tobacco powder or nicotine extract, but the tobacco powder is the cheaper. Make little heaps of the powder on the ground, put just a little kerosene on top and light it; this will insure the perfect combustion of the tobacco dust, which will burn slowly the greater part of the night. Of course the house must be tightly closed to get the best results, and the fumigating must be done after the sun goes down. As to the proportion, it varies, of course, with the style of the house. A pail of tobacco dust, for instance, divided into heaps, will be ample for a house 100 feet long and eighteen to twenty-four feet wide.

Nicotine papers are excellent and the proportion to use is given on the cans, but these papers are more expensive than the powder and the latter is just as effective.

Chas. H. Totty.

GOOD DWARF VARIETIES.

Do you know of a few varieties of dwarf-growing chrysanthemums that would not grow much more than one to two feet tall and about one to two feet in diameter, if left growing in their natural way, or if they received a few pinchings as evenly as possible on top? We would want the flowers to be about one to three inches in size. As to the colors, we want white, yellow, pink, and a reddish color if there is any. Please let me know about a few varieties of each color, as the stock plants we have left would not give us enough young plants to meet next year's sales. These varieties are wanted in bloom about the middle of October. A. L.—Mo.

For dwarf-growing varieties, there is nothing better in the world than the Caprice mums, which come in all colors—Butler's Caprice, Caprice du Printemps, Lilac Cap, Mrs. Greening, Purple Cap, White Cap and Yellow Cap. Some of the early-flowering types that would be fine for this purpose are: Cranfordia, Etoile d'Or and Carrie in yellow; A. Barham, Billancourt, Lucifer and Firelight in bronze and crimson; Marie Dufour, Debutante and Cranford White in white; Hortense Maltat, Cranford Pink and Miss Burchfell in pink. All of the foregoing are first-class and they embrace all the colors known in chrysanthemums.

WILSON'S COAL BLACK MASCOT.

Do you believe in luck? No? Well, we concede that most luck follows work of the same degree and kind, but J. J. Wilson, president of the company at Newark, N. J., that bears his name is so fond of his "mascot" that he is willing to accord it all the proverbial powers to influence one's fortunes that go with a coal black pussy. You can see Mr. Wilson and the cat in the picture. The feline first crossed his path when days were dark and customers scarce, but that good luck has come in the form of a fairly steady stream of buyers is shown by the footprints in the center of the store. Sherlock Holmes doubtless would note also that the footprints departing are slightly heavier and plainer than those entering and deduce therefrom that the purchases are of some size and importance, eh, Watson?

THE CHICAGO FLOWER GROWERS.

In moving into its new quarters in the Le Moyne building, the Chicago Flower Growers' Association is, in a way, celebrating the success of a rather unique business venture in the florists' trade—a coöperative association of a large number of growers for the purpose of maintaining a general commission business as well as selling their own products. The accompanying illustration shows the present officers and directors of the association. They are: standing, Joseph Schoos, Evanston, Ill.; Anton Then, Chicago; Rudolph Ellsworth, Downers Grove, Ill.; Charles McCauley, treasurer, Geneva, Ill.; Paul Klingsporn, manager; seated, Fred Schramm, vice-president, Park Ridge, Ill.; E. H. Meuret, president, Park Ridge, Ill.; George Weiland, secretary, Evanston, Ill.; F. Stielow, Niles Center, Ill.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—Hanft Bros., 684 Madison avenue, have filed schedules showing liabilities $17,536 and assets $1,828, consisting of accounts, $1,500; fixtures, $200; horse and wagons, $65; stock, $50, and cash, $13.

Easton, Pa.—A receiver has been appointed for A. B. Kleinhans. An important asset is 3,000 chrysanthemums, which must be grown on for market by the receiver, as Mr. Kleinhans has left Easton.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was not a satisfactory one. Shipments were heavy, especially of chrysanthemums and roses, and prices fell below the average of the preceding week. Saturday's trade was only ordinary, the demand being light notwithstanding football requirements, and there was much left-over stock with which to begin the present week. Improvement from now on is expected. The big game November 13 between Yale and Princeton should clean up all the accumulations of yellow mums and violets.

Chrysanthemums certainly are abundant. Every wholesaler has his iceboxes and windows full of them. The flood is seemingly at high tide. The receipts of outdoor mums are enormous. Of the selected flowers too much cannot be said in their praise; they are equal to those of any year, and worth far more than they bring.

Carnation shipments are increasing daily. Last week it was hard to get over $2 per hundred for them, although a few Matchless and specials touched $3. If prices remain steady during the next few weeks it is all that can be expected. Quality is rapidly improving, but until the mums have vanished there can be little if any rise.

Roses are in overwhelming supply, and prices are lower than a week ago. These, too, must wait for the passing of the mums. Some of the new roses are superb. Prima Donna seems to be a wonderful acquisition. Orchids are looking up and choice cattleyas touched 50 cents November 6. Longiflorums do not move above $6 per hundred, nor Valley above $3. Gardenias have risen to $3 and $4 per dozen for perfect flowers and more are needed to meet the demand. Violets are said to be coming back to their old-time popularity, but 40 cents was top figure last week. Again we have sweet peas and daisies with us, also callas and bouvardias.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club November 8 was well attended. Chairman Miller, for the flower show committee, reported encouraging progress and urged the attention of the members to the subscriptions to the special prize fund. F. R. Pierson read the final report on the show of 1915, showing receipts of $33,000, with a final surplus of $2,297.44 placed to the club's credit.

Resolutions were read on the death of Lawrence W. Kervan and a committee appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Edward Walz.

J. W. Henshaw announced a total of thirteen reservations for the Cleveland show this week, including himself and Messrs. May, Totty, Duckham, Dick, Guttman, Lewis, Marshall, Reuter, Vert, Young and Rickards.

Officers were nominated as follows:

For president, H. A. Bunyard, H. Weston, Phil Kessler; for vice-president, Charles Knight, A. E. Hogg, G. E. M. Stumpp; for secretary, John Young, J. H. Dick; for treasurer, W. C. Rickards, Jr., Roman J. Irwin; for trustees, Max Schling, Robert Wilson, W. R. Pierson, Charles Schenck, Joseph Fenrich.

President Bunyard and Mr. Dick withdrew from the contest.

Edward McCarty was elected to membership and C. H. Allender and H. F. Winter were proposed. Resignations of Messrs. MacNiff and Cathcart were read. George Hildenbrand was given his privilege, as one of the club's new members, to assert his loyalty, and H. A. Barnard, of Stuart Low & Co., made an interesting address. The evening's discussion was on the mum. The discussion was both witty and practical, and the speakers were James Scott, Arthur Herrington, P. J. Smith, Walter Sheridan, Alex Guttman, G. E. M. Stumpp, H. E. Froment, Charles Schenck, Charles Knight and Robert Berry.

A. J. Guttman announced gratifying concessions by the L and surface roads and the subway in the matter of carrying plants and flowers.

W. Tricker showed his hardy red mum, Arlington, and received a certificate of merit.

Guttman & Raynor staged for F. Linda, of Farmingdale, fine anemone chrysanthemums, receiving a certificate of merit.

Scott Bros., of Elmsford, exhibited White Dotty, scoring ninety-one points.

Philip Kessler staged for William Matthews, of Great Neck, Great Western and La Gravera pompons, for which the thanks of the club were given.

Charles Smith's Sons received a cultural certificate for chrysanthemums.

Guttman & Raynor staged the Prima Donna rose, a beautiful acquisition, which received an award of merit. The flowers were grown at the Florex Gardens.

J. A. Bell received a certificate of merit for his pink single mum.

The thanks of the club were voted Charles Weber for Carnation Laura Weber.

Various Notes.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., was a visitor three days last week, attending the flower shows and the special meeting of the American Dahlia Society, and lecturing on dahlias and chrysanthemums before the leading garden club of Staten Island. His pet, the Dahlia Society, now has 212 active members.

W. G. Badgley, of Badgley & Bishop, is fast recovering in the Morristown hospital after an operation for appendicitis and is expected to be at his place of business in New York before this week closes.

Samuel Woodrow has secured another landscape contract in the Berkshires and commenced on it November 8.

P. W. Popp was awarded a special prize last week for his fine display of dahlias at the flower show of the Permanent Exposition.

Secretary Young announces the meeting of the International Flower Show's general committee on the second Monday of each month.

Guttman & Raynor will control the sale of the Laura Weber, Olive Whitman, Peace and Prosperity Sport carnations this season.

Charles Futterman, of the Guttman & Raynor staff, was married October 31, his bride being Miss Ruth Weiss, of Boston. They enjoyed their honeymoon at Atlantic City and in Florida.

Clarence Slinn is located in his new store at 123 West Twenty-eighth street, an excellent location, where he has installed all the up-to-date conveniences.

M. C. Ebel, of Madison, managed most creditably the first of the flower shows of the Country Life Permanent Exposition at the Grand Central Terminal.

The decoration of the front of the stores of the MacNiff Horticultural Co., using boxwood and ivy, is a lesson for window-box decorators that should have a wide influence.

The President was here last week and his fiancée reveled in a constant supply of flowers. Galvin has the order for the bride's bouquet and a duplicate of it and her photo in the center of his window.

F. H. Traendly is reported seriously ill.

Visiting florists should spend an hour in the basement of G. E. M. Stumpp's flower shop at Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street. Many thousand dollars' worth of accessories are on exhibition. Mr. Stumpp welcomes anyone in the trade who may desire to see these novel adjuncts to a successful retail business.

Brooklyn Notes.

Business in Brooklyn, with the wholesalers, is in a satisfactory condition.

William H. Kuebler says his supply department is growing fast. The trio of brothers make a strong aggregation of effective workers in Brooklyn's wholesale cut flower business.

Three score years and ten is not the limit as to years and vitality with "Johnnie" Weir, who last week celebrated his seventieth birthday.

Joseph Trepel's headquarters at 334 Lewis avenue, Brooklyn, have practically been rebuilt and Mrs. Trepel, who is in charge, claims it is the most beautiful retail store in either New York or Brooklyn.

Bowling.

November 4 the bowling contingent began its weekly practice. Thumm's alleys have been secured, as usual. The officers are: President, J. Miesem; secretary, H. C. Riedel; treasurer, P. Jacobson; captain, Jos. Fenrich. Other members are W. H. Siebrecht, C. W. Scott, A. Kakuda, A. J. Guttman, Wm. C. Ford and R. J. Irwin. The scores were:

New Castle, N. H.—Last June William Lefebber, formerly of Schilder & Lefebber, of Swarthmore, Pa., leased the range of Charles W. Eaton and immediately stocked the houses with carnations and chrysanthemums for the early fall market. Under Mr. Lefebber's skillful coaching the plants are producing top-notch blooms, which are easily disposed of through S. S. Greene, wholesale florist at Boston. Mr. Lefebber has been one of the first shippers of each variety of mums since September 1 and considers his first season at the new location most encouraging.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

CUCUMBERS FAIL TO DEVELOP.

I have a house of cucumbers which average about seven feet in height and are growing nicely, but the cucumbers fail to make any growth after blossoming. They are all hand-pollinated. I used a mulch of about five inches of manure and notice that the roots are working through the manure nicely. Is it advisable to water them lightly every day and is it necessary to spray the vines every day? In a bed five feet wide I have five 4-inch tiles lengthwise of the bed, with about five inches of soil on them. Is this sufficient drainage? If the bed is kept too moist, will the cucumbers fail to develop?

E. C. S.—Ill.

Your mulch, five inches thick, is far too heavy. You probably have rich soil and the additional mulch is more than even cucumbers can digest, particularly at this season, when solar heat and light are steadily declining. Your drainage should be ample. Cucumbers need a moist heat, with a night temperature of 65 degrees at this season and a corresponding rise in the daytime. It is not necessary or advisable to spray except on clear days, nor is it wise to water a little daily. These constant dribblings keep the top moist, but if you examine a few inches below the surface, you will probably find the soil quite dry. When you do water them, give a soaking which will wet the whole border well. Wait until this dries out moderately, then soak again. I think you are giving too much mulch and are not wetting your border sufficiently. If the mulch is full of active roots, it is not advisable to remove it, but remember it will need a good deal of water to soak through both this and the soil below it. Hereafter, I would advise you not to mulch until the fruit is setting and then use only half the thickness of manure.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is becoming more plentiful and prices are regulated accordingly. Chrysanthemums are certainly the favorite flower of the flower-loving Minneapolitans, as there is a constant demand for them. They are bringing from $1 to $3 per dozen. Carnations are abundant and the market is decidedly overstocked with them, due to the popularity of chrysanthemums. Carnations of the best quality are selling for from $2 to $3 per hundred. Roses of good quality are in demand, bringing from $3 to $6 per hundred. Violets are beginning to come into the market, bringing from 75 cents to $1 per hundred. Christmas plants are making a fine headway, and the growers are anticipating some fine stock to supply the demand.

Various Notes.

W. H. Bofferding cleaned up entirely on his bulbs this year and reports a satisfactory seed trade for the passing season. Although the seed business is practically over, he is kept busy filling numerous party and wedding orders in the flower department.

The La Crosse Floral Co., of La Crosse, Wis., is sending into this market some extra choice chrysanthemums and its William Turner are on display in the downtown stores.

The silver loving cup, which was won by the Minneapolis Florists' Club in competition with the St. Paul Florists' Club at the last Minnesota state fair, is at present on exhibition at Oscar E. Amundson's store.

O. C. Swanson is sending in some fine violets from his greenhouses at Lake Minnetonka.

Mr. Ruedlinger, the landscape architect, has received several large orders recently.

The growers in general are complaining about the condition of bulbs on arrival, a large percentage of them being overheated during transit. Several concerns estimate their loss to be quite heavy.

H. Rosacker will add two more large greenhouses to his establishment, for roses. A small house will be erected for potted plants.

The azaleas and palms which are arriving from Belgium are in excellent condition and the growers are well satisfied. The Minneapolis Floral Co. received three carloads of palms and azaleas and all arrived in good condition.

Cal Rice, in company with J. R. Van Bochove, of Kalamazoo, Mich., will leave soon for northern Minnesota to hunt moose and other big game.

The florists' supply business for October was far ahead of that for 1914, according to A. Rice, of Rice Bros.

Mrs. Hugo Will met with a severe accident the morning of November 1 at the Y. W. C. A. swimming pool. She slipped on the tile floor and fell on her wrist, breaking it in many places. When taken to the hospital she was unconscious.

Superintendent Theodore Wirth, of the park board, is now busy with a force of about twenty-five men planting shrubbery and evergreens around the several lakes.

The park board greenhouses are now advertising their annual fall chrysanthemum show, commencing November 7 and ending November 21. The collection consists of about 400 varieties, all grown in pots. The greenhouses are electric lighted and the public is invited to visit them at night as well as in the daytime.

The committee of the annual fall flower show, to be held at the West hotel, December 7 and 8 inclusive, has its program well in hand, and is promised by the growers a bountiful display of cut flowers and Christmas plants.

Among the visitors last week were L. E. Metcalf, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; S. K. Meyerhoff, of the Pompeian Art Ware Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., and Frank Farley, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia.

Warren, O.—Last spring A. M. Campbell erected a greenhouse 25x100 and hung out his sign. Now there is material on the ground for another house of the same size and a third one is scheduled to go up next spring. This year Mr. Campbell places an exclamation mark after big business!

OBITUARY

Dennis Dwyer.

Dennis Dwyer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a member of the firm of Dwyer Bros., formerly at 81 Summitt street, died October 30 at the St. Anthony's hospital, Woodhaven, N. Y. The deceased was born in Brooklyn and was a member of the Church of St. Mary, Star of the Sea. He is survived by two brothers.

George Gartner.

George Gartner, aged 85 years, one of the oldest florists of Lancaster, Pa., died at his home on East Strawberry street, November 5. The deceased had been in failing health for a number of years, suffering with a complication of diseases, but his condition only became serious a few weeks ago.

Mr. Gartner was a veteran of the Civil war, having served an enlistment in Company B, Seventy-fifth regiment, Pennsylvania infantry. He is survived by one son, George E., of Lancaster, and three daughters: Mrs. J. W. Hopkins, of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. Benjamin Zeizert, of Lancaster; Mrs. W. H. Hartman, of Elizabethtown. He also is survived by eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Interment took place November 9 at St. Joseph's cemetery. H. K. R.

Marvin L. Barrett.

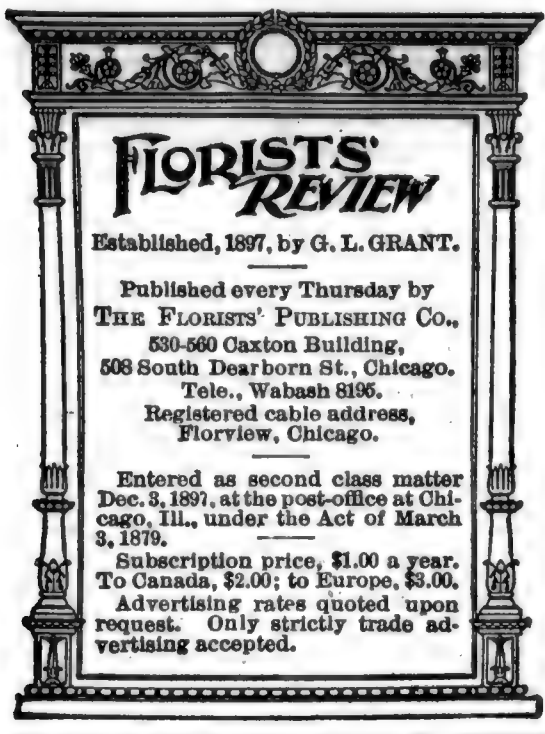

Marvin L. Barrett, 24 years of age, a clerk in the store of Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich., died suddenly October 30 as he was waiting on a customer. Mr. Barrett had complained to members of his family of severe pains in the region of his heart for several days. Death was due to heart failure. He is survived by his mother, two sisters and five brothers.

John Lamb.

John Lamb, 74 years of age, for twenty years grower of roses at the John M. May greenhouses, at Summit, N. J., died at his home on Prince Grove avenue, Summit, November 4. He came to this country from Ireland about forty years ago. He is survived by ten children. R. B. M.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Members of the Syracuse Rose Society soon will start a campaign to double the membership of their organization. The effort will be preliminary to welcoming the largest and most important gathering of rose growers ever held in this section. The meeting, according to E. E. Mill, president of the local society, will take place in June, 1916, and it is probable that Admiral and Mrs. Aaron Ward, of England, will attend.

Richland, N. J.—On the old state road, the favorite speedway for autoists to and from Atlantic City, are the Wayside Dahlia Gardens, owned by Mrs. May Hallett. Every summer hundreds of autoists are treated to the unusual spectacle of thousands of dahlias of many varieties and colors. So pleasing is the sight that many must stop and buy Mrs. Hallett's flowers. Last summer was a most prosperous one for Mrs. Hallett and many improvements and additions to the gardens are planned for 1916.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

STRANGE so many of the lady florists have monogrammed personal stationery and no printed business letter-heads.

THE growers and buyers of quality stock all agree there is nothing to compare with William Turner chrysanthemum. Stock plants will be in request.

THE Michigan red berries should sell well this season, for we are told most of the holly will need some assistance to get by with the buyers who don't get their wreaths from the grocer.

CONSIDERING general business conditions, 1915 has seen a rather large amount of greenhouse building and indications now are that 1916 will be a big building year.

THE Federal Horticultural Board rules that palms are included in the term "nursery stock" and that, consequently, permits are required when kentias, etc., are to be imported from any European country.

CURIOUS how many people, sending apparently simple and reasonable inquiries, take such apparent pains to remove every mark by which their identity can be traced. Anonymous inquiries can not be answered.

THERE will be no scarcity of azaleas this season; indeed, the arrival of so large a percentage of the usual importations after they had been given up as hopeless has resulted in overcrowding many an establishment, as other stock had been arranged for.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Evergreen Nursery Co., Ft. Myers, Fla.
Rieman, O. A., Connorsville, Ind.
Sakata, T., Rokkakubashi, Japan.
Burton, Alfred, Philadelphia, Pa.
Mass, R. E., Vinita, Okla.
Van Name, F. M., Fishers Island, N. Y.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

PREMIUM PREFERENCES.

Curiously, the regular exhibitors at flower shows indicate a preference for cash premiums instead of cups and medals of even value. One can appreciate that a grower selling only through a commission house, after he had won enough silverware so that the novelty was gone, might prefer cash to trophies, but for a retailer the possession of an ornate silver mug would appear to have several times the value of its cost in cash. One could not put currency in the window, with a green velvet drape, and exploit its winning for best bride's bouquet—but one would be neglecting golden opportunities if he did not make such use of a silver cup. The number of retailers who have exhibited and won cups is not large enough so that such advertising use of the trophies has lost its novelty.

So long as a considerable proportion of the premiums of our shows are provided by subscription, silver cups will be offered in numbers. Many a man who declines to give cash will donate a cup, because he can inscribe his name on it and feels he is getting a return in permanent advertising he could not get with any other donation.

BUSINESS IS BOOMING.

In the fifteen months since war broke out in Europe the business of florists has been at least as good, on the average, as the business in any other line. Therefore it is reasonable to suppose the business of florists will boom as other lines boom. Consequently there is trade interest in these words by the president of Chicago's largest bank:

"At a meeting of our board of directors a few days ago I was impressed with the statements made. In the membership of thirty-five there are representatives of the largest industries in the west. The presidents of the railroads spoke of the marked increase in traffic which has developed in the last few weeks. The significant thing about this increase in traffic is that it is largely of the package variety. This seems to indicate that merchants and others have cleaned up supplies on hand and that the current orders which have brought about enlarged traffic go back to the factories.

"A representative of the largest lumber concern in the west said there was a new cash demand for lumber in the Mississippi valley region and that prices have advanced $4 and $5 a thousand feet. Northwestern bankers say of the wheat movement that the unusual development is the demand of millers for grain. It is being ground and shipped as flour. In the business of the bank directly there is now trustworthy evidence of substantial activity, and it all shows that the present talk of increase in business is not merely an expression of a wish, but a statement of conditions."

THIS WEEK'S COVER.

When The Review prints the picture of a pretty girl on its Special Number covers there are sure to be inquiries as to the fair one's identity. Usually it is possible to reply with truth that the editor does not know, but this time so many will recognize Miss Lillian Walker, sometimes known as Queen of the Movies, that it may as well be stated that the photograph was made in the greenhouses of R. P. Atwell, the well known florist at Fort Dodge, Ia., on the occasion of one of Miss Walker's visits there to admire the chrysanthemums.

BELGIANS DESERVE CREDIT.

Last week we received from Belgium 458 packages of azaleas, etc., per steamers Ryndam and Oosterdyk. This week we received 666 packages more per S. S. Martensdyk and Rotterdam. This list excludes shipments of Holland origin.

When we consider the position of the Belgian growers, the difficulties of getting permits to ship, first from the British and then from the German authorities, the problem of getting transportation, etc., we conclude that the Belgian growers deserve great credit for their energy and resourcefulness.

McHutchison & Co.

WILL COME AGAIN.

The reason small Classified ads in The Review bring such good results is that buyers have learned to consult them when in need of stock. Of course there are other ways of obtaining what one wants, but nowhere is there anything like so large a number of offers—and buyers always go where the greatest range for choice is afforded. Then it works like this:

We are out of vincas, thanks to The Review and its readers. You will hear from us again as soon as we have anything to offer.—Chas. Werner & Son, Shelbyville, Ind., November 1, 1915.

There are a number of florists in New York and Pennsylvania who would get a new conception of the efficiency of Classified ads if they would offer their surplus in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Market conditions for the last week have been controlled by freak weather absolutely anomalous for the month of November. The end of last week saw nothing clearing satisfactorily but valley. Quality of stock, however, was excellent. Then came November 7, a day of unparalleled heat for this time of the year, a fact that resulted in large quantities of stock being rushed to the market the beginning of this week. As a result, prices are down and the demand, though fully as lively as it has been for two weeks, is unable to handle all of the receipts. This condition, however, is by no means alarming at this time of the year, for any hour may bring a cold snap which will throw

Flower Show at our Store This Week

IT IS with no wish to disparage any public exhibition that we call attention to the Flower Show at our store (open to the trade only) this week—and every week.

QUALITY As for quality, retailers who know the flower markets of the United States know there is no finer stock than ours; that it compares favorably with most of the prize winning exhibits at the shows; indeed, that many of the awards are won with stock purchased of us.

VARIETY We have a full list of stock; everything that is to be found in any wholesale house and many things not to be found elsewhere.

QUANTITY Every day we handle as large a quantity of cut flowers as one finds in any except perhaps the very largest flower shows ever given in this country. We can supply the goods.

Because of the fine weather, everything is in full crop this week. We invite inspection—and orders.

Thanksgiving Orders

We are ready to book your orders for Thanksgiving. You will need a lot of stock—and we can supply it. We do not expect to have to advance prices, except perhaps on Carnations. Plenty of fine Mums, Poms and fancy Peas. Glad to quote on your needs.

everything onto the short side of the market.

Beauties are easily sufficient to meet the present demand. Other varieties of roses are in abundant supply, and though of good color, much of the stock received the beginning of the week was somewhat open and not well suited for shipping purposes. Quite fortunately, there was enough excellent stock to take care of the shipping trade, which formed by far the greater part of the entire business.

The receipts of carnations are heavy and there are reports of job lot sales at midsummer prices. The warm weather caused many shipments to look sleepy on their arrival. Both double and single violets may be had in any quantity. Valley has a penchant for the short side of the market, and though not actually scarce at present, is so close to it as to be watched with interest. Sweet peas are in evidence, as are daisies and mignonettes. Demand for them, however, is altogether desultory. There are enough cattleyas to supply all wants.

Chrysanthemum receipts were unusually heavy the first of the week, but unfortunately only a small part consisted of the yellow varieties. Unfortunately, as the demand for them far exceeds that for the other colors. Pompons and anemones are plentiful and are moving slowly. If the cool wave does not come soon most of the mums and pompons will be forced onto the market before Thanksgiving.

Easter lilies and rubrums are fully equal to the demand, which is not in any degree blatant.

Greens, with one exception, are also abundant and move, or rather fail to move, accordingly. The exception is Asparagus plumosus sprays.

Club Meeting

The monthly meetings of the Chicago Florists' Club are seldom so well attended as was the one of November 4, which was held in the clubroom at the Morrison hotel, fully ninety members being present. The meeting was strictly a business one. In the absence of the secretary, Guy W. French, Allie Zech filled the office.

Various Notes.

Already there are indications that Schiller's advent in the loop will do much to add to the factor widely known as the life of trade. To avoid confusion, it should be clearly stated that the store Schiller acquired is the one at 36 South Wabash avenue recently opened by William Lubliner, not the one at 41 South Wabash formerly conducted by Lubliner & Trinz, where George Wienhoeber now does a prosperous business. Around the corner on Monroe street are the stores of Mangel and Bohannon, while in the other direction, on Madison street, is Lange.

There are too many kinds of pompon and single chrysanthemums, according to N. J. Wietor, who predicts growers will realize better average returns by cutting the list down to a few of the better sorts, just as has been done with carnations.

A new delivery auto, with body in purple and gold, brings the name of H. N. Bruns to the attention of west-siders.

The E. C. Amling Co. comments on the number of trade visitors early this week as greater than usual during the opening days of a show.

Miss Ida Evert has made her annual appearance on the market, at 56 East Randolph street, selling the stock of her brother, John Evert, who grows midseason and late mums in large quantities. Miss Evert's return always is looked for by the buyers who remember her supplies of White Enguehard, on which John Evert has had a monopoly for four seasons. Golden Dome is another fine but little seen variety he grows in quantity.

An important addition to the glass of the Stielow establishment at Niles Center will be made this season.

The warm weather has been pushing the chrysanthemums and Felix Reichling says his brother, Emil, who is familiar with conditions in the growers' section around Peter Reinberg's, tells him the supply for Thanksgiving is likely to be the lightest in years. Cooler conditions are earnestly hoped for.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh is having summer weather. It is so fine that people are living mostly outdoors, and this does not help the cut flower business. Chrysanthemums, especially, need more seasonable weather to make them more appreciated. There are no large weddings or social functions of any kind. Roses and lilies are blooming their heads off and the market has been glutted with all

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club met Tuesday evening, November 2, in the Dutch room of the Fort Pitt hotel. There was a large attendance and the meeting was most enthusiastic.

The subject for the evening was chrysanthemums and there was a splendid display of blooms. The general opinion was that it was by far the finest lot ever exhibited in this city. The greatest interest was shown when two lots of Wm. Turner, grown by Manus Curran and Herman Rapp, were up for judgment. They were the finest ever shown here and the decision went to Manus Curran, gardener for Mrs. Elizabeth Horne, though the decision was nothing to the discredit of Mr. Rapp. Messrs. Curran and Rapp also exhibited a number of other varieties, all of magnificent quality. Mr. Rapp is gardener for David F. Watson.

John Jones, gardener at Schenley park, showed fine flowers in several varieties, including a splendid vase of Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, in which the individual flowers were not only large, but well done and shapely, with strong stems and with foliage well up to the flowers. This vase of blooms seemed to sustain Mr. Jones' comment that "this is the finest white in cultivation, the aristocrat of all chrysanthemums."

James Moore, gardener at Phipps Conservatory, in North Side park, showed some splendid flowers. Though grown right in the heart of the city, they compared favorably with those grown under much better conditions.

The Crissman Greenhouse Co., Punxsutawney, Pa., sent a collection of commercial varieties, such as the firm grows regularly for its trade. These were excellent flowers, though small, of course, compared with the giant blooms in the show classes.

A. A. Leach, gardener for H. J. Heinz, who has been conducting a show for the public, had creditable flowers of eleven different varieties.

Mr. Keeler, gardener for A. R. Peacock, had one plant bearing small yellow flowers.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., of Philadelphia, sent nineteen pompon varieties, which were grown outdoors and had stood two frosts which killed cannas and dahlias. It was a fine collection, all worthy of a trial and all desirable in color either for the private place or for indoor culture for more exacting patrons.

A number of those present signified their intention of going to the Cleveland show. Among these were Messrs. Curran, Murphy and Thompson, of Sewickley Heights; also Fred Burki, E. C. Reineman, Carl Beckerer, E. C. Ludwig, De Forest Ludwig and James Moore. There will be others, as the intention is to make up a party.

A. A. Leach and Walter Jordan were elected to membership.

As William Falconer was not present and it was learned that he was at home celebrating his birthday, the club instructed President McCallum to go to the telephone and extend to him the congratulations and best wishes of the club.

President McCallum then gave one of his original and interesting talks on the chrysanthemum, thus closing one of the best meetings the club has ever held.

Various Notes.

As the time for the Cleveland show approaches, interest seems to grow. Among others who have decided to attend, in addition to those mentioned in a preceding part of this letter, are Samuel McClements, T. P. Langhans, G. P. Weaklen and Henry Heil.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

Ice, sufficient to destroy the remaining outdoor flowers, came on the night of November 6, compelling the market to depend on greenhouse-grown flowers for the next five months. Despite this fact, there is an oversupply of flowers for the business, not an unusual condition for show time, but one that taxes the ingenuity of the wholesalers to find an outlet for the stock. There can be no question as to the quality of much that is offered. Any flowers not up to the mark have little chance in the crush. Even the finest flowers find it difficult at times to realize value.

William Turner, the great white, is probably the leading variety of chrysanthemum this week. Its magnificent size, fine form and foliage and purity make it an effective show sort; it is, however, hardly satisfactory for shipping. Yellow is the leading color; Bonnaffon is the leading yellow. Pink comes next in point of popularity. This color is not so well represented. White, which comes last, is splendidly represented by several good varieties and is rather in oversupply. Pompons sell moderately. The bronzes and pinks go better than the yellows. Outdoor-grown pompons are of little value now.
Roses and carnations have suffered decidedly. They are good and cheap, the standard varieties of roses being particularly so. Of the finer flowers, orchids are becoming scarce. Cattleya labiata is nearly done; Cattleya Trianæ is just beginning. Dendrobiums are quite plentiful; oncidiums are not.
Violets are selling a little better. Cyp-ripediums are coming in more freely.
Gardenias are scarce indeed. Valley has been in brisk demand in the better

Florists' Club, Leo Niessen, Fred Hahpected to offer a resolution at the December meeting, reducing the initiation fee for membership in the club from $5 to $2. With the annual dues of $3 this plan, if adopted, would make the membership cost $5 for the first year. Each member of the Florists' Club is entitled to a season ticket for the National Flower Show, to be held is an unusual inducement that should bring every florist in the city under the

A home anniversary of first importance is offered as an excuse for failure to attend the lively meeting of the Florists' Club last week. This explains an error which, for the moment, deprived Robert Craig of credit for the victory he won for the "Street Sale of Plants and Flowers," over his redoubtable opponent, John Westcott. Robert Craig handled his subject admirably, but the retailers insist that they were outnumbered.

Germantown Society Show.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Germantown Horticultural Society brought out a good attendance and keen competition, on the afternoon and evening of November 8. The show was held in the Library building at Vernon Park. The exhibitors were chiefly private gardeners from the large suburban places in the neighborhood. Most of the exhibits were well-grown chrysanthemums in pots and cut. The Wertsner silver cup, the chief prize of the show, for twelve cut blooms in four varieties, was won by I. Newton Kulp, gardener to Miss J. G. Mason.

A lecture was given in the evening by S. Mendelson Meehan on spruces, firs, cedars and pines. The judges were Chester Davis, Stephen Ager and J. G. Scott.

Various Notes.

Samuel S. Pennock has been appointed a member of the committee on credits of the Society of American Florists.

Miss A. Walker has opened the Ideal Floral Shop, at 59 North Fifty-second street, West Philadelphia. Miss Walker was formerly bookkeeper for John C. Gracey.

Robert & Henri are preparing to open a store for the sale of artificial flowers and foliage at Eleventh and Chestnut streets. Natural flowers and plants also may be sold. The firm of Robert & Henri has been successful with its shop at 909 Boardwalk, Atlantic City, during last summer.

Elmer W. Gaehring and Joseph G. Neidinger left November 9 for Cleveland, to attend the flower show there this week.

Leo Niessen visited the west side wholesale district one day this week.

Chrysanthemums flooded the market last week. Many of the growers say they will soon be cleaned out, except for a few yellow varieties for Thanksgiving. White and yellow mums lead in demand, while the pink varieties are far behind. Carnations are plentiful and those arriving are of good quality. Roses are of fine quality, but are too plentiful and consequently are sold at low figures. Especially is this true of the yellow varieties. Violets, valley and narcissi are seen on the market.

abundant and cheap, some selling as low as 20 cents. Potted primroses are beginning to arrive. Quantities of colored oak leaves are being used in decorations.

Every week sees an increase in demand. Those along Broad street and other streets near the center of the city report much better business. Some of the smaller stores farther from the

ple. It was held at the department store of Bamberger & Co., in the heart of the city. The purpose of the show was to show the people of Newark how great an industry the florists' business is and to introduce the club to the general public. A large number of prizes were given exhibitors and many of the Essex county growers entered, as well as several retail florists.

Frederick P. Wolfinger left last week for a hunting trip in the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina. He will return the week before Thanksgiving.

Philips Bros. are busy with a great deal of funeral and wedding work and a lively counter trade.

Strobell & Co. find business somewhat improved but not yet as good as it ought to be. There still is a tendency for business to be spotty, but it is thought that the coming season will prove a good one.

F. A. Kuehn states that business is developing nicely. He has had much wedding and funeral work. The addition to his greenhouses has been completed.

August Begerow intends to erect a private residence at 2 Girard place, at a cost of $10,000.

The Newark Shade Tree Commission will soon plant 3,000 trees along the curb of some of the streets.

Ernest Radany anticipates good business during the winter months. He makes many sales of artificial flowers and wreaths, and supplies large amounts of evergreens for the cemetery near his store.

The Manda Floral Co., of West Orange, recently sent shipments of orchids to Japan and to Cuba.

William Weismantel recently secured a contract for decorating a large float for the great white way parade at Harrison. Mr. Weismantel used large quantities of flowers and hundreds of small electric lights. This decoration was given the first prize by the judges.

Peter Penek, of 6 Academy street, said that while business has been improving there is a lull at present. The outlook for the approaching season is bright.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

For some unknown reason, business was quiet last week. The weather has not been of the best. Dull, rainy, cold days do not help trade any and this may be the chief reason. The local growers are supplying the stores with elegant chrysanthemums, all of which bring good prices. The stores present a pleasing appearance with such a wealth of flowers around. Outdoor stock is gone, except white and lavender cosmos. All stock is of the choicest. Major Bonnaffons have made their first appearance and are unusually good. Chadwick, Queen, Chieftain, Touset and Chrysolora are among the finest, although many other varieties are seen. Pompons are selling exceptionally well. Garza and Mrs. Buckingham, the rich pink, are especially popular. In roses, the stock is large and of good quality. At this season the stems and foliage are fine. American Beauties are selling well and fancy stock brings fancy prices. Remarkably good Sunbursts and Hearsts arrive daily. Francis Scott Key roses are good sellers.

Violets are good and sell well. Orchids and gardenias are doing better. Easter lilies are in splendid condition and sell well. Callas are scarce. Valley is plentiful, but is not having the demand it should. Pansies are extra good. Carnations are becoming more plentiful and improve daily. There is a good supply of all kinds of greens. Palms have an ever increasing sale and more than the average number have been sold.

EVERGREEN, ALA.

ESTABLISHED OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY

Various Notes.

The flower shop recently opened on Plymouth avenue, under the management of Lars Goranson, has been closed and the fixtures and supplies sold. Mr. Goranson's illness has made this move necessary.

George B. Hart, who was Republican candidate in the Sixteenth ward for supervisor, was elected November 2 by a large majority. All his friends are much elated over his election and wish him success during his term of office.

E. C. Armbrust, on East avenue, had an effective window display last week, consisting of pink and yellow mums and a large quantity of cosmos. Ferns and palms made a good background. Mr. Armbrust says business is good.

According to reports from the up-town stores, the month of October was satisfactory and a larger amount of business was done during that month than during any October of previous years.

George C. Saltford, of the Saltford Flower Shop, Inc., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was in town last week. This is his first western trip, which will terminate at Cleveland. He visited all the stores and has become well acquainted.

Returning from a 4-day trip through western Pennsylvania, Arthur Elder, of the Lord & Burnham Co., reports that the growers are most optimistic about the coming year and are talking greenhouse building in earnest. Building contracts received last month at the local office of this company have been far in excess of any other month of this year.

E. R. Fry has purchased a handsome McCray icebox for his new store on West Main street. His window is attractively arranged with baskets of flowers.

George T. Boucher reports business as being good. He has had a large amount of funeral work.

Purcell is cutting fine pompons, for which he finds a ready sale. His other mums are good.

Charles Suhr is doing a nice business in chrysanthemums. He is cutting large quantities of some of the best commercial varieties.

The fixtures of the store of H. E. Wilson are now complete. During the week a new showcase has been added. The shelves of the case are nicely arranged with vases, jardinieres, bud vases and ferneries. It is an elaborate case and is a big attraction as well as a good advertisement.

Schuyler Arnold spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Arnold, Jr., at Ensenore, N. Y.

Morris Cohen, of New York, was in town Thursday and had a good display of new fall ribbons and chiffons. He captured several good orders. He intends to visit the Cleveland show.

A large party is planning to leave October 10 for the Cleveland flower show.

The Market.

Last week the florists were unusually busy with funeral work and a number of social affairs resulted in many orders for decorations. Plenty of flowers of a large variety were on the market. still is warm. Some days the thermometer reached 85 degrees. Thousands of outdoor mums and cosmos are arriving and cut into the sales of greenhouse flowers.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons enjoyed a busy week. They are cutting large mums of exhibition quality, for which they find a ready market.

Karl Zeidler reports that he never had so many funeral orders as lately. He leaves with a hunting party for Mississippi November 16.

The William Blackman Floral Co. reports a heavy demand for stock. George Blackman was well satisfied with the business done during October.

J. C. Elsperrmann had his share of business during October, and November is starting splendidly. All Souls' day was a big day for Mr. Elsperrmann, when he sold a large number of designs made up of boxwood and artificial flowers.

Miss Nellie Goodge is able to be up and about again, though unable to do much. She has been unfortunate, for her grower also has been sick and unable to work for several weeks.

Royston & Fenton report a good demand for roses and mums. They have had many shipping orders for coleus, sultanas and Sprenger.

Austin Wallace has returned. He expects to plant his place to lettuce for the winter, but will have Russell roses in the spring.

The next meeting of the newly organized florists' club will be held at William Halbrooks', at Oak Hill cemetery, November 17. It is expected that all details incidental to the new club will be completed at this meeting.

Frank D. Posey, of Rockport, Ind., died last week. A number of years ago he began to grow plants in an abandoned coal mine, and produced chrysanthemums that were of such exceptional quality that he made a present of some to Mr. Taft, who was President at that time. He used acetylene lamps to furnish light. E. L. F.

A Bowling Contest.

Thursday evening, November 4, a dozen members of the Omaha-Council Bluffs Florists' Club met at one of the local bowling alleys, where a contest was staged between the members from across the river and the home contingent, the former bowling to defeat in three straight games. Lunch and refreshments were served and everyone present seemed to enjoy the occasion immensely.

There was great disappointment in not seeing more members present, but it is hoped that there will be a better representation at the next contest, to be staged the first Thursday in December. Reservation of the alleys once a month for the entire winter has been made and some good times are looked for. Now, do not forget the date, the first Thursday in December, for the C. B. boys are out for revenge and say they are going to have it.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Thomas Joy II, of the Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn., is a strong advocate of publicity—"making the best possible use of one's name, with the goods to back it up." The company has adopted a trade mark, "The Joy of Flowers," and has a clever conceit in an electric sign, placed on the tile floor of the display window, where it attracts the attention of passers-by. Mr. Joy smilingly remarked, "We are a joyful quartet; four generations in the business. Father is 76 years of age and is often taken for me. When there is a mix-up of joy it makes him feel young. See him yonder, with the boys, bringing in that load of Cobbler potatoes. The potatoes are yielding heavily and will bring a good price. Come and look at the Champion potato digger, which digs about six inches below the surface and throws up the tubers easily and with ne'er a miss. It is a great machine." A peep through the houses found stock in fine shape, with plenty of blooms and foliage. Thomas Joy III has charge of the store and said that the dahlia exhibition they gave this year was the biggest yet. For several days the place was crowded, the free display and distribution of flowers being a big attraction. The climax came when a large party of young women, who had been attending a demonstration class nearby, swooped down in a body and demonstrated their appreciation by taking not only the blooms but also the labels, and, in several instances, the vases which held the flowers, presumably with the endeavor to preserve the dahlias as long as possible. Mr. Joy said it might be called enthusiasm, but a trifle overdone.

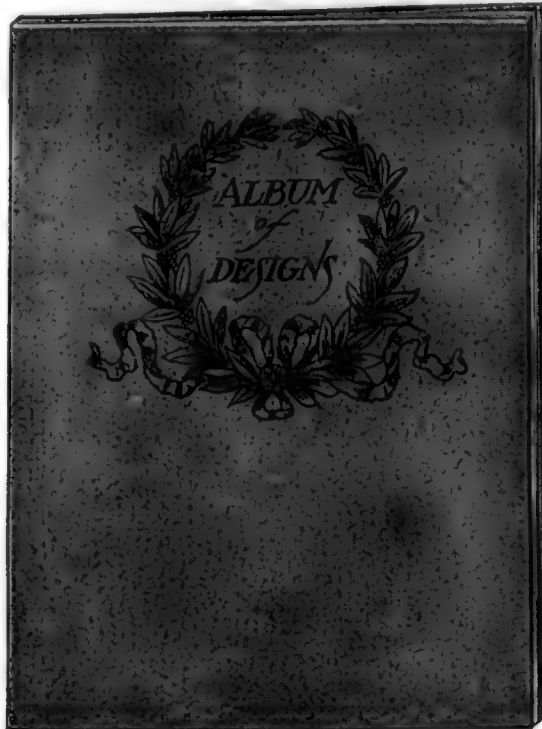

Geny Bros. retain the old range at North Nashville, awaiting a rise in real estate values. In the meantime, ferns galore flourish there. The new range at West Nashville is in excellent shape. Large quantities of lilies are carried in cold storage. It has been discovered that giganteum forces better after having been stored for a while, even for early use.

The craft at Louisville, Ky., is making autumnal displays, all the windows being attractive. Jacob Schulz has blooming cattleyas in pots, together with Oncidium varicosum. Mrs. C. B. Thompson reports much funeral work.

F. Walker & Co., William Walker and F. Haupt were busy with decorations.

John Karsten, of Chattanooga, Tenn., has discovered that it does not pay to grow the earliest mums. For second early he has Eaton, Dolly Dimple, Chadwick, Roman Gold and Appleton. Chieftain he considers the finest incurved shell-pink mum. Business is picking up, but it has been quiet for some time.

ing fine showings of mums. They report good sales.

William Blackman & Sons, of Evansville, Ind., occupy a unique position in the profession, with four generations of growers, present and prospective. The founder is approaching the eightieth milestone and while not so active as in the past, his mind is fully alert. To spend a few minutes in his company is of pleasure and profit. The founder handed the reins over to his son, George, who has developed the business to its present satisfactory condition, being ably assisted in turn by his son, Walter, who will in his turn be assisted by the young man whose name I failed to obtain, but who will doubtless prove to be a chip from the original block.

The Lawrence Floral Co., of Atlanta, finds a good sale for pompons in small baskets, as centerpieces. Large blooms in large baskets for presentations are selling lively. Walter Lawrence had just returned from his cotton plantation and said it paid him to give his best attention to that, considering the present price cotton is bringing.

Wachendorff Bros., of Atlanta, were busy judging the mums exhibited by several leading Atlanta amateurs, at Inman park. By good judgment they manage to please all interested, as is evinced by the annual call for their services as judges. They have a pret-

The Market.

Trade has been about all that could be expected during the last two weeks. Stock has been quite plentiful, with mums in the front rank. The supply of mums has been heavy, but the florists have been worked up so that there has been no great surplus at any time. Bonnaillon is fine, both in white and yellow, and is really the best seller on the market. Some good Rager, Enguehard, Blackhawk, Roman Gold, Maud Dean, etc., are to be seen. There have been a few Chadwick cut, but it will be a week or so before it comes in. Chadwicks are not going to be so large as they usually are. Roses are arriving nicely and meet with a demand about equal to the supply. Beauties have been rather scarce and the demand for them has been light.

Carnations are more plentiful and their quality is improving. Violets are moving better and some good stock is to be had of both single and double varieties. The demand for valley has kept the supply down and there has been no surplus. Some good cyclamens, primroses, begonias and a few good potted mums are to be seen. The demand for these is fair.

Various Notes.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has a fine lot of roses and carnations coming into crop.

The Art Floral Co. is making a nice display of mums and the sales for them are increasing.

The Columbus Floral Co. is cutting heavily of mums and is disposing of them easily.

Sherman Stephens has been busy with funeral work and has had many orders for mums. Mr. Stephens is on the job most of the time and is regaining his strength by degrees.

The Market.

A fair volume of business was done last week. In spite of the increased supply of mums, there was no surplus at the close of business Saturday.
Mums are now in heavy supply and prices for them are only fair. There was rather a larger quantity of white than was needed, but other colors sold well. Roses are not in as heavy a crop as usual, nor is the demand for them heavy. The same may be said of carnations. Violets have been selling well; the doubles are arriving in better quality, as the weather becomes cooler. Valley is overplentiful and is moving slowly. The green supply still is heavy and it is hard to move all that finds it way to the markets. Pompon mums are selling slowly even at low prices. The large quantities of outside stock cut into the market of the better kinds.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, November 8, was the best attended and most interesting held for some time. The main topic of discussion was the flower show, which will be held in conjunction with the Maryland Week exhibition at the flower exhibit expressed its disappointment at the delay of exhibitors in sending in their entries. The club decided to appropriate $100 toward defraying the expenses of the exhibit.

Many new members were enrolled for the Maryland Horticultural Society, under whose auspices the show will be held.

It was reported that Henry Hess, a retired florist and a member of the club, had died since the last meeting.
Two of the new roses being introduced by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., namely Red Radiance and Mrs. W. R. Hearst, were on exhibition through the local branch of the S. S.
Pennock-Meehan Co.

Various Notes.

Thomas and Edward Stevenson, of Towson, recently spent several days in the vicinity of Philadelphia, visiting some of the rose growers there.

Samuel Feast & Sons have purchased a new auto truck and are having a specially designed body built thereon.
They intend to use the machine for service between the greenhouses and the city store.

P. B. Welsh has a fine lot of Asparagus plumosus and smilax at his Glen Morris greenhouses. Much of his stock is shipped regularly to the S. S. Pen-nock-Meehan Co., at Washington.

Charles Siegwart is cutting fine blooms of William Turner mums. In addition to being a successful mum grower, he has had great success in handling carnations and cattleyas.

The Market.

The cut flower market during all of last week showed an immense cut of seasonable stock. To say the market was crowded would be putting it mild-also a good rain. Prices on all stock were greatly reduced, and, outside of mums and sweet peas, the retailer could almost name his own price in big lots. As chrysanthemums are the popular flowers at present, the trade bought quite heavily of these, at prices ranging from $4 to $25 per hundred. Extra fine Bonnaffon, Turner and Appleton are now seen daily. This demand for mums caused a great depression on other stock. Roses are plentiful in all grades, but find few buyers. Fine Russell, Hadley, Ward and Kaiserin abound, and to quote correct prices on these would be a hard proposition.

Carnations are a glut in all varieties and, as prices are low on fancy stock, the ordinary ones are being dumped.
Violets also are wasted for lack of demand. The warm weather has killed their quality. Sweet peas, valley and lilies share in the demand for mums and hold their price. Some extra good cosmos is coming in, but experiences little demand, if any. All greens are in demand and hold their prices.

bulbs has been finished. Rain is badly needed.

Charles Beyer is out with a delivery truck of attractive appearance. The large show house on Grand avenue is filled with fine blooming plants.

Miss Julia Delway, until recently with the Springfield Seed Co., of Springfield, Mo., called last week and said she would remain in St. Louis.

Windler's Flowers, at 2300 South Grand avenue, attracted many last week by beautiful window displays. Red autumn leaves and yellow mums made a fine combination. Edward Guntly was the artist.

The special meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club, held November 4 at the store of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., was largely attended. The object of the meeting was to change the date of the regular meeting from November 11 to November 18, and this was so decided. The next meeting will be held on that date, in the lecture room at the Missouri Botanical Garden. This meeting should be largely attended by the members, as the flower show will be in full swing and will be viewed after the meeting. Regular notices will be sent by the secretary.

Oliver K. Sanders, manager of the Sanders Nurseries, on Clara avenue, says the large supplies of cut mums that come in from their Henley road greenhouses are of extra fine quality, and that business has been extraordinarily good this season.

The Riessen Floral Co. store, on Broadway, experienced a busy week in funeral pieces of large size, with several orders to telegraph to eastern towns. Mrs. Buechel says they are much pleased with the business so far this season.

Henry Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., reports trade as being good in all branches, especially in funeral work.

A large number of suburban florists visited the wholesale district last week. Among those seen were J. F. Ammann, E. W. Guy, George Madsen, Edwin Denker, W. J. Pilcher, A. The Market.

There has been a decided slump in business since my last report. Chrysanthemums have reached their flood tide and the inevitable result, an annual affair and one always expected, need not be dilated upon. A great many mediocre and poor mums have appeared and these are sold cheaply. Good flowers of Chieftain, Eaton, Bonaffon, Rager, etc., bring good prices, but the retail demand has not been sufficient to take care of the increased supplies. Roses have had a somewhat hard week and have been cleaned up with difficulty at low prices. While the Killarneys have slumped the most, all varieties have suffered. Carnations are in even a worse position than roses. A few fancies have made $3 and $4 per hundred, but far the greater portion go at $1 and $1.50. The quality for the season is splendid.

Violets are abundant and sell cheaply. Valley is also much lower, with a weak demand. Lilies have declined with the rest. Yellow marguerites sell quite well, but they are not yet abundant. Sweet peas go slowly; so do callas and all snapdragons but pink ones. Quantities of good pansies are coming in. Cattleya labiata is in good supply, but the demand is weak. There is a good supply of other orchids. Gardenias are good and sell better than cattleyas. Demand for green stock has not been robust.

Boston Bowlers' Scores.

The result of the games in the bowling league contests November 4 were as follows:

Galvin's	1337	Robinson's	1214
Carbone's	1234	Zinn's	1185
Flower Exchange	1267	Coöperative Mkt.	1330
Pansies	1232	McAlpine & McD'd.	1216

The highest single strong was Aronson, 107, and 308 was the top three-strong score.

Various Notes.

The fall show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, just closed, was one of the most successful shows ever held in Boston. It was especially pleasing to see how the commercial men came out, while the retailers of prominence in the city were nearly all represented. People have had a surfeit of big blooms and big plants, but they still love chrysanthemums.

A. M. Davenport made an enviable record for himself at the Boston show. His Mrs. Heal begonias created something of a sensation. This is not at all a new variety, having been popular in Great Britain for years, but it is uncommon here still. Mr. Davenport says it propagates from leaves as easily as Cincinnati, while its brilliant color places it away ahead of all the smaller-flowered pink varieties. This is bound to become a popular market sort here, and there are quite a number of other fine varieties of this type.

Andrew Christensen says that Matchless and White Enchantress carnations are good with him, but he still finds more money in the old Queen. Pink Delight, Alice and Mrs. Ward are all good.

A bowling league has been formed at Carbone's, comprising both the wholesale and retail departments. Play will commence this week at the Castle Square alleys. Mr. Carbone will not be home from Europe until the end of the month, but importations of purchases made by him are coming in on practically every boat. For the wedding of Miss Bradley at All Saints church, November 6, the bride's bou-quet was of white orchids, the bridesmaids' bouquets of yellow oncidiums and the boutonnieres of gardenias.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, is cutting a fine lot of Chieftain, Pink Ivory, White Ivory, Savannah and Fairy Queen mums. Carnations are doing particularly well. The leaders are Peerless Pink, Beacon, Rosette and Enchantress.

The National Association of Gardeners will hold the next convention in Boston December 8 and 9. Boston has not previously had a convention of this kind and great interest is being manifested in the coming one. Many visitors from a distance are expected and entertainment plans are already under way.

R. T. McGorum's roses and mums are now being handled by B. J. McGinty

Farland is selling his flowers through ing season and are well equipped to care for it.

F. H. Houghton and Samuel Kravatz have withdrawn from the Houghton-Gorney Co. and will open a store elsewhere shortly. Melrose is being considered as a likely location.

The Budlong Rose Co. is receiving some splendid Charles Rager, Bonnaffon and Eaton mums. Mock, Stanley, Ophelia and Killarney Brilliant are noteworthy among their roses.

Wax Bros. report business as good indeed. In October receipts were far ahead of the same month in any previous year. Wedding and funeral orders continue to come in freely.

The sympathy of both of the wholesale markets goes out to C. R. Dane, of Roxbury, a much esteemed retailer of long standing, who lost his wife at the age of 76 years, November 1.

F. W. Holbrow, of Brighton, is cutting some nice Bouvardia Humboldtii, which meets with a quick sale. His Bonnaffon mums came in season this week.

Geo. H. Noyes is receiving from S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, extra fine Alice, Beacon, Pink Delight and Matchless carnations.

Edward Stout has left the employ of the Boston Rose Co., a firm dealing exclusively in roses.

The season has been an abnormally mild one to date. November 8 there were still many tender flowers blooming outdoors. With the exception of November 5, the skies have been clear and we have had none of the usual gloominess which is considered peculiar to this month.

At Penn's business continues good.
Violets are now being heavily featured.
Work is steadily progressing on the new store alterations at 124 Tremont street.

Local bulb dealers are cleared out of many kinds of bulbs. Cottage and Darwin tulips have proved to be the leaders. The season has been a successful one. Local nursery firms all report a fine volume of business. People are gradually coming to appreciate the fact that the majority of trees, shrubs and perennials are much better if planted in the fall than in the spring.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club this month is postponed until November 23. W. N. C.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

AMONG other shortages claiming the attention of quite a few seedsmen is that of well berried Delaware holly.

CARTER'S TESTED SEEDS, INC., of London, England, has established a Chicago agency with A. L. Berry & Co., 230 South La Salle street. J. Fisher has charge of the seed department.

THE seed trade within the week has received the wholesale catalogue of a world-famous seed grower at Quedlinburg, Germany, bound in special cover bearing the name and address of a Hollander.

THE imports of European seeds will not be cut off, but they seem almost certain to be reduced, particularly those of known pedigree. It will not mean a seed famine, but it justifies good prices for reliable stock.

J. W. MACHIN, doing business as the Wamego Seed House, Wamego, Kan., has complained to the Interstate Commerce Commission against the rates of the Union Pacific railroad on corn from Valley, Neb., to Wamego, Frankfort, Manhattan and Emmett, Kan., and asks for a refund of $233 on recent shipments.

SEED corn in Iowa has made excellent progress in the last few weeks of unusually favorable weather and is out of danger, but Iowa seedsmen declined to be alarmed at the danger of frost, one of them stating that "in any case, we would have plenty of old corn to fall back on. The country here is full of old corn of first-class quality and if the worst comes to worst, we can use that for seed."

THE press agencies last week sent out from San Francisco a neat little story beginning: "When Mrs. Grace G. Cutler, a comely widow living at the Hotel Court, dared Howard Patrick, a wealthy seedsman of Kansas City, to accompany her to the top of the Tower of Jewels yesterday, she reckoned not with Patrick's daring, for before the couple had descended to the ground Patrick himself had made a dare that resulted in their marriage at the topmost balcony of the tower." It is said they had been engaged for some time.

THE MICHIGAN BEAN CROP.

Wet weather may have affected the Michigan bean crop more than $8,000,000, according to Professor V. M. Shoemith, of the State Agricultural College. "The crop will probably not be more than thirty to thirty-five per cent normal," he is quoted as saying, "and as the crop is usually worth $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, you can figure out the loss for yourself. tion of the state seems to have escaped the ravages of the dread diseases, anthracnose and blight, which are caused primarily by wet weather. The loss will be heaviest in the Thumb region, the principal bean section. Beans are sure to be high next winter."

DANISH VALLEY.

Because a part of the valley pips shipped from Denmark always have been of German origin, it is difficult to determine exactly how many pips are grown in Denmark or how many actual Danish pips are brought to America. The best available information, however, indicates that about 11,000,000 Danish pips were exported to the United States last year, of these between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 by one shipper, who also is a grower and buyer. The Danish crop this year is about the same size as last year, but probably English demand for the guaranteed Danish article will be rather stronger than usual, so the countries at war with Germany may be rather strong competitors of the United States for it. The keenness with which the Danish exporters are seeking orders in this country (a fortnight ago one agent claimed to have booked orders between New York and Chicago for 6,000,000 Danish pips) leads to the belief that the Danes are counting on filling them in considerable part with German pips masquerading as of Danish origin. It is well known that moderate quantities of German goods of all kinds are getting past the English blockade, via both Rotterdam and Danish ports, but how far it can be worked with such a typically German article as valley pips remains to be seen.

Incidentally, pips that were sold at $10.50 and $11 f. o. b. Copenhagen last year, now are quoted at $12 per thousand.

BULB SHIPMENTS SLACKENING.

Consignments of Dutch bulbs are slackening, as the end of the season draws near, and the small shipments which reached New York October 31, on board the steamers Rotterdam and Westerdyk, are probably the last importations of the 1915 crop. The total number of cases of Dutch bulbs received this season, to date, as given in the New York manifests of Dutch steamers, is 33,420, which is about 500 cases less than the 1914 imports through the port of New York, approximately 34,000 cases. This year's imports, however, include the Canadian imports of Dutch bulbs, which have come through the United States because of the great reduction in ocean carriers to Canadian seaports.

The consignments on board the steamers Rotterdam and Westerdyk, as listed in the manifests on file at the New York custom house, were as follows:

twenty-four samples, which represent some 40,000 bushels, and which, from a careful test, they find as follows:

Leaming, 17 ears dead; 2 ears alive.
Iowa Gold Mine, 22 ears dead; 6 ears alive.
White Cap Yellow Dent, 18 ears dead; 3 ears alive.
Pride of the North, 17 ears dead; 4 ears alive.
Early Butler Yellow Dent, 14 ears dead; 6 ears alive.
Champion White Pearl, 18 ears dead; 1 ear alive.
Tait's White Dent, 11 ears dead; 13 ears alive.
Huron Early Dent, 3 ears dead; 20 ears alive.
Reid's Yellow Dent, 15 ears dead; 3 ears alive.

Of course these crops had to be refused. In the section where this corn was grown, they had not only a frost, but a freeze, about a month ago. This freeze caught the corn while in the dough; therefore it was not sufficiently hard to stand the freeze. Their crops grown for them farther north, along the shore of Lake Erie, were more fortunate, as, while they had frosts there, the frost was not nearly so severe as in Paulding county.

FREIGHT RATE ON ONION SETS.

Northrup, King & Co., seedsmen of Minneapolis, have filed a complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission against the advance by the Chicago & Northwestern and other roads of the class rate on onion sets in baskets, from the third-class to the first-class freight rating, which means an increase in the rate. Heretofore the same rate applied on onion sets in baskets as in bags, boxes, barrels or crates. It is charged that the proposed first-class rate on onion sets in baskets is unreasonable. The railroads were petitioned in opposition to the new rating, but said that the first-class rate was justified because a basket was not considered as good a container as a crate. Northrup, King & Co. had considerable correspondence with the railroads, but their request that the third-class rating be retained was denied and then complaint was made to the commission at Washington, D. C.

It is pointed out in the petition that baskets in which onion sets are shipped are easily handled, because they are equipped with handles and are constructed of wood the fiber of which is tough and rigid, and because the cover is attached to the basket by four stout wire fasteners which are securely fashas always been and always will be Easter Lilies. It is the most appropriate article you can offer your trade at Easter time. They will give more satisfaction than than at any other time; and they are the most profitable plants you can handle. You should have plants suitable for all pocketbooks. The best all-around size for you is the 7/9 Giganteum. This size in Horseshoe Brand bulbs affords from three to seven flowers per plant. They cost only $15 per case of 300 bulbs and will prove very profitable to you when Easter comes. The profit you can make is large in percentage, and in extent is only limited by your ability to market quantities. It always pays to have some over rather than not enough, so have plenty of Easter lilies in the spring, for the 1916 Easter will be one of the best florists have seen in a long while. If you grow them yourself, be sure and get Horseshoe Brand Giganteum, because they are the best bulbs you can get and it don't pay to grow any other kind. Easter comes late—April 23rd, in 1916—and there is plenty of time yet to plant Giganteum this year. Prices for fresh crop Horseshoe Brand Giganteum as follows:

tened to the cover and to the basket proper, making it impossible for the basket to be opened without an implement for that purpose. The basket is also reinforced inside and equipped with a specially strong top or cover. "It certainly cannot be broken in the ordinary method of transporting to and from depots and in and out of cars without being subjected to unusually rough handling," says the complaint. "The possibilities for loss and damage to the contents of a container of this kind are practically nil. The average crate is constructed of pine boxwood, one-quarter of an inch or less in thickness, and this cheaper grade of wood is more apt to crack or break with rough handling. It is more or less of a temptation to freight handlers to throw the crates about, as they are not equipped with handles.

"Since the change in classification," the petition continues, "the complainants have shipped many hundreds of bushels of onion sets, and where there have been a great number of serious complaints of loss and damage in transit with regard to shipments in crates, the number of similar complaints with regard to shipments packed in baskets are not worth mentioning in comparison. Also, from an economical standpoint, shipping in crates entails an entirely useless waste of material, the crates being worthless for anything but kindling after unpacking, while the basket has a multiplicity of uses. The cost and weight of the two containers are practically the same. Complainants' shipments since the change in rating have reached over 400,000 bushels, distributed over the northwest, a large part of which business was developed by their method of shipping in baskets prior to the change in rating. It would be in every way desirable, from the railroad standpoint, to increase rather than curtail this trade.

"The placing of a first-class rating against onion sets in baskets will result in the discontinuance of the shipments in that kind of a container and increase the crate shipments, which does not work to the mutual benefit of the complainant and defendant," concludes the petition. "It is a matter of great concern to the complainants, as it vitally affects the development of an important branch of their business." The commission is asked to establish the third-class rating on onion sets in baskets, or, if not, to make the third-class rating subject to meeting certain requirements as to the construction and durability of the baskets. PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The wholesalers say that the shipping business has been unusually good, but that local demand has slackened. This probably is not chargeable to business generally, but to the fact that local growers have been long on certain grades of stock. Taken generally, this indicates a better tone. In speaking of the out-of-town trade, it is encouraging to find that florists at a distance are getting more and more into the habit of depending on Los Angeles. The stock grown here is excellent in every way; the wholesalers are shipping along the most up-to-date lines and the old order of taking all the traffic will bear is changing for the better.

Regarding the stock offered on the market, there still are large quantities of mums of first quality, and pompons are plentiful. The sprays of Japanese varieties do not cut much of a figure except as fillers in funeral work. Roses are plentiful and of good quality, the decline of the outdoor crop helping the sale of the indoor stock. Carnations of good quality are not any too plentiful. Dahlias are practically over and the cool nights are causing a reduction in the cut of centaureas. Most of the lily of the valley comes from the north now, but the stock from our local growers is fine in every way. Orchids are scarce and the demand for them is not great. A few early sweet peas and myosotis in the smaller items are useful, while the pretty yellow rose, George Elger, helps out the scarcity in Cecile Brunner. The name Yellow Cecile Brunner is a misnomer, but this charming little rose is welcome under any name. Irish Elegance and Irish Fireflame are among the novelties for which the demand is increasing.

Various Notes.

S. Murata & Co. are shipping many lath house carnations, the quality being of the finest. Mr. Murata is well pleased with the way business has started and looks forward to a big season.

Paul Miller, of the L. A. Floral Co., has been away from the store for several days, suffering from a carbuncle on his arm.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held November 2, at Kruckeberg's hall. The attendance was good. The subject for the evening was "Dahlias," Z. H. Sherart being the speaker. Mr. Sherart began with an interesting history of the dahlia and passed easily to cultural matters, nomenclature and other points. He showed a close knowledge of his subject. Nomination of officers was commenced, but as there had been no notice of this given, the nomination was postponed to the December meeting, on motion of Jas. Grant.

Darling's Flower Shop reports a large increase in business for October over that of October of a year ago.

We feel that we are getting good results from the advertising we are doing in The Review to increase our shipping trade, and we shall use more of your space as we get into position to go a little stronger with it.

L. A. FLORAL CO.,

By Fred Sperry.

Los Angeles, Cal.,
Oct. 25, 1915.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., has had to take another course at Murrietta springs for rheumatism. He has returned feeling much better but still suffering some.

The Sierra Madre flower show opened November 4 and an excellent lot of flowers were exhibited. The cut chrysanthemums were exceptionally good, competition being strong among local growers. Mrs. French, of Pasadena, showed a magnificent lot of blooms, including many novelties and the best of the popular kinds. The staging of the exhibits was under the direction of W. W. Felgate and Mrs. J. H. Wright, and the arrangement of the entries was excellent, the judges being able to carry out their work easily. This is quite the exception at these smaller shows. Miss Sadie Thomas, of Pasadena, had a good showing of mums. The judges were W. Shield, H. R. Richards and W. W. Felgate.

Among the funeral pieces carried out by Frank Lichtenberg last week was a pall containing violets and George Elger roses, an exquisite combination.

John Morley, superintendent of parks of San Diego, and D. MacRorie, of San Francisco, were among the visitors last week. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is better, some of the florists having quite a rush of funeral work. A sprinkle of rain November 4 settled the dust and made things look more like fall, adding the little touch that will greatly help the violets. Those who hoped for a storm to curtail the flood of mums were disappointed. The violets were already fine, especially Princess and Giant, with good color and unusually long stems.

The shipping business in violets has been active, with larger and more orders every day. In this way the cut is easily disposed of. Chrysanthemums also are shipped out in large quantities, going all over the country. The present cut, however, exceeds the demand and prices are painfully low for such fine stock. The early varieties still are in full crop and most of the later ones are arriving in good shape. This condition promises to last well into the month unless heavy storms come. Bonaffon keeps all its old popularity, Hunter is much in evidence and fine Nonin mums are appearing. Pompons are moving almost by the ton, but large sales hardly make an impression on the supply of outdoor mums in the Chinese market. Only a few scattering lots of dahlias and gladioli were seen last week, but there still is plenty of cosmos, mignonette and other summer stock.

Carnations are becoming plentiful and good, but move slowly. Some of the larger growers are bringing in a fine cut of roses, good, clean stock, with fine foliage and blooms. Beauties still are held back, but Russell and Shawyer are fine and find a good sale. Cecile Brunner roses are of high quality. Valley and cold-storage lilies are rather scarce. There are enough cattleyas to fill all requirements. Shipments of greens are large. Sprays with glossy leaves, red bark and berries are popular and give a hint of Christmas. Cyclamen plants are unusually good and in fair supply. Small chrysanthemums and potted ferns are in large demand.

Ladies' Auxiliary Entertains.

October 28 the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society gave a reception at Red Men's hall, on which occasion the members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society were guests. The reception was a most enjoyable affair, the attendance of about forty, most of them well acquainted, being just enough to make a pleasant party. The evening was spent in part at cards and dancing, and a number of musical selections, given by friends of the members, were highly appreciated. The winner of the whist contest was Mrs. Rose, who was presented with a handsome vase.

Menlo Park Flower Show.

The annual fall flower show of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society, held in the Menlo Park school building, followed closely the show in San Francisco, beginning October 29 and closing October 31. The attendance was rather light and the exhibits covered hardly as great a scope as those of the San Francisco show. Everything was well staged and the chrysanthemum exhibits were about as good—in fact, some say better than those at the San Francisco show. There was a good showing of greens, many of the commercial growers, nurserymen and amateurs of San Mateo county and San Francisco taking part. The committee in charge consisted of D. Bassett, J. M. Daley, G. Nunn, P. Ellings and D. W. Dale. Among the most notable exhibits of mums were those of the Lynch Nursery Co. and Henry Goertzahn. The latter has been making a great hit with some new bronze mums.

Various Notes.

Mark Ebel, the Sacramento florist, spent a few days in San Francisco last week. He says things are quiet at Sacramento, where a good rain is needed to start the regular fall activity. Mr. Ebel has been attracting a great deal of attention by exhibiting in his windows a large collection of the prize-winning chrysanthemums from the Lynch Nursery Co., of Menlo Park.

Charles Navlet, of San Jose, on one of his recent visits remarked that business at his home establishment is keeping far ahead of last year, while sales at the San Francisco branch, in the Emporium, surpass those of last year by over 100 per cent. He attributes this largely to his good luck in getting a large proportion of his Dutch bulbs through, as the bulb sales have been exceptionally heavy. He is also doing unusually well with California bulbs.

C. Kooyman got all his Dutch bulbs in late last month and has shipped practically all of them. He reports a demand in excess of the supply.

For several weeks the E. W. McLellan Co. has been making heavy shipments, consisting of a considerable variety of stock, to points all over the west and some points in the eastern states. The great bulk of the shipments consists of mums, but many orders are received every day for violets, Cecile Brunner roses and greens, all of which are in excellent shape to ship. A popular item Domoto Bros. are bringing in good cyclamen plants and will have more in a few weeks, when an improved market is expected. They report the receipt of several shipments of unusually fine Japanese bulbs, including Lilium rubrum, L. album, L. auratum and L. longiflorum. They expect a large stock of plants for winter within the next month or so.

David Lichtenstein and Herbert Blumenthal, who have been conducting the Terminal Florist Co., at 7 Embarcadero, opposite the Ferry station, have dissolved partnership. The business will be carried on by Mr. Lichtenstein alone.

Louis Motroni, who recently opened on Fillmore street, near Sutter, says business is showing more life now that the holidays are approaching and he thinks trade will be better after the exposition closes, though he has been getting many orders from some of the exhibitors.

The Market.

The volume of sales last week was considerably greater than that of the first week of November last year. Still, the expectations engendered by the good business of October have not been fully realized. The slackening has been general in Portland and the calls from outside points have decreased. So far, there has been no waste to speak of, but supplies of carnations and mums are increasing and they will be in oversupply unless business becomes better. In mums, William Turner and Bonnaffon are leaders. Only a few flowers are coming from California. The cut of violets, both single and double, is heavy and the quality of the blooms is the finest ever seen. The cut of roses has decreased on account of several rainy days. Nurserymen are rushed with orders and are lifting and shipping stock.

Various Notes.

F. E. B. West has sold his interest in the Agricultural Chemical Co. to R. McKay and Peter McIntosh, and has returned to England. The office of the company has been moved to the factory, at 80 North Tenth street. E. S. Streeter has charge of the laboratory. The Halloween display of Clarke Bros. attracted a good deal of attention. The window represented a rural scene with a large scarecrow, shocks of corn and farm animals. Several figures and vehicles well known in the comic supplements were in the foreground. The entire display was worked out with farm products in an ingenious manner by F. V. Sanders, of the store force.

A new flower store was opened November 5 at 148 Fourth street, by Henry Clemmens, Florist, a corporation. C. R. Langstaff and Henry Clemmens are the managers. In the window were some fine William Turner mums and greenhouse sweet peas, grown by Mrs. Henry Kahn.

John Holden is manager of the Holden Floral Co., which is operating the Sibson range of glass and part of the outdoor area. Mr. Holden takes personal charge of the carnation houses and has a foreman in charge of the pot plant section. The carnation plants show excellent foliage and are beginning to produce. He grows Enchantress Supreme, Matchless, which he favors as a white variety; Gorgeous, The Herald, White Wonder, Champion, Mrs. Akehurst and Philadelphia. One house is filled with Cincinnati and Melior begonias, in 6-inch to 8-inch pots; one house with Lorraine begonias in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, and Adiantum Croweanum; one house has potted and benched poinsettias; two houses have mums, from which Bonnaffon, Turner, Naomah and Elberon are now being cut. One house is stocked with primulas and cyclamens. Among the begonias was a lot of Mrs. J. A. Peterson, and a lot of a sport which Mr. Holden thinks promising. The whole range is kept in excellent order and all the stock shows evidence of careful culture. Considerable outside ground is set to delphiniums and gaillardias. Early mums were grown under cheese-cloth. Mr. Holden takes special pleasure in showing his houses of begonias and poinsettias, which are unusually good.

The Market.

There are probably more flowers on display in the florists' windows at present than there have been at any time this year. Business is taking an upward turn, after a protracted quiet spell. Chrysanthemums are here in endless variety and are the flowers most in demand. There are more of the single and pompon kinds in the stores than in former years, but while they have a grace and charm all their own, the older, larger-flowered varieties still are in popular favor. Many of the blooms are being imported from California and, as far as quality goes, they leave little to be desired, while their keeping qualities are fully as good as locally-grown flowers. It looks as if the local growers were not attempting to grow such good mums as formerly and, with the southern, outdoor-grown flowers to compete with, probably there is some justification for their abandoning efforts in this direction. Carnations are now of first quality and are arriving on the market in liberal quantities. Some of the larger stores are, however, advertising them at 25 cents per dozen, so that it is a difficult matter for grower and retailer to secure any remuneration from their culture or sale of carnations. Roses are plentiful and the local stock is of better quality than usual from now until Thanksgiving. The local supply of roses should be fully up to the demand. Probably after Thanksgiving the stores will have to depend on imported roses. California violets are here and are being advertised at 10 cents per large bunch. Possibly the absence of that most desirable adjunct to a violet, its perfume, makes this price about the true value. There are no local violets, consequently persons with discriminating tastes do not make use of the imported ones.

There still are quantities of fine dahlias selling and this season more of the really useful decorative varieties are being sent in, so that the demand for them has been and continues good.

site the site of her old store on Second avenue. This time she has a corner on Marion street. From the start, the wisdom of the move has been abundantly proved and, while not losing any of her former clientele, the management declares business is far better at the new place.

Rosaia Bros. have been having a dahlia show in their new store at Third and Madison streets. It proves much for the mildness of our climate when a constant supply of superior blooms can be kept up at this season. Judging by the large concourse of visitors and the interest shown in the new varieties of dahlias displayed, the dahlia is fast becoming one of our most popular flowers.

Felix Rosaia, of the Orpheum Floral Co., has always a fine showing of good flowers and says he finds business improving. Visitors from the east have been heard to state that all the business is in the west, founding their judgment on the lavish expenditure on new stores during the last few months.

The Hollywood Gardens are getting a good share of business and C. E. Sullivan, the manager, is reaching out for more of the popular trade than in former years, when few but the upper ten were doing business at this store. Growing most of their own flowers, they are probably better situated to cater to the trade than are some of their competitors.

The Paris Store is now under entirely new management and Montreal Christensen, who is in charge, is finding business good. Improvements in arrangements, lighting, etc., are being planned.

As Frank Chercenka, foreman at the Thomas greenhouse, of Rosaia Bros., John Karleck, another of the employees, Mrs. Chercenka and P. F. Rosaia were going to the greenhouses from the interurban train on the night of October 30, they were held up by two highwaymen. Messrs. Chercenka and Karleck put up a desperate fight, but, being unprepared and unarmed, they were forced to give up their money and valuables. During the struggle Mr. Chercenka was shot. Fortunately, a Sunday paper in his pocket deflected the bullet and he was not seriously wounded. The highwaymen made good their escape.

Under the management of the Seattle Florists' Club, a florists' information bureau has been inaugurated at the manufacturers' exhibit in the Stuart building, the object being to place the possible purchaser of flowers or other greenhouse produce quickly in touch with the producer. Miss Fowler, well known to the trade here, has assumed management. It is hoped this institution will receive, as it deserves, the support of everyone in the business. All florists in the state are invited to participate in the benefits. The telephone number is Elliott 2681.

J. W. Lewis, of Brighton Beach, has recently installed an automatic feeder to his boiler. This apparatus automatically conveys the coal to the furnace, stirs the fire and ejects the refuse and, to all appearances, is an ideal arrangement for a moderate-sized range.

T. W.

Monticello, Ind.—J. C. Shield has been developing seedling chrysanthemums of the anemone and semi-double type and has some good things in a variety of colors.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

It is current comment in the nursery trade that the business in ornamentals, and in landscape work, for 1915 shows up far better, comparatively, than does the business done with apple, peach and other big sellers.

JOHN C. CHASE, of the Benjamin Chase Co., Derry, N. H., who has been at Coronado, near San Diego, Cal., since June, has added nearly forty pounds since his illness of last spring. He will return to New Hampshire in a few weeks.

ALL property of the Alvin Japanese Nursery Co., of Houston, Tex., including an orchard at Alvin, Tex., has been ordered sold by the Eleventh District court, on application of the receiver, Paul W. Joplin. The assets include crops valued at $23,500.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed by the Glassacres Gardens & Nursery Co., of Sioux City, Ia., growers and dealers in trees, shrubs and plants. The capitalization is $20,000. The officers are: President and treasurer, J. L. Hanchetti; vice-president, J. Kroonemeyer; secretary, A. F. Hanchetti.

THE case of the Riverside Nursery Co., of Fulton, Ill., versus the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has been settled out of court. The railroad company, which was charged with having caused damage to nursery stock through delayed delivery, has paid the damages asked by the Riverside Nursery Co.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that the rates on nursery stock from Geneva, Dansville and Brighton, N. Y.; North Abington, Mass., and Dresher, Pa., and the rates on wooden tree labels, from Derry, N. H., to Lakeland, Minn., are unlawful because they exceed the rates in effect on like traffic from the same points to Stillwater, Minn. L. L. May & Co., engaged in the nursery business at St. Paul, complained against the rates.

THE Western Association of Nurserymen meets the second Wednesday of December at the Coates House in Kansas City, attracting many wholesale nurserymen from the east. It is hoped this year to secure at that time and place a fairly full meeting of those charged with working out the innovations provided for when the new constitution and by-laws of the American Association of Nurserymen were adopted at Detroit last June. Thus far no great progress has been made because of the widely scattered homes of the officers and committee members.

RUST ON CRATÆGUS.

Under separate cover I am sending some small branches of a scarlet hawthorn tree which is diseased. Please tell me what can be done to get the tree clean. L. G.—Wash.

The cratægus, or hawthorn, is badly affected with rust. If you have any plants of Juniperus Virginiana, the common red cedar, growing in proximity to your hawthorns, you are sure to have this disease, as the cedars act as host plants for the rust. Either plant the hawthorns away from this evergreen, or, if you have good hawthorns and want to retain them, cut down the cedars. I do not know of a full cure for this disease, but if you give your trees a thorough spraying of lime-sulphur when dormant, and sprayings of Bordeaux both before and after flowering, it will help a great deal. SOWING BARBERRY SEEDS.

Please let me know when and how to sow barberry seeds. D. K.—Mich.

Gather the fruit any time after it is ripe. Stratify in sand and sow in either fall or spring. The fall sowing insures a better germination. Sow either in coldframes or in prepared beds in the open. When sown outdoors, give a winter mulch. Seed sown in fall will germinate in early spring.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The weather last week was ideal for growing purposes, for there was sunshine every day and it was quite warm for this time of the year. Business has been good and the volume has increased materially. The supply of stock is large and no one is going short on having his orders filled. Despite the fact that there is a large cut, business has been sufficiently good to keep the market cleaned up at fair prices. Roses are coming in heavily and are in fine shape. Some exceptionally fine stock is to be had at reasonable prices and the cut is moving freely.

Chrysanthemums seem to be at their height. While this condition limits the sale of other stock to some extent, the prices have held up wonderfully and other stock has not suffered as much as it would have, had business not been so good.

Carnations are plentiful, but there is no glut on the market. Prices for them are good, considering the supply, and this stock is moving quite well. Fancy stock is bringing around $3 per hundred, and, of course, short stock is selling for somewhat less. The supply of violets is about equal to the demand, possibly because the demand is not so large as it might be. This stock has been backward this year and the quality has been somewhat off. From present indications, it is quite safe to predict a fine Thanksgiving trade and good stock in sufficient quantity to fill all orders.

Various Notes.

Guy W. French, superintendent of the Chicago Grand Floral Festival, was in town last week and attended the monthly meeting of the local florists' club, November 4.

William Rayner, of Oconomowoc, Wis., was in Milwaukee last week, combining business with pleasure.

Mrs. J. Freytag recently left on a trip through the west. She expects to be gone about three weeks and will take in many places of interest.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is cutting some Mrs. Wm. Turner mums that are exceptionally fine. H. V. Hunkel has bought a roadster, which he will use principally for trips to and from the two establishments of the Holton & Hunkel Co.

The address, entitled "The Garden City," with which C. B. Whitnall entertained the Florists' Club, at the meeting November 4, was interesting indeed. Mr. Whitnall's talk was forceful and full of wholesome truths. He spoke at length on the benefits accruing to humanity from garden spots in the manufacturing districts and advocated a garden for the working man, to be attended to during leisure hours. It is a regrettable fact that so few of the ladies attended this meeting.

The Market.

Trade has been only fair during the last week. The weather has been warm and unusually fine, which does not help the florists' business. Funeral work has also been slow. The bright weather for the last few weeks has had a tendency to bring a great deal of stock out ahead of time. Thousands of flowers that should have come two weeks hence are in full bloom. Prices of stock have suffered accordingly.

Mums are plentiful, with a fair demand. The numerous kinds of pompons are plentiful and find a good sale. Some first-class carnations are to be seen, prices ranging from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred, wholesale. Roses are plentiful at $3 to $10 per hundred, retailing at 75 cents to $3 per dozen. Beauties are unusually fine, retailing from $3 to $8 per dozen. Easter lilies are plentiful at $10 per hundred, retailing at 75 cents to $3 per dozen. Valley, orchids and single violets are plentiful, with a fair call.

Pot plants are in better demand, some first-class pot mums, cyclamens, primulas and the Lorraine type of begonias being available.

Various Notes.

Guy Reburn, with A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, is enjoying a good trade in Indianapolis this year. He has made Indianapolis twice in the last ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wiegand are attending the flower show in Cleveland this week.

The E. G. Hill Co. had a mum show at its store last week. Mr. Thomas deserves a great deal of credit for the taste used in the display. One of the attractions was a live model, which proved to be a handsome young lady, showing the latest effects in arm bouquets, corsages and ankle bouquets. This feature proved quite attractive.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Business continues in a healthy fashion, the demand for mums exceeding the supply and the prices ruling somewhat higher than last season. From what can be learned, the florists throughout the Dominion seem doomed to disappointment in connection with the prospect of azaleas for Christmas. The authorities at Ottawa are not inclined to take any chances, and the powers—of persuasion—that be have not been able to alter the decision of the government so far.

Various Notes.

E. Dale and J. E. Cooper are both attending the flower shows at Cleveland and Chicago this week, with other florists from Toronto.

The Dale greenhouses were thrown open to the public October 31, and as everything is looking particularly well, full advantage was taken by the flower lovers. Men continue to leave to join the new regiments forming. A. Ray and Charles Hotchkiss, from the mum section, were the latest to don the khaki.

Some of the wholesale growers in the vicinity were rather hard hit last week through the failure of one of the Toronto drug stores. A meeting of creditors was held November 5 to arrange matters. The firm was the first drug store in Hamilton to go into the cut flower business, and on moving headquarters to Toronto worked up a large trade. War and high rental altered conditions somewhat during the last twelve months, and creditors at the meeting decided to allow the firm an extension of time. W. G. P.

Knightstown, Ind.—The West View Greenhouses, owned until recently by Russell J. Richardson, have been sold to Elmer E. Holloway.

Racine, Wis.—Harry Benz, formerly of the flower department of the Boston Store, Milwaukee, is now associated with The Flower Shop.

ROBERT CRAIG CO., 4900 Market St., PHILADELPHIA

BRANCH: NORWOOD, PA.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business is improving almost daily, cut flowers being especially in demand, while pot plants are moving well. Indications are that the coming season is to be an active one.

Chrysanthemums, which have been on the short side up to a few days ago, are coming in lively and will be the leader from now until after Thanksgiving. Carnations, which have also been scarce, are beginning to come in fast enough to take care of such demand as there is, while roses are plentiful. Violets are in fine condition, but the demand will not be especially brisk until after the mums are gone. Prices are good all along the line.

Various Notes.

The Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, is shipping some fine mums to the Boston market. The company's crop of roses also is heavy.

George Johnson & Son had the landscape work for the small park in front of the new building of the Eagles, at Columbia square.

F. T. Remieres, Bristol, reports a heavy call for bulbs.

Charles Hunt is considering opening a retail store in the downtown section.

James Hay, of Potowomut, East Greenwich, recently finished a $1,000 order for shrubs, etc., for the estate of Charles Davol, North Kingston.

A fire broke out about midnight, November 2, in the greenhouse of Le Baron Bradford, Bristol. The woodwork was badly charred and Mr. Bradford estimates his loss at several hundred dollars. W. H. M.

RICHMOND, IND.

In my report on the outing at Richmond, published in The Review of November 4, I failed to mention Neumann & Thomas, who were visited during the day. This firm started only a year ago last summer. They have two large houses, devoted to roses. These they are doing in great shape and the prospects for a large cut of fancy stock during the coming winter are bright.

Mr. Neumann is a Richmond boy, having been connected with the establishments of the E. G. Hill Co., Chas. Knopf Floral Co. and Fred H. Lemon & Co. at different times. He is known as a successful rose grower. Mr. Thomas was not connected with the trade before the organization of this firm, but a lifelong friendship for Mr. Neumann, with a strong confidence in his ability as a grower, induced Mr. Thomas to throw in his fortunes with him.

The Market.

Business continues to improve, even though weather conditions are poor for the handling of stock. We have had summer heat here for nearly three weeks and the outdoor stock that escaped the one and only frost is growing and blooming. Chrysanthemums are coming with a rush, and varieties that should come at Thanksgiving are now in. If relief from this excessively warm weather does not come soon, the local supply of chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving will be much curtailed. Roses also show the effects of the weather; they are smaller than usual at this time. Carnations are improving steadily.

Business on All Souls' day was divided this year; one of the cemeteries celebrated the day October 31, the others, November 7. The weather was favorable for this, for it allowed everyone who desired to visit the cemeteries on these days. An immense business was done by those whose places of business are near the different cemeteries and those who make a practice of carrying stock out there to sell. Only the cheapest stock brought its value. Good stock would not bring the price that would be asked wholesale. This day does not help the principal stores much, for they do not handle the class of stock that is mostly wanted.

Various Notes.

The Nanz & Neuner Co. has been sued for $117, for damages done to a horse and wagon struck by the delivery automobile.

William Walker and his sons, Lee and David, of the William Walker Co., accompanied by Louis Kirch, left November 8 for a visit to Indianapolis, Richmond, Ind., and the big show at Chicago.

The Kentucky Society of Florists held its November meeting at the store of the secretary, November 3. Only routine business was transacted. The next meeting takes place December 1, at the greenhouses of A. Rasmussen, and is an important one, as the annual election of officers takes place.

John Schulz, aged 71 years, well known among the older of the local florists and a brother of Jacob Schulz, the dean of Louisville florists, died November 7.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

"Longer Wear— greatly increased economy" says Gasser Co., Cleveland

Gasser Co., Wholesale and Retail Florists, Cleveland, formerly used the ordinary type of hose, which lasted them, as a rule, but five or six weeks.

They decided that was poor economy.

So they purchased a quantity of

GOODRICH "GREENHOUSE" HOSE

It is still good after over six months of hard wear, dragging over cinder paths, around wooden corner posts, etc. Furthermore, their pressure is high and the men kink the hose to shut off the water.

This is but one case of longer wear. There are hundreds of others. Why bother with short-lived hose when you'll have less trouble and save money besides by ordering Goodrich "Greenhouse?" Send for sample and test it yourself!

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

TWO PLANS SUGGESTED.

Will you please tell me how to pipe an even-span greenhouse, 21x50? It runs north and south and is twelve feet high to the ridge. The walls are six feet high, with thirty-two inches of glass and the rest sheathing and siding. The house is exposed, except that half of the north gable is protected by a shed. I want a temperature between 50 and 60 degrees in zero weather. I shall heat with steam from the boiler that is to heat the residence. The greenhouse is ten feet from the residence, with which it is connected by a shed. Will you kindly tell me what size and quantity of pipe to use?

H. W.—Mich.

To heat the house described, I would suggest running a 2-inch supply or flow pipe through the house about three feet below the ridge, giving it a slight fall. Then drop it down to a point below the plate and connect it with two coils, one running in each direction to the corners of the house, and along the side walls back to the boiler end of the house, where they should connect with a 1½-inch pipe to carry the drip water back to the boiler. Each of the coils should have four 1¼-inch return pipes.

If raised benches are used in the houses and crops are to be grown for which bottom heat is desired, I would make a slight change in the arrangement of the return pipes. Instead of carrying the flow pipe to the extreme end of the house, at a point just beyond the ends of the benches put in a cross and carry a 1½-inch pipe each way, putting in a 1¼-inch tee looking down over the middle of each bench. Under each of the benches run two 1¼-inch returns, which should be united and connected with the tee at the farther end of the bench. Extend a 1½-inch pipe from the cross to the end of the house, and, after dropping down to the plate, connect with coils running on the walls back to the heater.

where and this is going to mean a clamorous demand for it later. Coal operators appreciate this fact and also the fact that car and labor supply will interfere with deliveries. They are not sacrificing their coal now in order to pass it on an unwilling market, but are holding it in reserve to get the better prices which are unavoidable."

As to smokeless coal in the Chicago market, it is said that "the situation is almost precisely the same as it was a week ago. That is, the major operators are holding for $1.40 for mine-run coal and are getting it. Some off-grade coal is on the market occasionally and this sells from $1.20 to $1.25. None of the better grades can be had at any such figure. Lump has been a little soft in the country, selling at $1.90 to $2. Egg, on the contrary, has been firm, selling from $2.10 to $2.25."

HOUSE ATTACHED TO PORCH.

I have built a small greenhouse and, being a beginner, do not know how many return pipes are needed to heat it to a temperature of 50 or 55 degrees. It is 16x24 and is sunk three and one-half feet below the ground level. It extends southward from a southwest porch and the porch is used as part of the greenhouse. It is entirely protected on the north. It is eleven and one-half feet high to the ridge. The walls are six feet high and contain two and one-half feet of glass; the rest of the walls is under the ground. The south gable is glass. The boiler will be in the cellar. I intend to run two 1½-inch flow pipes from the boiler, one on each wall at the eaves, and I wish to use 1¼-inch returns. Would four returns on each wall, under the benches, be sufficient? If placed on the walls instead of under the benches, how are they connected? A. K.—Neb.

In the house described, I would not care to risk less than two 1½-inch flows and twelve 1¼-inch returns, and if a temperature of 55 degrees is desired in the coldest weather, thirteen or fourteen returns would be safer, unless a mercury circulator is attached, in which case ten returns would answer. Unless a circulator is used, I would prefer 2-inch pipe for the flows and 1½-inch pipe for the returns. Two 2-inch flows and ten 1½-inch returns would give better results than two 1½-inch flows and twelve 1¼-inch returns, with an open system.

Various forms of pipe hooks and hangers are used for supporting the coils and are supplied by any of the greenhouse manufacturers whose advertisements appear in The Review. Short

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market. The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Foster Pressure Regulator CLASS "Q"

That's the class you want. Attach this simple device to the steam main just inside of your greenhouse and obtain the exact temperature desired by turning the adjusting nut "K" (see illustration) to the "right" for greater heat, to the "left" for less. At whatever pressure the valve is "set," the pressure at all times will be absolutely constant. Sizes $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch to 2-inch have composition bodies; larger sizes, to and including 10-inch, iron body, composition mounted.

As an expert in your line, let us talk it over, as experts in ours. We recommend, we aid you in the selection of the proper size, and should you require higher pressure than 15 lbs., the most suitable type of our other styles of Pressure Regulators would be recommended.

"The Foster Pressure Regulators which have been installed in our greenhouses are giving perfect satisfaction."
PETER REINBERG, Chicago.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Good business continued through last week. The weather has turned cooler and the oversupply of flowers has decreased. The cheaper grades of chrysanthemums are overplentiful, but in the better grades conditions are more favorable and better prices prevail. These have served to keep down the price and demand for Easter lilies. Valley is quite plentiful and can again be had at $4 per hundred. The supply of orchids is less heavy and fair prices prevail. Some excellent snapdragon was to be had during the week, but as yet the demand is light. The sale of both single and double violets has increased with the coming of cool weather.

Various Notes.

Less difficulty is being experienced by those who import plants from Belgium than was at first expected, according to Fred H. Kramer, who states that he is getting in all his plants and bulbs with but little, if any, delay. He has just received 2,622 azaleas.

Gude Bros. Co. has been awarded the silver loving cup for having had the finest display of flowers at the Maryland state fair. In addition to the cup, the company took away a dozen blue ribbons.

F. W. Taylor, of Denver, Colo., visited a number of the local establishments last week.

Mrs. J. A. Phillips has returned from an extended vacation spent at the Panama-Pacific and San Diego expositions as the guest of a local motion picture concern.

A jury in the District Supreme court last week brought in a verdict in favor of M. J. McCabe, who was defendant to a suit brought by the Merchants' Transfer & Storage Co. to recover $166.90 covering the value of four cases of bulbs, alleged to have been erroneously delivered to him.

A large display of chrysanthemums, roses, dahlias and snapdragons was made at the November meeting of the Florists' Club. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. had a fine lot of dahlias. A handsome vase of the Mrs. Moorfield Storey rose was shown by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. John Gutman made an excellent showing of snapdragon. Several vases of Ophelia were displayed by David J. Grillbortzer, of Alexandria. The exhibit of Gude Bros. Co. consisted of fine specimens of Lady Hillingdon, Francis Scott Key, Prince d'Arenberg, Mrs. Stanley, Wellesley and Fireflame roses.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business the last two weeks has been good. Stock of all kinds is plentiful. Chrysanthemums are in heavy supply and include large offerings in all colors and sizes. Roses also are plentiful and are sold at low prices. Carnations clear at a low figure. There was a large demand for yellow mums at Halloween. All of the stores were decorated for the event.

Various Notes.

A visit to the city greenhouses revealed everything in good shape, and I had the pleasure of meeting the grower, Mr. Houlton. Thousands of people visited the greenhouses November 8, when the annual chrysanthemum show was held. Several new varieties are seen this year, including the yellow Daily Mail and Lady Carmichael. The new, deep red carnation, Princess Dagmar, also was shown to advantage.

The New York Floral Co. reports a busy week. The display windows are attractively trimmed with chrysanthemums, roses and carnations. This company last week offered great bargains in flowers—roses at 2 cents each; carnations at 29 cents per dozen.

Baldwin reports a busy week with funeral pieces and counter trade. One of his Halloween windows was banked solidly with yellow mums, while the other had a dinner table of Halloween favors. The centerpiece was a large pumpkin filled with yellow pompon mums. Mr. Baldwin received his shipment of azaleas last week. He is cutting fine carnations and William Turner mums.

B. E. & J. T. Cokely report business as being good. J. T. Cokely has returned from a successful trip to western Pennsylvania and Ohio.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its annual meeting and election of officers November 5. The various annual reports were read and accepted. The officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz; vice-president, Eric H. Wetterlow; treasurer, John Jaffray; clerk, Leon W. Carter; librarian, P. A. Gilmore. The executive committee consists of A. E. Parsons, William Till, Herbert Shaw, James Salter and Axel Magnuson.

A vote of thanks was extended to Ernest Townsend for his display of chrysanthemums and to Mr. Warner for a collection of pansies.

The society recently has purchased a piece of land near the Manchester railroad station and intends to erect a horticultural hall there in the near future.

The next meeting of the society will be held November 19, at Lane's hall, School street, Manchester.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

There is a good demand for nearly all kinds of stock and the supply is sufficient. Beauties are always cleaned up and seem to stick to the close side. Other roses sell well, although the supply exceeds the demand. The newer varieties are always cleaned up at good prices. There are no indications of an accumulation of carnations. Single and double violets are available. Cattleyas are sufficient. Valley is somewhat scarce. Sweet peas have not made any impression. Chrysanthemums continue strong in all colors and sizes. Yellow is mostly called for at present and is somewhat scarce. Pompons are also largely called for and extensively used for table decorations. Easter lilies are quite plentiful. Mignonette, pansies, daisies and calendulas may be had. Greens of all kinds move in a satisfactory manner.

Various Notes.

Buffalo was well represented at the Cleveland show that opened November 10. The Buffalo bowlers left full of vim and vigor, with hopes of attaining a high score. Special interest attaches to the contest between Buffalo and Rochester to decide the championship.

A. E.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been increasing nicely and the demand for stock is heavy. November 6, the day of the big football game at Ann Arbor, the call for yellow mums was exceedingly heavy and resulted in big prices for mums, both at wholesale and retail. In some of the stores in the heart of the city there was a line of young people waiting to buy one or more yellow mums.

Various Notes.

Michael Bloy has formed a partnership with Joseph Streit, formerly of Buffalo, the firm name being Bloy & Streit. Mr. Streit, who is an expert grower, with all due respect to Mr. Bloy, will be in charge of the growing end of the business, while Mr. Bloy will devote his time to the retail end.

The Market.

Another week has given us continued good weather. There is still plenty of bloom on the cannas and other bedding plants, but there will be no more outdoor flowers.

The chrysanthemum season is at its height and, while there is an abundance of all varieties, there seems to be enough demand to take everything. In fact, the larger retailers agree that there has been no really salable stock lost this season. This is certainly a welcome contrast to last fall, when literally wagon-loads of as fine mums as could be grown went to the dump. The quality of the greater part of the mums this year does not seem to be up to that of last season. Of course there is plenty of stock that is as good as anyone can grow, but last year it all seemed to be of this quality.

Roses are still plentiful, especially the new varieties. One sees more Ophelia than he does Killarney, and more Hoosier Beauty than he does Richmond. These two new roses are certainly making a record both as producers and as sellers. Beauties are rather on the scarce side again. Carnations are hardly so plentiful as they were a month ago, but the quality is better. All are glad there are no more of them at present, as they are little in demand. Orchids are scarce, most of the stock being shipped in. Valley is plentiful, perhaps more so than it has been in months.

There seems to be a larger supply of Easter lilies this season than is normal, but they are selling well. In fact, the trade is more buoyant at present than it has been for a long time, going ahead of the best of two years ago.

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. set a new high-water mark in brides' bouquets last week, for the Caldwell wedding. The other decorations were equally elaborate.

Floyd Bralliar, of the Hillcrest School Farm, was out of the city on business last week.

McIntyre Bros. have their salesroom full of excellent pot chrysanthemums. Their carnations are beginning to show the same extraordinary quality that they carried all last winter.

Haury & Sons have their place well filled with good single chrysanthemum plants. They are always strong on pot plants.

Leslie Littell has finished the foundation work on the new house and is at work on the superstructure. He is hoping for another fortnight of good weather.

Frank Cornell is using one of his houses for carrying pot plants through the winter for his customers. This is a profitable line where one has room, as they require little attention. F. B.

The Right Prescription

The continued operation of a piece of machinery, day after day, week after week, year in and year out, without proper attention; the failure to supply right oil in right quantities, poor fuel and little of it, means loss of efficiency, dwindling profits and, at last, a serious breakdown.

A man who is on the job year after year, with short sleeping hours, working under a continual strain, no recreation, no interest outside of the four walls of his shop, is bound for the scrap heap, and sooner or later he will find himself up against a serious problem—how to get back on his feet physically and mentally.

As a business man you are careful of your machinery, although perhaps not so careful of yourself. We are all apt to overlook our own health in the race for the dollar, and regret it when too late.

Now, about the soil on your benches, upon which your success depends in no small way.

Is it worn and weak and non-producing?

You may be wondering why a bench that produced a bumper crop two years ago is practically a failure this year.

Do you know that your soil is right?

We'll give the ordinary grower credit for rotating his crops and resorting to the compost pile occasionally, which is all very good, but to feed a starving man French pastry when he craves beef-steak is cruelty.

We have a complete soil-testing laboratory and can find out with a certainty when a soil is starved for one of the component parts.

If you want Roses, or Carnations, or Chrysanthemums, or Green Goods, etc., we can help you produce them, in point of greatest number and best quality, by building up your soil and prescribing the right foods, for the right plant, with "Magic Complete Manures."

The Market.

Business last week was not any too brisk. There was so large a supply of stock that it was impossible to move it entirely. As a result, somewhat low prices were the rule. Shipping business is good. Roses are in heavy supply and generally are of good quality. Carnations are plentiful. Lilies are not meeting with an active market and have accumulated in the wholesale houses. Chrysanthemums, including pompons, are abundant and of excellent quality. Other offerings include valley, violets, sweet peas and orchids.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held at J. A. Peterson's. The florists first inspected the greenhouses and found everything in first-class shape. A new red seedling begonia, unnamed as yet, made a favorable impression on the visitors, while the other begonias, Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Melior and Cincinnati, were up to their usual high standard. Other stock that won praise included Peterson's own strain of cyclamens, Pandanus Veitchii and bird's-nest ferns.

After the meeting and a luncheon served by Mrs. Peterson, she and Clarence Peterson showed lantern slides of pictures taken on the trip of Mr. and Mrs. Peterson to the coast during the summer.

Frank Schramm was elected a member of the society. Robert Newcomb honored the society by his presence. The hosts received a hearty vote of thanks for their generous hospitality.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell, Max Rudolph, Fred Gear and George Tromeu expect to attend the Cleveland show this week. J. A. Peterson says that he does not intend to go, but the odds are fifty to one that he will.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ohmer and Master Jim Ohmer left for their home at West Palm Beach November 6.

L. H. Kyrk received the first pansies of the season from George Klotter November 8.

E. G. Gillett has been receiving some excellent white mums and Bonnaffons from the north.

Recent visitors included C. L. Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn.; I. Rosnosky, of Philadelphia; J. T. Herdigen, of Aurora, Ind., and R. Newcomb, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago. C. H. H.

These Sunlight Sashes as adjusted on the greenhouses are removable at will. They may be transferred to Cold Frames or Hotbeds and are incomparably superior to all others for such use.

They are complete in themselves, for they have two layers of glass enclosing an air space that is a better protection than mats and shutters, and does away with buying and using these extra covers. Besides, the plants get all the light all the time and are stronger and earlier, also far more profitable.

The Sunlight Double-Glazed Sash, as thousands of the best florists and gardeners testify, is simply perfect.

A Greenhouse on Broadway Built on the Roof

Another Jacobs Greenhouse was completed for C. C. Trepel, at 89th Street and Broadway, New York. This was an undertaking few greenhouse builders would have attempted. Our plans were accepted by all Departments of the City of New York, and the finished job was approved by them.

Besides building a very modern and up-to-date Greenhouse, we also installed an electric elevator which runs from the store to the roof, making it easily accessible for customers.

No matter how difficult your greenhouse problems are, we have engineering brains to solve them—besides, we can save money for you.

The full iron frame Metropolitan Patented Greenhouse erected for Mr. Wm. Nause, of Huguenot Park, Staten Island, N. Y. One of the many striking examples of Metropolitan efficiency.

While it is our iron bound custom to live up to every term and condition which we might arrange with our customers, we strive nevertheless, whenever possible for our patrons' benefit, to even go beyond them when an opportunity arises whereby we can effect an extra saving in either the construction, heating or maintenance of the greenhouse.

This is but part of our service, and despite the fact that we consider every contract a pledge to do as we have promised, there is, however, a personal pride we take in doing our work as nearly perfect as possible.

There is a personality about the Metropolitan organization which is ever on the alert for anything that might benefit our clients.

Put your greenhouse problems up to us. We go anywhere in the U. S. to submit plans and prices.

The Market.

Business during the first week of November was all that had been expected. Orders were numerous and stock was in prime condition and commanded good prices. Outdoor plants are about gone, hardy chrysanthemums and a few cosmos being all that is left of the autumn flowers. The flower shops present attractive sights, with the many mammoth chrysanthemum blooms on display in the windows and in the stores. Chadwick and Jones are the latest varieties to arrive on the market. Pompons, both cut and in pots, are selling well and are exceedingly plentiful. Carnations still are scarce and the prices for them remain rather high. Roses are in good supply and are of first quality, especially Sunburst, Shawyer and Russell. Violets are being shown, but there is not much demand for them. In the greenhouses, the Christmas stock of blooming plants is making a good showing and cyclamens, begonias, poinsettias and primroses are in splendid condition. Several concerns have received their azaleas.

Various Notes.

Will J. Vesey, Jr., accompanied by his father, Judge W. J. Vesey, were at Chicago this week to attend the flower show. W. J. Vesey, Jr., is preparing to remove from his present home to his handsome new residence on Thompson avenue, near the Vesey greenhouses.

The Bradley Flower Shop enjoyed a brisk business last week, the demand centering on cut flowers for parties, receptions and weddings. The store is showing excellent Jones chrysanthemums and Wells' Late Pink. The sale of pompon chrysanthemum plants has been large.

A new store has been opened at 828 Calhoun street, under the name of the Fort Wayne Flower Shop.

Miss Catherine Vesey has returned to the Ohio Wesleyan College, at Delaware, O., after a week's visit with her father, W. J. Vesey. R. F.

"HARMONY AND HARD WORK"

When the Cleveland craftsmen adopted their motto for the autumn show they had it in mind to demonstrate to the trade what intelligent, concerted effort can do to arouse popular interest in flowers, but the results achieved surpassed even the most sanguine expectations. The show was in many respects the most successful ever held in America.

THE Cleveland flower show was a really wonderful exhibition, but the most remarkable part of it was the success that attended the efforts to attract a crowd. While the show was unquestionably good, there have been many others equally strong in competitive exhibits and in non-competitive retail displays, but there never has been an exhibition in America that was viewed by anything like so large a percentage of the people of the city in which it was held. Nor has there ever been a local autumn show that attracted so large a number of trade visitors. Indeed, the attendance of the trade was larger than in the case of any of the S. A. F. conventions since the one held at Chicago four years ago.

How well the trade was pleased with the show was evidenced by the number of cases in which one member of a firm attended early in the week and, returning home, sent his partner or employees. There were many such instances.

A Big Crowd.

The Cleveland florists had an early start on their show—it was announced more than a year ago—and they obtained the cooperation of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, the American Carnation Society and the American Rose Society. These helped to make the show and, in a measure, the attendance of the trade, but it was the local hustle that made the public swarm to the show like bees to a hive. "Harmony and Hard Work" was the motto of the management and it was lived up to.

Cleveland has no really good exhibition hall. The Wignmore Coliseum is admirably located and is large enough, but it has a 16-foot ceiling and row after row of enormous posts. Nothing like a general plan of arrangement to make a garden scene is possible; there is no point from which any considerable part of the show can be seen at one time. But so great was the success of this show that it is expected it will be a strong factor in securing for Cleveland a large, centrally located, arched-roofed special exhibition building.

An Excellent Arrangement.

Considering the limitations of their building, the arrangements were excellent. Along the four walls booths were partitioned off, some sixty of them, each of from 100 to 200 square feet, and sold to the trade exhibitors. Every one was occupied and others had to be accommodated out on the floor among the competitive exhibits. In nearly every case the trade exhibitors put much care into staging their displays, with the result that the showing of accessories had an attraction for the public scarcely less than had the rest of the show.

Half the main floor was given to the competitive entries of the commercial growers, a fourth to the competitive displays of the private gardeners and the other fourth to the retailers' exhibits, which constituted, as frequently happens, the most attractive part of the show. It was in the retailers' quarter that the largest crowd always was to be found. The big posts that so impair the value of the hall for exhibition purposes were covered with cedar bark, with a big bunch of wild smilax at the top, which made a better effect than anybody previously has obtained in the room.

In size the show came up to the most sanguine expectations; there was all the stock that could be used; indeed, after the first day much of the effect of the splendid mums was lost by the necessity of crowding them to make room, first for the roses and then for the carnations. This was regretted, as it was recognized on every hand that the showing of mums was unusually strong—probably it deserves to be called the best ever seen in this country, for the growers from all sections seem to have reserved their best blooms this year for the Cleveland show. The roses, too, were fine, and so were the carnations.

The Retailers.

Cleveland long has been noted for the way its many first-class retailers have turned out and worked together while meeting in the keenest kind of competition for prizes. In other cities the retailers have not been so interested. But it appears that there has been, even in Cleveland, some heart-burning over the distribution of blue ribbons, for this time the retail section was non-competitive. A large section of the hall was transformed as much as might be into a garden, with arbor entrances through a hedge of boxwoods. Here eleven retailers maintained dinner table decorations throughout the show. By common consent, nothing elaborate was undertaken, but a fresh decoration was put on each day. The following cards appeared: Jones-Russell Co., Knoble Bros., J. M. Gasser Co., Smith & Feters Co., Westman & Getz, James Eadie Co., T. J. Kegg Co., A. M. Albrecht, E. A. Wilhelmy, C. M. Wagner and Christine.

In the other end of the garden each retailer was offered space for a table and here the most beautiful corner of the whole show was found. Some of the tables were extremely elaborate and each day they were redecorated with fresh bouquets, baskets, hampers and novel arrangements of flowers. The colors here were bright and gay and the display quite the most pleasing of anything seen this season. Those whose cards were on these tables were: Knoble Bros., J. M. Gasser Co., Smith & Feters Co., Jones-Russell Co., Westman & Getz, James Eadie Co., A. M. Albrecht, G. W. Mercer, W. A. Calhoun, D. Charlesworth & Son, C. M. Wagner and T. J. Kegg Co.

The Big Cut Mums.

There was a splendid showing of cut chrysanthemums; so good, in fact, that it was impossible to stage them properly and they were badly crowded together after the first day, so that much of the effect was lost. Turner was easily the leading variety; nothing in the show that showed size and finish to compare with it. For a commercial white, White Chieftain was the variety that looked most worth the average grower's attention. In yellow, Odessa carried off the honors as an exhibition variety, but those who sought a commercial yellow that might prove an easier doer than Bonnaffon saw little of promise. The McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, showed a yellower sport of Yellow Eaton, named Mrs. M. R. Morgan after the foreman's wife, that will be disseminated next year and which should make a place for itself on its color. In pink, Elberon, Wm. Duckham and Meudon were fine for show, but Chieftain, which was shown by many exhibitors, seemed to hold the most interest for the commercial growers.

The collections of the disseminators of novelties contained some fine blooms, but the raisers of new varieties of late years seem to have given their attention to exhibition varieties rather than to those the average florist can grow to make money.

The awards in the open classes for cut mums were:

Singles and Pompons.

The show was notably strong on single and pompon chrysanthemums. Several disseminators had offered special premiums and the entries were extremely numerous, the varieties shown including many that still are without name. The impression created was that there are far too many varieties of this class and that the average grower will content himself with a few kinds adapted to the trade he caters to, without trying to keep up to the times. The awards were:

The Roses.

This seems to be a rose year, for the stock shown is extremely fine and the competition is keen, the awards well scattered. This was the case at Cleveland, where the roses were one of the special features of the show. Exhibits came from Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Canada, as well as from Ohio. Mrs. Russell was the variety that attracted most trade interest, but Ophelia seemed to get more notice from the public. The number of varieties represented in the awards was unusually large. It gave F. R. Pierson special pleasure to win on vase of 150 blooms arranged for effect, over several other good entries.

The class for novelties brought out five entries. The medal went to Waban Rose Conservatories, for Mrs. Bayard Thayer, which had special interest for western growers who are doing Russell so well, it being a light pink sport of that variety. E. G. Hill Co. showed Tipperary, yellow, seedling. C. H. Totty entered Gorgeous, a sport of Mrs. Sawyer. A. N. Pierson put in two new ones, Mrs. W. R. Hearst, a darker sport of Maryland, and Red Radiance, what its name implies. Prima Donna, shown by Florex Gardens, also was new to most of the trade visitors.

The judges scored the new roses as follows: Tipperary, 74; Red Radiance, 81; Gorgeous, 83; Mrs. Hearst, 87; Mrs. Bayard Thayer, 90.

The Carnations.

Considering the strength of the showing in other lines and the number of growers who are in position to exhibit, the entries for carnations were not so numerous as one would have expected. But whatever was lacking in quantity was fully made up for by quality; the carnations certainly were superb and it is probable no better showing ever has been made in November. Mrs. Ward easily was the leader in its color and, indeed, it is doubtful if that variety ever has been so well shown in the fall of the year as was done by the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. Matchless was ahead of all other whites, but Pink Delight and Enchantress Supreme were more nearly on an even footing as to quality.

When it came to novelties, the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., had a splendid thing in Crystal White, which won the A. C. S. silver medal. The same exhibitor showed Cottage Maid, light pink. The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., won the A. C. S. bronze medal with Aviator and obtained a silver medal for Superb, a light pink exhibited for the first time at Indianapolis a year ago. Comet, white, was the third of the Thompson trio of novelties. Certificates of merit each day. The following cards appeared: Jones-Russell Co., Knoble Bros., J. M. Gasser Co., Smith & Fetters Co., Westman & Getz, James Eadie Co., T. J. Kegg Co., A. M. Albrecht, E. A. Wilhelmy, C. M. Wagner and Christine.

In the other end of the garden each retailer was offered space for a table and here the most beautiful corner of the whole show was found. Some of the tables were extremely elaborate and each day they were redecorated with fresh bouquets, baskets, hampers and novel arrangements of flowers. The colors here were bright and gay and the display quite the most pleasing of anything seen this season. Those whose cards were on these tables were: Knoble Bros., J. M. Gasser Co., Smith & Fetters Co., Jones-Russell Co., Westman & Getz, James Eadie Co., A. M. Albrecht, G. W. Mercer, W. A. Calhoun, D. Charlesworth & Son, C. M. Wagner and T. J. Kegg Co.

The Big Cut Mums.

There was a splendid showing of cut chrysanthemums; so good, in fact, that it was impossible to stage them properly and they were badly crowded together after the first day, so that much of the effect was lost. Turner was easily the leading variety; nothing in the show that showed size and finish to compare with it. For a commercial white, White Chieftain was the variety that looked most worth the average grower's attention. In yellow, Odessa carried off the honors as an exhibition variety, but those who sought a commercial yellow that might prove an easier doer than Bonaffon saw little of promise. The McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, showed a yellower sport of Yellow Eaton, named Mrs. M. R. Morgan after the foreman's wife, that will be disseminated next year and which should make a place for itself on its color. In pink, Elberon, Wm. Duckham and Mendon were fine for show, but Chieftain, which was shown by many exhibitors, seemed to hold the most interest for the commercial growers.

The collections of the disseminators of novelties contained some fine blooms, but the raisers of new varieties of late years seem to have given their attention to exhibition varieties rather than to those the average florist can grow to make money.

Chrysanthemum Plants.

It was in chrysanthemum plants that the Cleveland show was weakest, but with the large quantity of material in the hall no one noticed that the mum plants were few and small. Appreciating that big plants are not grown around Cleveland, the management had arranged with John Canning for one of the monster specimens grown on the Lewisohn estate at Ardsley, N. Y., and the big plant was one of the features of the show and probably the best advertising card the management had. Mr. Canning and two assistants came with the plant, which required the use of a special express car. While not the largest plant ever grown at Ardsley, it was one of the best, being over fifteen feet in diameter and carrying nearly 1,400 excellent blooms. The variety was Wells' Late Pink. Mr. Canning's largest plant this season was R. F. Felton and was illustrated in The Review for November 11.

In the competitive classes for pot mums the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. was the only exhibitor, being awarded thirteen first prizes and the sweepstakes.

Miscellaneous Plants.

The hall was full of fine plants, in the trade's display and in some non-competitive groups as well as entered for prizes. Splendid advertising material was found in a group from the U. S. Botanic Garden, Washington, which contained the "mother-in-law plant," the "panama hat plant," the "jury plant" and several others that gave the press agent and the sign writer something to do. A fine non-competitive group of palms and ferns came from the Corrigan place, Nag-ir-roc Gardens, Wickliffe, O.

The awards in the open classes were:

Group of stove and greenhouse plants—Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., first; Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O., second.

Private Gardeners.

cial aspect, to bring in other interests and to lend variety to the show, special provision was made for exhibits from private growers. A full list of classes was provided open only to private people and a special space approximately one-quarter of the hall was set apart for the exhibits. The result was a fine display in this section, almost a complete flower show in itself.

The rule was that entries be made in the name of the owner, but the leader in this department of the show was Robert Weeks, gardener for the Misses Holden, who took nineteen premiums. Another exhibitor with many entries was Herbert B. Rapley, gardener for Mrs. Price McKinney, Wickliffe, O., who took seventeen premiums. George Jacques, gardener for W. G. Mather, took seven awards. Other leading exhibitors and prize winners were F. S. Drury, Cleveland; H. S. Firestone, Akron, O.; J. L. Severance, Cleveland; Woodside Farms, West Park, O.; Mrs. Chas. A. Otis, Willoughby, O.; Mrs. L. Dean Holden, Brathenal, O.; Nagir-roc Gardens, Wickliffe, O.; Adolph Lewisohn, Ardsley, N. Y.; C. W. Seiberling, Akron, O.; L. E. Holden, Cleveland; Wm. Duckham, Madison, N. J.; C. B. Raymond, Akron, O.; Frank Allan, Grosse Pointe, Mich.; Chas. W. Euston, Buffalo, and Anna Dean Farm, Barberton, O. The display of fruits and vegetables was a center of interest. The most curious plant in the show was Mr. Rapley's Polypodium aureum on a stump of tree fern.

The Judges.

The judging was a difficult task, by reason of the constant presence of large crowds as well as because of the close competition in many classes, but was expertly done by the following board:

Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.
Eugene Daillé-douze, Flatbush, N. Y.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.
J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.
M. Bloy, Detroit, Mich.
R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O.
Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.

The Management.

The executive secretary of the show was M. A. Vinson, a man of experience in arousing the interest of the public, but he had a staff of splendid workers. The full list of committees is as follows:

General Committee—H. P. Knoble, general chairman; M. A. Vinson, executive secretary.
Publicity—George Bate, chairman; H. B. Jones, F. Ritzenthaler, T. J. Kirchner, Chas. L. Gibson.
Trade Displays—H. P. Merrick, chairman; R. F. Koch, Victor H. Morgan, E. B. George, Painesville, O.

Flower Show Small Talk.

The managers, exhibitors and trade visitors, instead of tickets, all had badges to admit them to the show. Each badge had a little card in a frame at the top, in which the wearer's name was printed. If you were not too near-sighted you could make believe you knew everybody real well, and get away with it the way the good salesmen do.

Along all Cleveland's principal business streets the show management covered the lamp posts with birchbark and tied on a big bunch of wild smilax, making a quite fair imitation of a big bay tree. A big green arrow on each "tree" pointed "This way to the flower show." It was a clever advertising idea and one that shows how well the show stood with the municipal authorities.

Wallace R. Pierson made his first appearance away from home since his illness and operation at San Francisco during the S. A. F. convention. He looked as well as ever and certainly was as active. Incidentally he picked up a half-dozen novelties that in a year or two will come out under the Pierson banner. From Robert Weeks he obtained one plant of the single yellow pompon that won the sweepstakes in the gardeners' classes; there are only nine plants in existence, Dale Estate having got seven, the other to be retained by Mr. Weeks. From Fred Pautke, Grosse Pointe, Mich., Mr. Pierson obtained all the stock of a set of five pompons to be disseminated in 1917. Of one of these, a fine light pink, it is related that Mr. Pautke received an automobile for naming it Geraldine Dodge, after the daughter of the manufacturer of the machine.

John D. Rockefeller made a goodly donation to the show (not the fabulous sum the press reports said) and it was announced it was to "let the school children in." The first day the police arrangements failed and the streets were blockaded, but other mornings plenty of officers were on duty and for hours the youngsters poured along a roped-off line of march through the show. In a great many thousands of homes the flower show was described by youngsters who never had seen one before. It made the show the most talked of event in Cleveland that week.

During the show C. H. Totty's new pink rose was named Cleveland, as the result of a voting contest. It is a Dickson seedling. Near it stood a half dozen blooms of the new Smith mum for which President Wilson suggested the name Tiger because of its resemblance to the Princeton color. "Well, they don't look a lot different from a good many others we've seen," was the comment one of the lady visitors was heard to pass.

Just after the show opened the newspapers printed big scare heads about the big storm coming out of the northwest. As the show ran along with beautiful weather, the management sent a big bouquet to the weather office with a note of appreciation for sidetracking the blizzard.

C. H. Totty appeared with a thumb, on his right hand, that looked like a ham. On the way out a lurch of the train threw him into a closing door just in time to get badly crushed. After a night sleepless with pain, a Cleveland surgeon removed several pieces of bone and dressed the injury, but Mr. Totty will eat with his left hand for some time.

B. Hammond Tracy and Mrs. Tracy, who always accompanies him to conventions and shows, motored from Wenham, Mass.

J. A. Valentine came all the way from Denver.

The Friedley Co., Cleveland, made its first appearance at this show, of which F. A. Friedley was manager. The interests heretofore in the James Eadie Co. have been divided. Frank Schoen will retain the retail store and the old name. Mr. Friedley takes the greenhouses and will grow for the wholesale market.

R. Vincent, Jr., was busy proselyting for the American Dahlia Society. Of its 300 members sixty are in the S. A. F. and he wants forty more, so the dahlia president can sit with the S. A. F. directors. Incidentally, Mr. Vincent claims great credit for having introduced hardy pompon chrysanthemums in this country some fifteen years ago. He says that they met with little favor at first, but now hold a place fully as important as the big mums.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., showed boxwoods, camellias, ardisias, pandanus, ericas, begonias and dracenas.

Trade Exhibits

at Cleveland

Because so many of the exhibitors at S. A. F. conventions were prevented from making their usual August displays, the Cleveland show managers decided to admit strictly trade displays to their show and to permit those whose purpose was purely commercial to help meet the expenses of the show. The result was that a space fifteen feet deep extending clear around the great hall was sold to those whose intention it was to take orders, and even then it was necessary to locate several of the exhibits out on the floor among the competitive entries. The sale of space brought in $5,600, or a little more than one-third the cost of the show.

A curious combination resulted, some of the exhibitors having no interest in the public, addressing their appeal to the trade visitors only, while others sought retail business exclusively; some sought both trade and public patronage. For those dealing with trade visitors only, the crush in the aisles the greater part of the time shortened the hours during which business could be done, but nearly all reported enough orders to make the week a profitable one. The trade exhibitors were:

A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., had a corner of the building for a large display featuring hardy pompon and single chrysanthemums. Among the many varieties shown, the pompon Peace and the new bronze single, Ramona, also the new pompon, Hilda Canning, bronze button type, were given conspicuous places and highly commended. Golden Gleam, a new large-flowering yellow, was featured. Among roses Mrs. W. R. Hearst, Red Radiance, Hoosier Beauty and Hadley were to the front.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., had a large display of single, semi-double and pompon chrysanthemums, all hardy in New Jersey. Among some fifty varieties he featured the new single, Excelsior. His novelties for this season in large-flowering mums are Yellow Turner, Morris Kinney, white, and Mrs. J. Gibson. In his exhibit were Gorgeous, the sport of Mrs. Sawyer, and the Dickson seedling that was named Cleveland at this show. Mr. Totty also staged several vases of sweet peas grown by George T. Schuneman.

Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, had a large display of Christmas flowering plants and of decorative plants, with dracenas and crotons, as usual, well to the front. The crotons were large, fine

A number of Cleveland's furniture and art stores had well arranged displays in harmony with the surroundings and the Cleveland post-office had a booth to show good packing for parcel post shipments of perishable articles. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery had a reception booth with a Western Union operator working at its entrance.

Bowling Tournament.

Taking advantage of the fact that there was no intercity bowling match at the S. A. F. convention, the Cleveland flower show managers arranged for one November 11, but the response was not so large as anticipated, indicating that the younger generation are not so greatly interested in this form of sport as were their fathers. Four teams entered, rolling the following scores in three games:

Buffalo.		Rochester.
Sandford	531	Salter	408
McClure	471	Roland	457
Scott	472	Thomann	395
Neubeck	442	H. Glenn	482
Streit	409	W. Glenn	559
Total	2415	Total	2361
Detroit.		Cleveland.
Sullivan	447	Friedley	443
Fetters	473	Bate	483
Stock	477	Strejeck	467
Holznagle	404	Knoble	510
Rahaley	469	Adgate	360
Total	2270	Total	2269

The ten high men, each of whom received a prize, in the individual contest were:

B. Hart	554	Balluff	467
Pautke	552	Rowlanch	466
Kollsky	548	Critchell	403
Weeks	544	Hampton	423
Graham	508	Taylor	389

The five high individuals and the high man on each of the city teams then rolled three games for a life membership in the S. A. F., to be paid for by H. P. Knoble; won by C. J. Graham, of Cleveland, who was manager of the bowling.

As a finale the teams of Rochester and Buffalo rolled the third series of games to decide the possession of the Lord & Burnham trophy. The result was: Rochester, 2; Buffalo, 1.

There were twelve prizes for ladies, won in the order named:

Mrs. F. A. Friedley,	Miss Ida Merkel,
Mrs. A. Pochelon,	Mrs. Naumann,
Mrs. J. Henninger,	Mrs. W. C. Priest,
Mrs. C. A. Myers,	Mrs. S. H. Berthold,
Mrs. H. P. Knoble,	Miss Pearl Fulmer,
Mrs. C. J. Graham,	Miss Eleise Swinton.

The Banquet.

The Cleveland Florists' Club entertained the trade visitors at a banquet, November 12, at the Hollenden hotel, when the enjoyment of the menu was heightened by a cabaret, the four young ladies who passed between the tables as they sang gathering up most of the flowers in the room, presented by the impressionable, let us say, bachelors among the diners.

At the conclusion of the repast and the musical entertainment the hour had grown so late that many of those called on for "remarks," not speeches, already had gone, either to catch trains or to bed. Frank Williams, who made an excellent toastmaster, obtained responses from the following: Herbert Bate, president of the Cleveland Florists' Club; Wm. Kleinheinz, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America; Joseph Hill, president of the American Carnation Society; A. S. Baldwin, who spoke for the amateurs; R. Vincent, Jr., president of the American Dahlia Society; Wm. F. Gude, who spoke for the S. A. F.; Irwin Bertermann, president, and Albert Pochelon, secretary, of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery; J. F. Ammann and Wm. Nicholson, who spoke for the judges, and from several others.

Telegrams of greeting and felicitation on the success of the exhibition were read from President Welch, of the S. A. F., and from A. Henderson, chairman of the Chicago show management.

The Smoker.

The festivities of the week closed with a smoker at the Moose Club Saturday night at which more than 300 were present. There was an abundance of smoke and refreshments and the same aggregation of vaudevillians that appeared at the banquet the night before, with the addition of one or two numbers specially for the late-stayers. George Washington Smith, who had not had an idle moment in many days, was master of ceremonies.

MANY TRADE SOCIETIES MET AT CLEVELAND

The Chrysanthemum Society.

The Cleveland show was a celebration of the silver jubilee of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and at the twenty-fifth annual business meeting of the organization, held at the Hollenden hotel November 11, President Kleinheinz spoke in his address of the debt due to the first corps of officers, all passed away. They were: President, John Thorpe; vice-president, Wm. K. Harris; treasurer, John Lane; secretary, Edwin Lonsdale. President Kleinheinz also asserted that there is a cry that the demand for the chrysanthemum is waning and refuted it with force, saying, "Why should mums become less popular? See in the exhibits the progress being made; the large-flowering type is increased yearly in size and the present pompons and singles are superior to the varieties of the past." Secretary Johnson and Treasurer May submitted their annual reports.

An animated discussion followed the report of the registration of new varieties and action was taken to prevent the renaming of old varieties or the use of different names for similar sports from two or more sources. On motion of Elmer D. Smith it was voted to strike the name Ivory Supreme from the records of the society on the ground that the variety is identical with Chas. Rager.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Wm. Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa., reelected.

Vice-president—Wm. Vert, Port Washington, N. Y.

Secretary—Chas. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill., reelected.

Treasurer—John N. May, Summit, N. J., reelected.

It was decided to hold the twenty-sixth annual meeting at Philadelphia in November, 1916, in conjunction with the autumn show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

At Cleveland, November 11, the F. T. D. held the best meeting in its history. There were forty-five retail florists present. After a few words of greeting, President Irwin Bertermann turned over the chair to J. A. Valentine, of Denver, who was the founder and first president of the organization, but who has not been able to attend its recent meetings.

The principal matter before the meeting had to do with the failure of the members to report, in accordance with the requirements of the by-laws, all accounts with other members unpaid after thirty days. It was well known that the failure to take prompt action has resulted, in certain cases, in members accumulating liabilities in excess of their deposit with the society. After a long discussion it was decided to seek to remedy the condition by an amendment to the by-laws by virtue of which a debtor shall forfeit his right to twenty per cent discount on any bill permitted to go unpaid over thirty days; and providing that any debtor shall be dropped from the membership if he does not pay his bills immediately the secretary notifies him of a delinquency. It also was voted to make it the duty of the secretary to inquire into the responsibility of applicants for membership.

The secretary was authorized to prepare a demonstration exhibit for the Philadelphia national show for the purpose of acquainting the public with the method by which flowers are delivered by telegraph.

There were reports by Secretary Pochelon and Treasurer Rock, showing the organization's condition, and several hours were devoted to discussion of means of extending the work.

American Carnation Society.

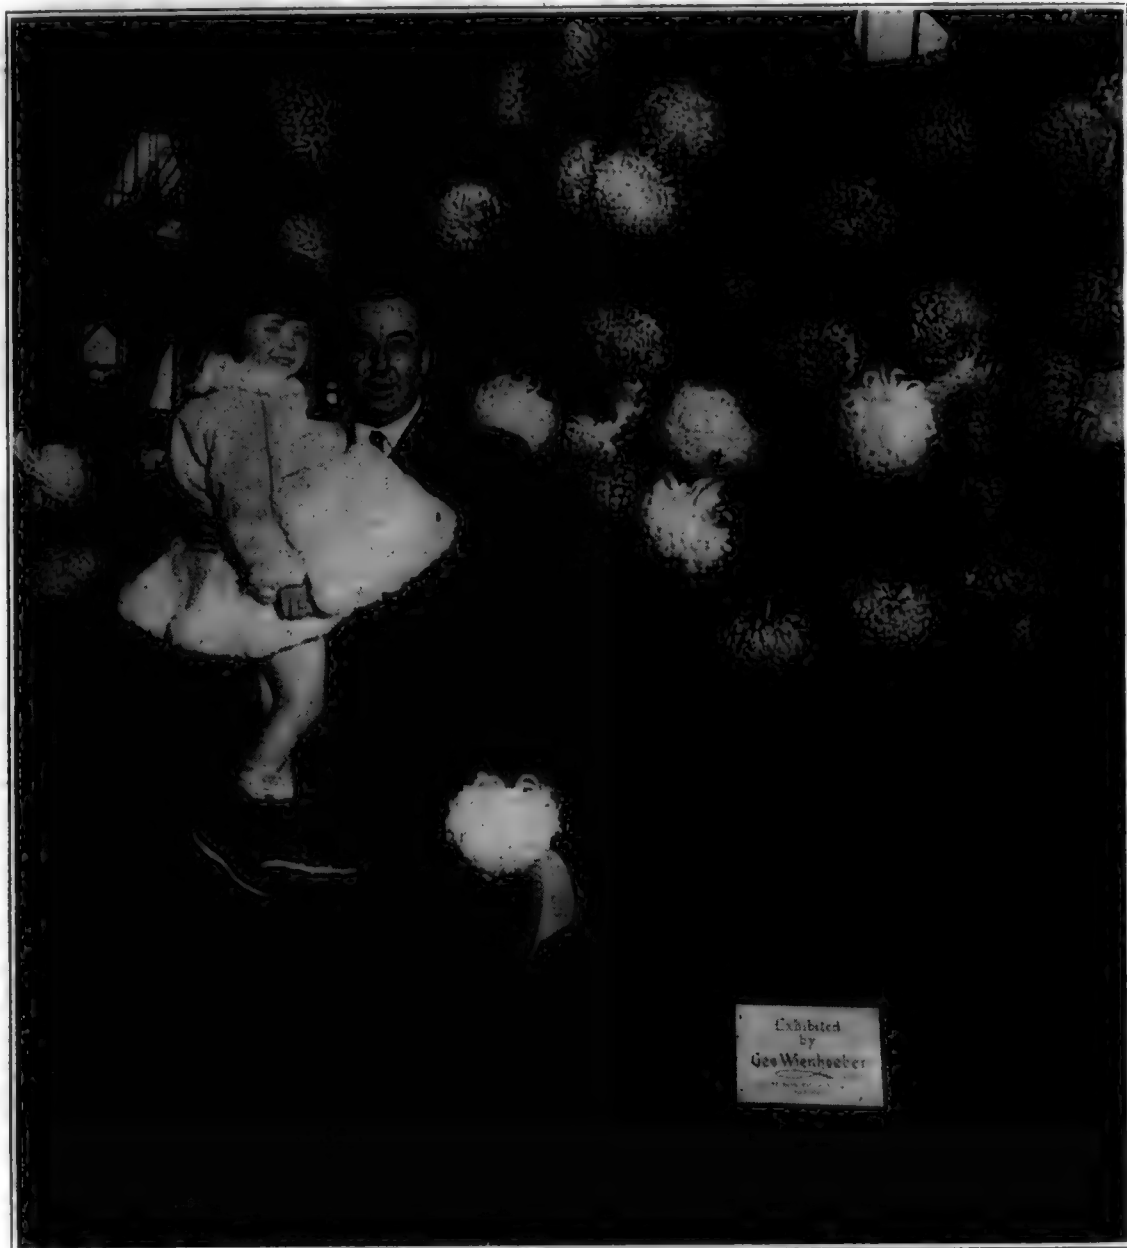

A meeting of the board of directors of the American Carnation Society was held at Cleveland November 12, President Joseph Hill, Vice-president J. F. Ammann and Secretary A. F. J. Baur all being present. The premium list for the annual exhibition at St. Louis in January was adopted as submitted and a tentative program for the convention was arranged. Vice-president Ammann reported on arrangements and predicted a most successful meeting.

The premium list for the carnation section at the national show in Philadelphia also was submitted and approved. Inasmuch as this is the silver jubilee of the society, it was decided to have a special die made and to offer a silver medal in addition to the cash first premium in each class for 100 carnations and for fifty carnations in the Philadelphia exhibition.

American Rose Society.

There was an excellent meeting of the American Rose Society at Cleveland November 11, President S. S. Pennock, Treasurer Harry May and Secretary Benjamin Hammond and nineteen other members present, including Ex-president Pierson. After general discussion of the society's work it was decided to modify the rule prohibiting more than one pinch in producing stock exhibited at the society's exhibitions, to allow two pinches on roses used for arrangements for effect.

The premium list for the rose section of the Philadelphia national show was discussed and approved. Philip Breitmeyer announced an offer of $225 as first prize for a group of rose plants in pots or tubs to be competed for at Philadelphia.

The Mayor of Chicago Opened the Show in the Coliseum.

Ohio Gladiolus Society.

The Ohio Gladiolus Society held an adjourned meeting at Cleveland November 11. The special purpose was the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President—C. B. Gates, Mentor, O.

Vice-president—Joe Coleman, Lexington, O.

Secretary-treasurer—Wilbur A. Christy, Warren, O.

It was decided to hold the next annual meeting and exhibition at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, August 18 and 19, 1916.

form. A vase of Nebraska, the new red to be disseminated this winter by C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, Neb., attracted much attention. The new scarlet, Aviator, a production of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., caused much discussion among the commercial growers and found many champions. Superb, light pink, also shown by the Thompson Carnation Co., was looked over as a possible successor to Enchantress. Thompson's Comet was the best white seedling. A red seedling grown by Anton Then, and introduced by John Then as No. 701, was the center of an admiring crowd from the time it was staged. It took the sweepstakes prize.

The awards in the carnation classes were:

Fifty blooms White Wonder—Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, first; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., second.

CLOSE AT CHICAGO

THE GRAND FLORAL FESTIVAL.

Attendance a Disappointment.

The story of the opening days of the excellent Chicago show was told fully, in text and pictures, in The Review for November 11. The attendance during the last four days of the show increased steadily, but did not come up to the sanguine expectations of the management, although it culminated November 14 in the largest Sunday attendance a Chicago flower show has ever attracted. The last day was set aside as working-man's day, with a reduced admission fee, and the returns showed that the experiment fully justified its trial.

Carnations.

The carnation proved it had lost none of its popularity by the enthusiasm the large and fine display evoked. The entries of the older varieties attracted much attention because of quality unusually good for November, but the chief interest was held by the new candidates for favor. Among these, Belle Washburn, staged by Bassett & Washburn, called forth many expressions of admiration. This exhibitor also showed Helen Washburn, dark pink, in good

Superb, entered in the flesh pink classes by the Thompson Carnation Co., was ruled out as being too dark to compete in this color and a protest was filed. Superintendent P. W. Peterson pointed out that at the Cleveland show Superb won two firsts and two seconds in classes open only to flesh pinks.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

The fleeting wings of time are again brought forcibly to mind by the occurrence of another annual flower show under the auspices of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club. This year's show, the third annual exhibition given by the club, was held November 3 and 4, at Windsor hall, Holyoke, Mass., and, as is proper, it surpassed the previous exhibitions in the matter of attendance and in quantity and quality of exhibits.

Easily the chief interest of the show was centered in the judging of the special class of chrysanthemums for the silver loving cup offered by Miss Isabel Skinner, to be won three times in succession or five times in all for permanent possession. The competition was for a vase of twelve chrysanthemum blooms, one variety, any color. G. H. Sinclair was declared the winner after a close contest with the Massachusetts Agricultural College, of Amherst, which received second honors, while R. S. Carey, grower at South Hadley Falls, took third prize. Mr. Sinclair will retain possession of the cup until the next contest.

G. H. Sinclair also was winner of first prize for a group of decorative and bedding plants, arranged for effect, not exceeding 150 square feet, his exhibit including palms, mums, orchids, begonias and others. In this class, Gallivan Bros., of Holyoke, took second prize with palms, heathers, ferns, mums, Jerusalem cherries and begonias, while the Massachusetts Agricultural College took third place with a display of crotons, mums and palms. First prize for the most worthy exhibit went to George Strugnell, head gardener for C. E. Mackintosh.

The prize-winners in the plant and cut flower classes were as follows:

NEWARK, N. J.

Nearly 10,000 people attended the first annual chrysanthemum show of the Essex County Florists' Club, which was held November 11 and 12, in the auditorium of Bamberger & Co., Newark. This was the first big public show to be held under the auspices of the club and was quite creditable for a first attempt, being highly commended by the general public and the trade. Bamberger & Co. not only donated the use of the hall, which is conveniently located in the center of the business section of the city, but also two fine silver cups as sweepstake prizes for the best growers' and retail dealers' exhibits.

While chrysanthemums predominated in the display, there were fine exhibits of other flowers, as well as mantel deco-brook, N. Y. The committee in charge consisted of the following: Jacob Hauck, of Bloomfield, chairman; Henry Hornecker, of East Orange, vice-chairman; Edward Jacobi, Jr., of Irvington, secretary; Fred Philips, Augustus Begerow and William G. Muller, of Newark; Joseph Manda, of West Orange, and W. W. Adams, of East Orange.

None of the stock shown was grown especially for exhibition purposes. The show was arranged for with less than a month's notice, so the exhibits were taken from the best as grown in the greenhouses of the county or from the stock of the retailers.

One of the objects of the show was to introduce the work of the Essex County Florists' Club to the public in a larger measure than heretofore, with the special thought in mind of paving the way for something bigger next year to be held in connection with the celebration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Newark. According to present plans, there will be an exhibition under the auspices of the club in the spring, at which there will be exhibits of window boxes, porch boxes, hanging baskets and bedding plants. It is probable that the committee of 100 in charge of the anniversary celebration next year will try to get the people of Newark to use window boxes and other floral decorations much more freely than usual next spring and summer, when, it is expected, many thousands of people will visit Newark. The florists of the county will back such a movement in every way possible, and it is with this in view that the show which the club will hold next spring will take the line indicated.

The Essex County Florists' Club, which was organized a couple of years ago, now has a membership of seventy-five. Its regular meetings are held on the third Thursday of each month, in the Krueger auditorium. The business meetings are always followed by a social hour, with light refreshments.

The awards at the show held last week were as follows:

Sweepstake prize, consisting of a silver cup, for the best exhibit by a grower—Awarded to Henry Hornecker, East Orange.

rations, table decorations, wedding groups, etc. Though the majority of the exhibits were from growers and retailers in Essex county, there were several from firms in New York and elsewhere. Guttman & Raynor, Inc., of New York, had a number of exhibits, among which were some seedling carnations which they have been exhibiting in several shows. Roman J. Irwin, of New York, had a display of Bird's-nest ferns. Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., had a fine collection of pompons. Frank N. Eskesen, of Madison, N. J., displayed a group of ferns, and Charles Weber, of Lynbrook, N. Y., a bunch of carnations. The Elizabeth Nursery Co., of Elizabeth, N. J., also had several exhibits. James Wagner, of Madison, N. J., had a display of roses. McLaughlin & Murphy, of Newark, exhibited a fine collection of pink Chinese lilies. C. J. Connolly, of Newark, had a pretty basket display.

The auditorium pillars were decorated with colored oak leaves. Part of the exhibit was arranged on the stage, but room was left in the center for the stringed orchestra, which dispensed music during the time that the show was open.

The judges were Walter F. Sheridan, of New York city; J. J. Coan, of New York city, and Charles Weber, of Lyn-

PHILADELPHIA.

Conclusion of Four-day Show.

A marked improvement came over the annual chrysanthemum show in Horticultural hall after last week's issue of The Review went to press. The exhibits were rearranged; more, many more came in and the general effect was excellent. Perhaps the most notable arrival was a half dozen plants of Canna Firebird from Vaughan's Greenhouses, at Western Springs, Ill. They were large, evenly developed plants, carrying immense trusses of bloom of a bright, rich scarlet that was in striking contrast with the deep green foliage. Just how they arrived in such perfect condition is a puzzle, for the canna is by no means a good shipper ordinarily. Whether it is the fine quality of Firebird or the way they grow them out west, or whether they were grown here, in some quiet corner, remains to be learned. Anyway, they were extremely fine. Then, Nephrolepis John Wanamaker arrived in splendid form to enhance the beauty of the exhibit of the Robert Craig Co.

Five blue ribbons were awarded Louis Burk for his handsome collection of orchids. His electrically lighted picture frame, containing the cream of the collection, will suffice for description. There were two choice plants, both in bloom; on the left Vanda Sanderiana, a native of the Philippine islands; on the right Brasso-Cattleya Maronæ, a cross between Brasso Digbyana and Cattleya gigas.

The prize offered by the Lord & Burnham Co. for the three largest chrysanthemum cut blooms was captured by John Dunn with a trio of wonderful flowers. William Turner is a mighty good subject for such competition. The lemon yellow sport of this great white variety topped a half dozen beautiful plants that were much admired.

Speaking of the Lord & Burnham Co. brings us to the excellent building exhibits that took up one side of the lower hall. The King Construction Co. was at the entrance with garden hose valves, miniature violet frames, with Mrs. Sarah I. Smith's own product blooming in them, and sundry other building requisites; the whole edged with golden pompons, and supervised by William J. Muth. D. T. Connor was in charge of the Lord & Burnham handsome exhibit in the center, comprising their hotbed frames, sashes, etc. The far side was filled by Hitchings & Co. with an exhibit of building material of substantial merit.

Harry S. Betz put up two fine exhibits across the end of the hall, one of evergreens, the other of foliage plants. Strafford, a medium-sized orange cross between Roman Gold and Charles Rager, was the feature of Edward A. Stroud's exhibit, which was beautifully staged; Strafford is a great commercial variety, shown for the first time. The completion of the exhibit of Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., brought out some fine varieties of hardy pompons. The arrangement of Thomas Meehan & Sons' exhibit of hardy varieties clearly fore-shadowed the removal of this class to the upper floor; it was too fine to be placed with the vegetables.

There were three rose exhibitors. The Joseph Heacock Co. received a bronze medal for five vases of well grown varieties that attracted much attention. They were, in the order named, Killarney, Hadley, Radiance, Hoosier Beauty and Killarney Brilliant. The retailers said Hadley had one on the western rose; the growers said Hoosier Beauty was a doer, with 3-foot stems and no blind wood. The Florex Gardens, of North Wales, staged Prima Donna, new here, though not a new rose; it had magnificent substance, vivid color and strong stems. Edward Towill, of Roslyn, staged Hadley, My Maryland and a yellow seedling, a cross between Harry Kirk and Lady Hillingdon. They all made a fine showing.

The four days of the exhibition brought together many friends, among those engaged in various branches of the profession, who rarely meet. These hearty greetings and comparisons of ideas afford encouragement and brighten work.

THE AVIATOR RECEPTION.

Announcements were sent out last week by the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., inviting members of the trade to visit the greenhouses of the company November 11 and be the guests of the new scarlet carnation, Aviator. At 11 a. m. the visitors met at the salesroom of Zech & Mann, in Chicago, and proceeded to the train. They were: Allie Zech, A. F. Longren, N. J. Kruchten, J. Ristow, J. A. Paulsen, M. H. Mann, H. C. Tilton and James Morton, all of Chicago; J. B. Molitor, Frank Blameuser, Nic Thinnies, C. Kellen, Peter Kellen, all of Niles Center; W. H. Amling, H. E. Amling, William Wichtendahl, all of Maywood, Ill.; W. F. Duntemann, Robert Pilgrim, Otto Harris, all of Bensenville, Ill.; George Dysinger, Ionia, Mich.; John Yeats, Champaign, Ill.; Mathias Ullenbruch, Port Huron, Mich.; Ernest Drake, Battle Creek, Mich.; Frank Vatter, Marinette, Wis.; Peter Olsem and J. Reding, Wilmette; C. F. Kenyon, South Bend, Ind.; Charles Simonson, McPherson, Kan.; George H. Blackman, Evansville, Ind.; A. J. Lanternier, Fort Wayne, Ind.; George W. Jacobs, Canton, Ill.; Rolfe F. Smith, Nashville, Tenn.; A. Anderson, Moline, Ill.; Jacob Glimmer; H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Can.

After an inspection of the Aviator range, which of course was in excellent condition, the visitors were entertained at a luncheon. During this, several short talks were given by members of the party. W. H. Amling in his talk said they had all expected to be entertained by a beautiful carnation, but they had not anticipated a reception by American beauties. Mr. Amling's reference was to the fair members of the reception committee.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.

The Market.

Business in general shows a steady improvement. The weather was exceptionally fine last week and this brought stock out in much larger quantities. The chrysanthemum crop is arriving almost too fast and cold, cloudy weather is necessary to hold back the cut.

Various Notes.

The Summerfield Floral Co. has a fine cut of all kinds of stock. One day last week this firm cut from one house 2,990 carnations. The flowers were as fine as one would care to see. The mum crop also is good. This company held open house at the greenhouses Sunday and had a large ad in the daily papers to advertise the event. There was a large crowd on hand Sunday morning. Mr. Summerfield has been under the weather for a few days, but is now out again.

The Springfield Seed Co. is moving large quantities of stock. The roses and mums are fine. Out-of-town business was extra heavy last week.

Rauch Bros. report business much improved in the new location and believe that colder weather will make trade much better.

Visitors last week were: T. H. Kaptein, of Maltus & Ware, New York;

Visitors at the Establishment of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., November 11, 1915.

Martin B. Lechner, of Lechner Bros., Webster Groves, Mo.; R. Alexander, of the Lindley Box & Paper Co., Gas City, Ind.; George A. Samter, of the St. Joseph Paper Box Co., St. Joseph, Mo.; H. Habben, of the Thatcher-Kerwin Glass Co., St. Louis, Mo.

The J. W. Stokes Floral Co. had large receipts of mums from the greenhouses last week. This concern reports brisk sales for last week.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Tipton & Hurst, of Little Rock, are looking for good business and have a well grown stock in anticipation.

Paul M. Palez will have three stores on Main street when he opens the latest and finest addition. Little Rock is a progressive city.

Kramer & Son, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., find the strawberry crop a profitable one. This was an especially long season for strawberry plants. A larger area will be planted next year. Early mums sold slowly, but liberal advertising brought about better returns.

Joseph Haube, of Charleroi, Pa., has been growing some prize mums. Mr. Haube was one of the florists who visited the Cleveland flower show last week.

I. V. Kinder, of Charleroi, had a unique display in his window some time ago, which caught the eyes of old and young alike. The display consisted of two guinea pigs in a garden of flowers, moss and stones. Bulbs and ferns were featured.

D. C. Hogan, proprietor of the Idle Hour Nurseries, of Macon, Ga., was absent at the time of my visit, being on the grand jury. Store Manager W. R. Gibson, lately of the Quaker City, expressed agreeable surprise at the conditions here. The latest ideas in flower baskets, for arrivals to and departures from this busy sphere, are in high favor. Corsage bouquets of the choicest flowers are popular. The catchy card in The Review is credited with bringing good business from practically all parts of the country. By the way, the banjo-player of the ad has developed into a floral artist. The superintendent of the greenhouses, Carl Shatzman, brother-in-law of Mr. Hogan, takes pride in the 100,000 feet of glass under his supervision. He tells me his greatest feat is to grow the carnation right, it being subject to many diseases. Roses are a success, as is shown by the record of Killarney. From 1,100 grafted plants, 59,000 blooms were cut in one season, ending in May. Russell is making so good a showing that more space will be given to it. Chrysanthemums must be grown for big blooms to compete with outdoor stock. The public will pay $3 per dozen for specimen blooms. Five varieties of cattleyas are grown. Percivaliana pays best, for it comes into bloom when most needed. Valley is forced in pots, it being found most convenient to handle in that way. A weekly batch of 4,000 is disposed of, chiefly at retail. Cyclamens and begonias are in prime condition for the holidays. A house of winter-flowering sweet peas, in addition to large numbers of bulbs, was noted.

C. Warren Kinder, of Donora, Pa., has opened a well appointed store. Mr. Kinder is assured of success if the store appearance has anything to do with it.

OBITUARY

William Christopher Young.

William C. Young, for many years connected with the concern of C. Young & Sons Co., of St. Louis, died suddenly November 11 at 5:45 p. m. at his home at 5553 Waterman avenue. Heart disease was the cause of his death, but he had been ill for about a year, though not confined to his bed. Mr. Young was born in Toronto, Canada, in 1865, and is survived by his wife, a daughter and two sons, and was the brother of James, Harry and Charles Young and Mrs. William Ellison and Mrs. Helwig. Mr. Young was a cousin of John and Thomas Young, of New York.

September 1 this year Mr. Young severed his connection with the old company and started with his two sons a new business known as the Young Bros. Floral Co., on Waterman avenue. Mr. Young had many sterling qualities which made him a successful business man and everyone in the trade was his friend. He was president of the St. Louis Florists' Club in 1908 and again in 1909.

The funeral took place Saturday, November 13, at 2:30 p. m., from his late residence, and was under the auspices of Lambskin Lodge, A. F. & A. M.

The members of the club attended the funeral in a body. The club sent a floral wreath, and many other beautiful floral emblems were sent by his many friends, who extended their sympathy to the bereaved family. J. J. B.

John H. Miller.

John H. Miller, aged 61 years, a retired florist, died of Bright's disease at his home, 1414 Catalpa street, Chicago, Ill., November 9. He was born and lived all his life in that city. Mr. Miller was a member of St. Matthew's Court, Catholic Order of Foresters. He is survived by his wife and six children. Interment was in St. Boniface cemetery, November 13.

James Petty.

James Petty, 74 years of age, a retired florist of Baltimore, Md., died November 8 at his home, 1110 Riverside avenue, after an illness of about a year. Death was due to the infirmities of age. Mr. Petty was born in Ireland and came to the United States when a young man. He is survived by three daughters, an adopted son and eleven grandchildren.

W. W. Thomas.

W. W. Thomas, of Anna, Ill., who was said to be one of the largest growers of strawberry plants in the country, died at his home November 13 of typhoid fever. Mr. Thomas was only in his forty-fourth year. He was a leader in southern Illinois politics and was prominent in Masonic circles, being a member of the Mystic Shrine of East St. Louis, Ill.

West Grove, Pa.—The Conard & Jones Co., Robert Pyle, president, has received word that each of the California expositions has given a gold medal for the company's exhibits of roses, cannas and shrubs.

PHILADELPHIA.

Conclusion of Four-day Show.

A marked improvement came over the annual chrysanthemum show in Horticultural hall after last week's issue of The Review went to press. The exhibits were rearranged; more, many more came in and the general effect was excellent. Perhaps the most notable arrival was a half dozen plants of Canna Firebird from Vaughan's Greenhouses, at Western Springs, Ill. They were large, evenly developed plants, carrying immense trusses of bloom of a bright, rich scarlet that was in striking contrast with the deep green foliage. Just how they arrived in such perfect condition is a puzzle, for the canna is by no means a good shipper ordinarily. Whether it is the fine quality of Firebird or the way they grow them out west, or whether they were grown here, in some quiet corner, remains to be learned. Anyway, they were extremely fine. Then, Nephrolepis John Wanamaker arrived in splendid form to enhance the beauty of the exhibit of the Robert Craig Co.

Five blue ribbons were awarded Louis Burk for his handsome collection of orchids. His electrically lighted picture frame, containing the cream of the collection, will suffice for description. There were two choice plants, both in bloom; on the left Vanda Sanderiana, a native of the Philippine islands; on the right Brasso-Cattleya Maronæ, a cross between Brasso Digbyana and Cattleya gigas.

The prize offered by the Lord & Burnham Co. for the three largest chrysanthemum cut blooms was captured by John Dunn with a trio of wonderful flowers. William Turner is a mighty good subject for such competition. The lemon yellow sport of this great white variety topped a half dozen beautiful plants that were much admired.

Speaking of the Lord & Burnham Co. brings us to the excellent building exhibits that took up one side of the lower hall. The King Construction Co. was at the entrance with garden hose valves, miniature violet frames, with Mrs. Sarah I. Smith's own product blooming in them, and sundry other building requisites; the whole edged with golden pompons, and supervised by William J. Muth. D. T. Connor was in charge of the Lord & Burnham

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

EVERY few days The Review receives photographs with no marks; sometimes not even a postmark by which they can be identified and receipt acknowledged.

PINK chrysanthemums have not met with the usual call thus far this season, while white has enjoyed increased demand, although yellow still is the most popular color.

It takes about three years for a new variety to get a real hold in the trade and by next season Chieftain and White Chieftain will be found in nearly every establishment that grows Bonnaillon.

Now that the carnation growers have stem-rot under control for the season, inquiries reaching The Review indicate they are turning their attention to red spider, which apparently has obtained a good lead.

BACK UP.

November business scarcely is coming up to the high hopes engendered by the banner business in October. Not that November is bad, by any means, but that October was so exceptionally good that a great many people thought the abnormal demand would last much longer than it did.

Even though November is not showing the same gains made in October, it is better than a year ago with nearly everyone and the height of the chrysanthemum season has been passed, somewhat earlier than usual, without the bad glut that frequently occurs. The growers of mums have every reason to be pleased with the prices they have been getting, and the prices of other stock, while not strong, scarcely have been hurt so much as usual while the mums are on.

Last year Thanksgiving was unexpectedly good; if it turns out as well this time, and there is every reason to suppose it will, November's record will be satisfactory, even though it does not show so good a gain as did October.

Incidentally, there has been a slowing down this month in many other lines of business not so dependent on weather conditions as are we.

BUILDING A BUSINESS.

Says one of the largest institutions of its kind in America:

"The more we labor for the future, the more we profit in the present.

"The more we strive for character, the greater the reward in money.

"The more we put into our product, the more we take out in sales.

"Perhaps, after all, there is more than one sense in which it is good to make a god out of business."

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

FIVE YEARS.

Bohrman, J. V., Louisville, Ky.
Watson, B. M., Plymouth, Mass.

TWO YEARS.

Benson, Andrew, Hinsdale, Ill.
Whitcomb & Son, Lawrence, Kan.

Ruffe, John, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Grossart, G. W., Belleville, Ill.
Jencek, Frank, Jamestown, R. I.
Stroh, L. C., Batavia, N. Y.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

INDIANA SOCIETY CONVENTION.

William J. Vesey, president of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, announces that the annual convention of the society will be held at Fort Wayne December 7. Headquarters will be at the Anthony hotel.

ELECTRIC LIGHT FOR FORCING.

Evidence accumulates that before long a practical commercial method will be discovered by which electric light can be employed to accelerate plant growth. In The Review for November 4 as veracious a contributor as Charles H. Totty recorded the chrysanthemum "Wm. Turner does not flower naturally until the end of the first week in November, but Mr. Fraser cleverly utilized an electric light in his greenhouse at night directly over the blooms of Wm. Turner, and in this way had them sufficiently developed to win" a prize October 28.

Now comes, also, the report that experiments by the General Electric Co., at the lamp works in East Cleveland, have resulted in the production of a Mazda lamp that, as a newspaper writer put it, offers the suggestion that "before long flowers and plants that have led decent, night-resting lives since Adam was appointed head gardener in Eden, will have to turn in and work and bloom twenty-four hours a day!"

IMMORTElLES.

This year is a different year again when it comes to immortelles. Instead of a scarcity, a stiff and rising market, such as has been the case as Christmas approached in recent years, we now have a supply adequate to meet the demand and prices on the easy side, because Europe is not using its usual quantities this year.

The boat from Marseilles that reached New York November 10 brought the following consignments:

Bernard, Judae & Co.	50 cases
A. Herrmann	85 cases
Bayersdorfer & Co.	80 cases

Total.....215 cases

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The inevitable has happened. A touch of real winter has arrived, which has quite effectually checked the large shipments that last week threatened to swamp the market. As a result, the market has stiffened appreciably and quality is all that can be desired, stock arriving in firm condition and in excellent form for shipping. Demand, too, has experienced a change for the better, engendered by the snappy weather. This, however, has not yet developed to the point where it cannot be taken care of in almost every line. As yet, the demand is primarily out of town, so those houses profiting most from the change in weather are those enjoying a substantial shipping trade. Thanksgiving orders are already being booked. It has been remarked, though, during the last week that local demand has been gathering strength for the holidays.

Beauties are most decidedly on the short side of the market and are clearing daily. Their quality is the best that has been seen in the market for weeks. Other varieties of roses, though by no means as short as Beauties, are shortening rapidly. The variety most plentiful on the market is Killarney. The supply of Russell, still the most popular rose of the year, is declining sharply. To such a degree is this true that eastern houses have been wiring to the Chicago market for them all the week, as Chicago is regarded as the largest Russell market in the country. As a result, the number of Russell to be disposed of on this market has been still further curtailed.

Carnations are by far the most plentiful flowers on the market, but their excellent quality in connection with the increased demand is a sufficient guarantee of their clearing without any great difficulty. Violets, double and single, are enough to satisfy the demand, which gives evidence of increased life. Valley, which has been flirting with the short side of the market for two weeks, has at last gone over to it. Sweet peas, daisies and mignonette are available in fair supply.

The receipts of chrysanthemums have shortened materially since the advent of winter weather; cheap mums in particular are scarce. Chadwick and Golden Chadwick are on the market in excellent quality, but in no large quantity. Pompons, anemones and baby pompons are moving with a fair degree of celerity. The supply continues large.

Lilies, both Easter and rubrum, continue to hold their own, but as yet there has developed no rabid demand for them.

Greens are moving in a more satisfactory manner than they were a week ago, and Asparagus plumosus sprays continue to be an unqualifiedly scarce commodity on the market.

Various Notes.

Carl Thomas and the first stevia of the season arrived the same day, November 15, at the store of the A. L. Randall Co. Mr. Thomas spent the summer on his farm at West Springfield, Pa., but for the winter he and Mrs. Thomas, with the latter's aged mother, are domiciled at the St. George hotel, on the Midway.

Having cut most of the 40,000 mums grown this season, W. H. Amling, Maywood, is busy planting the houses with sweet peas, using stock started in pots.

According to N. J. Wietor, the retailers like Golden Climax better than any other yellow pompon in season at the same time. It is a fine golden yellow, making Zenobia seem lemon-colored by comparison.

When John Bommersbach, of Decatur, came to town last week to see the flower show he brought with him a lady whom he made Mrs. Bommersbach while here.

The contract has been let for the new Stielow houses at Niles Center. Garland has it. There are to be two houses, each 34x300, and they are to be used for roses, planting early in spring.

The azaleas that arrived last week opened up in splendid condition, according to A. T. Pyfer, of Pyfer & Olsem, Wilmette.

Probably there is no one who watches the gladiolus market closer than does

C. S. Clausen, who scarcely misses a day in the market during the season, making his headquarters with the E. C. Amling Co. He says he took in more money in 1915 than in 1914, but that he had to cut more flowers to do it, prices averaging lower than ever before.

As the result of a strenuous day, November 14, the J. A. Budlong wholesale cut flower establishment is now in its new quarters in the Le Moyne building, 184 North Wabash avenue. Manager Philip C. Schupp says it will be a week, however, before he has everything shipshape.

Already an increased demand has been experienced by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association as a result of the advantages attaching to its new loca-

It is the opinion of Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, that the flower show last week was the best ever held in Chicago, regarded as a means of advertising the trade and its wares. Its results, he believes, will be far reaching and long felt.

Eighteen prizes on twenty-two entries looks like a good record, and that, according to Felix Reichling, is what Peter Reinberg achieved at last week's show.

At Springfield, November 13, the secretary of state licensed the incorporation of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., with $25,000 capital stock. The incorporators are P. L. McKee, G. P. McKee and B. F. Dupue.

You can't always tell what will happen when you put up a prize. Bassett & Washburn offered a single prize of $10 for the best fifty Belle Washburn carnations arranged for effect. There were seven entries. On the award of the first prize the six losers cried havoc, so C. L. Washburn offered a second prize of a box of cigars. The judges refused to rejudge for a second and Mr. Washburn found himself under the necessity of handing out six boxes of cigars.

The Market.

Business last week was not so good as that of last month. The weather has been bright and, while not warm, has brought in most classes of stock heavily and consequently there has been a sharp decline in prices.

Chrysanthemums last week arrived in larger quantities and were largely responsible for the crowded condition of the market. The quality of the mums is fine and some choice stock is being disposed of. Prices are not maintaining the same standard as the quality, however, and the surplus is being moved only with considerable effort. Roses are plentiful and are in fine shape. The stock is selling fairly well and is bringing medium prices. There is plenty of short stock to supply the demand and, of course, this cuts into the sale of the better stock to some extent. Carnations are in larger supply and in excellent condition. The supply is more than sufficient to take care of the demand and prices are lower than they have been.

Valley, while not scarce, is being cleaned up daily with no difficulty. This stock is in fine shape and prices are holding firm. Lilies are not overplentiful and are selling well. Violets are being received in greater quantities each day, but the demand is heavy and the cut is being disposed of easily. The supply, while heavier than heretofore, is far short of that of last year, and this helps to move stock that would otherwise have little sale because of the quality, which is not yet up to standard. The quality, however, is showing marked improvement. Orchids are somewhat scarcer and the cut is being moved with no trouble.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business has improved slightly, but is still dull. The weather does not help it any. Warm days at this time of year affect business disastrously. There are fewer social functions than usual. Weddings are not numerous and are usually small. There has been little funeral work and it has consisted chiefly of sprays of mums, etc. Stock has been more than plentiful for the amount of trade.

Chrysanthemums are abundant, but in some cases are being held back for Thanksgiving. There are many large and rich looking Turners on the market. Bonnaffons are good and sell well. Chieftain, Queen and Rager also sell readily. There is an abundance of roses and they are cheap. Ward and Sunburst are good; so, also, is Russell, which is meeting with a growing demand. Carnations are improving, but reds are not overplentiful. Violets are fine and sell well. Orchids are plentiful and of good color. Valley is in good condition, but the demand is small. Callas and Easter lilies are scarce. Paper Whites have made their appearance. Bouvardias are much used now. There is a growing demand for dollar baskets of flowers and most of the stores are making a specialty of them. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held November 8, at Musicians' Headquarters. Mr. Zoller, a chemist for the Eastman Kodak Co., delighted the audience with about eighty pictures. They were his latest achievements in color photography and included scenes from several of the city parks, as well as a large number of European views. In accordance with the wishes of Mr. Zoller, ladies were invited and the program was both interesting and educational. The business was postponed until the December meeting.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Florists' Association met for the monthly business meeting at the home of the secretary, Mrs. Edwin P. Wilson, 136 Edgerton street, November 9. After the usual business was finished, a happy social time was spent and refreshments were served by the hostess.

Stephen Green, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was in town November 8, en route for Cleveland. He managed to take a few orders away with him.

Frank Bohnke reports exceedingly active business, with a heavy run of funeral work.

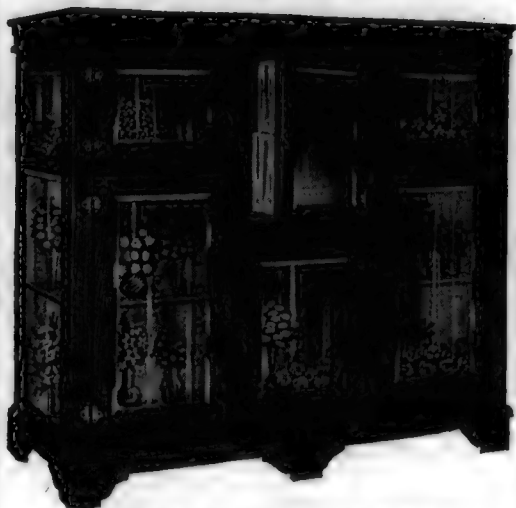

The seventy-sixth birthday of H. E. Wilson was celebrated November 9. He was the recipient of several gifts and many called to extend their good wishes. On account of poor health, he is not as active in the business as he used to be.

James Vick's Sons have found that the sale of bulbs has been greater than in any previous October. They consider themselves fortunate in having enough stock to supply so enormous a demand. They received a good-sized order this week from Spain.

J. B. Keller Sons had an especially beautiful window decoration last week. Huge vases of Beauty roses, with a quantity of short-stemmed white chrysanthemums, made an elegant display.

The Market.

The cut flower market is not in a satisfactory condition. The retailers assert that business is below normal for the season of the year. The wholesalers are unable to realize good prices on much of their stock. The growers find the returns low except in a few cases where certain varieties are scarce or the quality is unusually fine. The supply of flowers, the best judges think, is smaller than that of a week ago. The most difficult flowers to market today are white chrysanthemums and white roses. Of course, these conditions will always prevail more or less during the fall, when there are enough chrysanthemums to do all the business, with little or no help from other flowers; throw the other flowers in and an overloaded market is the result. Indications, however, point to an improvement.

The oversupply of white chrysanthemums is most seriously felt by that sterling exhibition variety, William Turner. While fine for exhibition, William Turner is not up to market requirements, strange as this may seem. Ivory and Charles Rager also have suffered, to a lesser degree. The strength of the mums lies in the yellow. The strength of the yellow lies in Major Bonnaffon. This old-time variety is facile princeps. Maud Dean is in; Crane, the Chadwicks and Yellow Mrs. Jerome Jones and, in fact, all of the mid-season and late varieties of note, save one or two, are in. There has been a heavy demand for pompons, but that seems over now for the moment. Supply has exceeded demand. Violets have come to the fore under the influence of the football games, with their inducements for enterprise. My critics love to say that Phil is misty; so, for their special benefit, it should be explained that the street men bought heavily of violets November 12 and went straight to New Haven, Conn. They paid the market prices, too, which were higher than at any time this season, though that is not saying much. Orchids and gardenias continue scarce at high prices, which is surprising, for the demand for them is not well sustained. The odds and ends, pansies, mignonettes, bouvardias and calendulas, meet with support. White lilac has come; so have pink lilies. The supply of carnations is smaller. Their quality improves. Roses are selling fairly in face of the competition. The novelties lead. The supply of valley is a little smaller as the old crop disappears. Easter lilies are good and hard to sell. Orchid peas have arrived in sufficient numbers to mention. Current Events.

Everybody who went to Cleveland speaks highly of the great flower show that is just over. Robert A. Craig says that it was a wonderful show in every respect. Fine exhibits, a splendid attendance—both due to the untiring energy of the show committee, which left nothing undone that could aid in success. Elmer W. Gaehring admired the way the show was advertised and arranged, and especially the loyalty of the retailers. All who exhibited kept their exhibits in perfect condition throughout the show. Joseph G. Neidinger said that it was the best paying show that he had ever attended. Generally, shows, Mr. Neidinger said, he considered as advertising expense, and many of them were poor advertising at that, but this show was a profitable investment, most encouraging to the exhibitor. Samuel S. Pennock commented on the original method of labeling, so to speak, each member of the profession so that any one of the 500 might know any other, should they chance to meet. Philadelphia salutes Cleveland. May our spring show be a worthy successor to her fall one.

Mr. Westcott's Views.

The question, "Can Philadelphia retail florists be induced to exhibit at the National Flower Show in Convention hall next spring?" was put to John Westcott. As a former member of the firm of Pennock Bros. and a life-long retail florist, John Westcott is peculiarly fitted to answer this query. Here is his reply:

"You cannot expect the retail florists of Philadelphia to exhibit in the National Flower Show with a space charge of $1 per square foot. The exhibits should not be considered as trade displays, but as drawing features that will add to the interest of the show. The way to get them is to go to each one and ask him, personally, to make a display for his own sake and for the credit of the town. Do not charge him anything for the space, but, on the contrary, guarantee him one-third of the amount that he expends on his display. This plan, properly carried out, will bring a good retail exhibit that will draw florists and their employees from all over the state to the show. These people will take more interest in such displays than they will in all the rest of the show put together."

The Chestnut Hill Show.

The sixteenth annual exhibition of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society was held in the Lutheran Parish building on the evening of November 9 and throughout the following day and evening. The hall proved inadequate to accommodate the fine stock offered for exhibition. Crowding was necessary; also small aisles. Still, a party, or a show, or anything else always seems better crowded than empty. The Chestnut Hill show was no exception to this rule and everybody said that it was a great success. There were fine chrysanthemums, potted and cutted, as a good dominie once solemnly put it. There was sharp competition in the decorative classes for so many square feet of foliage and flowering plants.

The leading prize-winners were Stephen Ager, a silver cup; G. Hans Reuter, a gold watch. John Seule, James Williams, James Bell, Hugh Scott and James Thompson were first prize-winners. Roses, carnations, fruits and vegetables vied with each other in adding interest to the show and glory to the growers. The Henry F. Michell Co. had a handsome seed exhibit.

Chestnut Hill was justly proud of its effort, an effort so well conceived and executed that it is calculated to stir envy in the hearts of the Main Liners. For was there not a list of patronesses on the program that would have done credit to the assemblies themselves, and that did much to bring the flower-loving spirits of the 400 to see the show, and of the 400,000 to see them and see the show? The judges were George E. Campbell, George Burton, Thomas Brown, William Morton, William Boice, Edward Cox and William Woltenmote.

Various Notes.

The National Flower Show committee rooms were opened at 1205 Arcade building, Chestnut street, above Juniper street, November 15. All information pertaining to the show can be obtained there.

Recent visitors include Miss Baumgarten, of Milwaukee, Wis.; H. J. Huesman, with his two sons, of Reading, Pa., guests of Stuart H. Miller; Mrs. L. H. Dundore Moore, of Lancaster, Pa.; D. M. Goldberg, of South Bethlehem, Pa.; F. R. Sykes and Mrs. Sykes, Charles Yeager, of Allentown, Pa., and Paul Blackman, of Reading, Pa.

The Leo Niessen Co. reports the arrival of Lilium splendens, pink lilies, white lilac and stevias.

Convention hall beds into winter dress. Choice evergreens and specimen box-wood have been tastefully planted.

Two fine exhibits were accidentally omitted in the lists giving the entrants at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society show. The one was a bulb display by Hosea Waterer, of Philadelphia, at the west end of the hall, and the other a collection of evergreens at the east entrance, from Adolph Muller, of Norristown, Pa. Phil.

The Market.

The proverbial Indian summer days were with us last week. The chrysanthemum growers are busy harvesting the mid-season varieties. Chieftain gave a good account of itself. Alice Byron and Chas. Rager in white and Bonnaffon in yellow are standards. The Chadwicks, Nonin and Seidewitz give promise of first-quality blooms.

Various Notes.

Miss Catharine Siebert, formerly manager of the B. F. Barr store, has accepted a position with Mrs. George G. Goldbach, of North Duke street. Miss Siebert had been in charge of the B. F. Barr store for several years and had been employed by that concern for more than eight years.

The property of George G. Goldbach was offered at public sale November 13, but was suddenly withdrawn. The greenhouse property includes greenhouses covering 37,150 feet of glass.

Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, is installing a new Kroeschell boiler.

Last week's local papers give much credit to Mrs. Albert M. Herr, who, as chairman of an executive committee, successfully conducted at Hotel Brunswick a card party, which was attended by more than 300 women, for the benefit of the Lancaster Free Kindergarten Association.

Edward Marshall, of Kennett Square, called on the trade November 11.

A recent call on W. B. Girvin, of Leola, revealed a splendid crop of carnations. Some choice Mrs. Akehurst are being cut. Pink Delight, Gloriosa and Matchless were specially well grown. Chas. Rager and Bonnaffon mums are grown in quantity, as well as Nonin, for later blooming.

At the Harry B. Weaver place, at Bird in Hand, several beds of Gorgeous are producing extra choice blooms. A house of Benora looks like a good investment. Nelrose snapdragon is as fine as can be seen at this time of the year.

averaged up the week's business well. Carnations are in good supply and fine for this time of the year, but they are extremely soft, due to the hot sun. The same heat has brought some beautiful mums to the market. All the department stores are featuring cheap flower sales.

The Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. observed its fall opening November 13. There was music, with roses as souvenirs, to attract the crowds. The event was highly successful.

Henry Smith loaned his window to a local candy factory during Made in Grand Rapids week and the candy and flowers made a pleasing combination.

The Benjamin Avenue Nursery Co. recently completed an addition to its greenhouses, 30x100 feet, and has installed new boilers.

Among the local florists who went to the Cleveland flower show were Henry Smith, Edward Freyling, of Freyling & Mendels; Miss Margaret Norburg, of Alfred Hannah & Sons; Miss Frances Robinson, of Henry Smith's store. The party motored to Detroit in Mr. Freyextravagant displays, now that chrysanthemums are plentiful, and several large funerals helped them out last week.

Various Notes.

The Cleveland show attracted about every grower and retailer from this district. They all report a splendid show. A. W. Smith and his sons went by automobile, which gave them an opportunity to visit many of the greenhouses along the road, including their own.

Pittsburgh has had a few visitors, among them S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia; L. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I.; Mr. Baumgarten, Milwaukee; B. J. Dudley, Parkersburg, W. Va.

Phipps Conservatory, Schenley park, opened its chrysanthemum show November 7. Henry Phipps, who presented the city with these houses, was a visitor, with a number of friends, and had the opportunity of seeing how Pittsburgh appreciates a good thing, as there were thousands standing in line.

The latest gossip among the private gardeners is of a new club. They call themselves, I believe, the Western Pennsylvania Horticultural Association. The president is Mr. Allen, superintendent of Homewood cemetery; David Fraser, gardener for H. C. Frick, is vice-president.

Ray Thomas Page, who has been auditor for the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. for seven years, died November 9. Mr. Page was 29 years of age and was well known among the trade. He had been in bad health for about a year and left for a good vacation September 1, but had been confined to bed ever since. He leaves, besides his wife, his mother, sister and a brother. Clarke.

The Market.

Last week closed with a welcome change of weather. There has been plenty of rain and the temperature is much lower. The warm weather of the last six weeks brought everything forward too fast, and last week saw more flowers than could be sold in spite of the unusually heavy demand. Chrysanthemums are more than plentiful; I saw wagons on the street peddling pot plants for the first time this season.

I have heard the complaint at various places I visited while away from the city, that mums were not up to the standard in size this season, but from what I saw in the retail stores on my return, there seems to be no such trouble here. The mums are fully up to last year's high standard, at least those that are blooming at present. Roses are not so numerous, but there are plenty of them and they are of excellent quality. Hoosier Beauty is arriving with longer stems and the blooms are larger. Cosmos has come back, the frosts of the last few nights having done them no harm. The bulb business continues heavy; trees and hardy shrubbery are selling better than ever before at this season. Privet for hedges is beginning to move well.

Nashville has another florist in the person of Mr. Trichler, who has had charge of the landscape work of the Louisville & Nashville railroad for years. He is well known throughout the south, being the author of a book on gardening that has had a wide circulation. He recently purchased a place near Sylvan park, on which he has erected a range of three houses, each 23x100 feet. He will grow vegetables this fall and in the spring the houses will be filled with vegetables and pot plants. Mr. Trichler also will hustle for landscape work, in which he is proficient.

L. Savage, who has a range of green-houses near Riverside park, is contemplating adding bedding plants to his list. He has grown only vegetables in the past. F. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week the retail demand was exceedingly light and the market was forced to handle tremendous shipments. Chrysanthemums came in so fast and so many it was "high tide" all the time. Saturday night every icebox was crowded and enough stock remained unsold to supply any possible requirements of the present week.

The mums are perfect, but few command the values of other years. Flowers that last season were bargains at $4 per dozen now are fortunate to be chosen at half that figure and $2.50 seems to be the top for anything but the big prize blooms. The favorites now are Glenview, Harvard, Brutus, Roman Gold, Wm. Turner, Appleton, Enguehard, the Chadwicks, Alice Byron, Bonnaffon and Timothy Eaton. There remain also no end of anemones, pompons and hardy mums, for which the demand is light.

The rose supply is enormous. It is a shame to see fine flowers of Richmond, Shawyer, Killarney, Ophelia and even American Beauty and Sunburst remaining unsold, or else disposed of to the bargain hunters at summer rates. Carnations are selling at from 50 cents to $2 per hundred, the higher figure obtainable only for the specialties and the novelties.

and valley are steady. Sweet peas are improving. Violets, for which a large demand was anticipated November 13, because of the Yale-Princeton football game, were a tremendous disappointment. The market was flooded with them and the early figure of 75 cents per hundred, which was asked by common consent, fell rapidly to 50 cents and then to 30 cents, and even at this concession thousands remained unsold.

The Market.

The market for last week was satisfactory, although business was not exactly rushing. Chrysanthemums, the large-flowering types, and the pompons, are in good supply and there is no trouble in disposing of this stock, as they are being used for most of the social functions and decorations.

Carnations are plentiful, but have moved rather slowly. The glut on carnations is caused by the popularity of pompons, which are taking their place. The growers are hoping that the chrysanthemum season will soon be over, as it will be if we have much more warm weather. Good carnations can be had from $2 to $3 per hundred. Roses of good quality are selling well, bringing from $4 to $10 per hundred. The violet season is in full sway and the growers are sending in some excellent bunches, but several retailers are ordering from California. Although the California violets are between four and five days on the road, they arrive in good condition. The California violets are without any odor whatever. Lily of the valley is selling well and the supply is sufficient to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Minneapolis Lady Florists' Club was held at the home of Mrs. F. Busch, November 9. An enjoyable time was reported.

On a visit to Will Bros. this week, the stock was found to be in the pink of condition. The greenhouses are devoted mostly to carnations and violets, although a considerable number of roses and chrysanthemums are grown. Their violets are extremely good this year.

L. S. Donaldson's greenhouses sent in the first Paper Whites of the season this week.

The Whitted Floral Co. was busy this week with numerous party and other decorations. Pompons were used exclusively.

The Minge Floral Co.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some fine valley, which finds a ready market.

The Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouses have been cutting some extra fine chrysanthemums this fall and Mr.
Boyce, the foreman, says that they are bringing good prices.

Henry Rosacker, son of Hans Ro-sacker, has "taken unto himself a wife," who was Miss Lena Graff. The trade congratulates Mr. Rosacker.

Perl Bros., landscape architects and florists, have discontinued their store at 1722 Hennepin avenue and have sold the fixtures. They will devote all their time to landscape work.

J. J. Lindsay, of the Hiawatha Gardens, left for a hunting trip this week.

Carl Christensen, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., was taken suddenly ill November 11 and he was rushed to the Swedish hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis. His condition is as good as can be expected.
Mr. Christensen was formerly with Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.

The florists' school, which is under the direction of the Minneapolis Florists' Club, is progressing rapidly. The new Central High school, where the meetings are being held on Thursday evenings, is well adapted for this work, because of its classroom, which is connected with the experimental greenhouses and laboratories. The topic under discussion this week was "Potted Plants for Christmas," and Wm. Vasatka, of Donaldson's, handled the subject well. The topic for next week will be "The Selling of Thanksgiving Stock," with other papers in connection with the selling end of the business.

The Park Board's chrysanthemum show opened a blaze of color, and Superintendent Wirth is to be congratulated on his excellent display of over 400 different varieties. This is the sixth year of the show.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Notwithstanding the ideal weather of last week and the holding of the annual fall show of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, there was a falling off in the volume of business. There were no large social functions of any kind and no prominent funerals, so that on the whole the market was unsatisfactory.
Chrysanthemums are coming in rapidly.
Carnations are becoming more plentiful and of better quality; violets are short in stem and moving slowly. Next to the mums the favorites are tiny rosebuds, yellow and pink, and bouvardias, especially the double pink.

Horticultural Exhibition.

The annual fall exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held November 11 and 12 at the Narragansett hotel. There were about forty exhibitors, representing displays numbering more than 300, including the amateur and professional classes. Along the line of popularizing the exhibition the committee had arranged numerous "settings" that were novel and attractive. One of the most conspicuous of these was a bridal scene in which mums formed the chief feature. Awards were made as follows:

On roses, firsts to Burke & Burns and Warwick Greenhouses; on carnations, firsts to Fred Hoffman, Warwick Greenhouses, Maplehurst Greenhouses, R. J.
Taylor and John Marshall; on violets, firsts to Warwick Greenhouses; on chrysanthemums, firsts to Frederick Hoffman, Warwick Greenhouses, Albert Holscher, Johnston Bros. and Rhode Island Hospital; seconds to E. E. Howard, C. O. Childs, Warwick Greenhouses, Frederick Hoffman and Rhode Island

No tidings have yet been received of John W. Seamans, proprietor of the Quality Flower Shop, 144 Main street, Pawtucket, who dropped out of sight October 22. The stock and fixtures of his store were sold at auction by a sheriff to M. J. Leach & Sons, who will continue the business.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week mums were plentiful, the bright, warm days having brought them out in full force. While the demand was not so brisk as it should have been, it was steady throughout the week. There was a large supply of cut stock all the week, which had to be sacrificed in order to be disposed of. This even applied to the mums. The five wholesale houses taxed the capacity of their refrigerators to hold unsold stock after the morning sales. Among the fine cut mums seen were Eaton, Golden Wedding, Chadwick, Golden Chadwick, White Bonnaillon and Bonnaillon. The pompons did not sell well and the market became glutted with them by the end of the week.

In roses only the extra fancy sold at fair prices. Some excellent stock in Killarney and Richmond were left over daily, selling only in big lots and at low prices. Carnations, too, were far too plentiful to be consumed by the local trade. When the downtown retailers sold them at 10 cents per dozen the question was, "What did they pay for them?" Violets also had a poor demand. Sweet peas went well in the fancy Spencers. Among the other flowers Paper Whites, Easter lilies and valley, as usual, held their own. All greens had a splendid demand.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis florists who visited the flower shows at Chicago and Cleveland are home again and say that both shows were of a high order and that the hospitality shown them on every hand was most pleasing. The members of the show committee, who saw both shows, say they will have a good report to make on the shows at this week's club meeting. W. W. Ohlweiler and Adolph Jaenicke, heads of this committee, say they never saw such well staged shows—and they have seen many.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt was married November 11 to William M. Boaz at her home, 7637 Florissant avenue, with only the immediate relatives present. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Fred H. Meinhardt. Mr. and Mrs. Boaz departed on an extended honeymoon trip through the south and west. They will be at home to their friends after December 15 at their home on Benny road and Chester avenue, Kirkwood.

The Retail Florists' Association did not hold a meeting on its regular night, November 15, according to the report of Fred C. Weber, Jr., the secretary, the reason being that most of the members were away.

The Lady Florists' Circle was entertained at the home of Mrs. George B. Windler November 10 and spent a most enjoyable afternoon. Mrs. Fred W. Bruenig will entertain them at the next month's meeting.

Miss Theresa Badaracco had a shipment of cut flowers stolen last week. The express man left the box at the Frederick G. Grossart, son of Gustave Grossart, of Belleville, Ill., who has been a student at the Missouri Botanical Garden, having received his scholarship through the St. Louis Florists' Club, has completed his term with honors and is now head gardener at the Valhalla cemetery.

Abraham Newland, landscape gardener and florist, of Pittsburgh, spent last week in the city. Mr. Newland says he may make his home here.

Roland Hammer, who is with his father-in-law, Fred C. Weber, was the buyer in the wholesale district last week in the absence of Fred C. Weber, Jr., and showed good judgment for a beginner in the selection of stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Guntly took in the big shows at Chicago and Cleveland last week. Mr. Guntly is a brother-in-law of the Windler boys and is quite a hustler in the decorative art.

Paul Scheider, one of our Clayton growers, had a big success with pot mums this season in the pompon varieties. Mr. Scheider says he sold the last of them last week at good prices.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, is cutting heavily of mums this season, all of which are fine quality blooms. Mr. Rowe will have a big crop of fancy sweet peas and carnations this winter.

W. S. Wells and his family were in Oxford, O., last week attending the funeral of Mrs. Wells' father, John Kapp, who was an old and retired florist at that place. Mr. Kapp was 71 years of age.

The overabundance of cut stock at the wholesale market every day last week caused the downtown retailers to buy heavily at low prices, making great window displays. The show windows of Grimm & Gorly, Mullanphy, Riessen, Foster and Siegel were the downtown attractions. Prices displayed were: Two dozen carnations for 25 cents; roses, 25 cents per dozen; mums, from 5 to 10 cents each. A large transient trade was reported by all. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The annual November slump is not yet over, but the chrysanthemum wave must soon recede and then florists will see better prices. I hear from many salesmen the remark that business was never so poor; their memories, however, fail them, for trade is decidedly better than a year ago, when prices for chrysanthemums were ruinously low. Business is fully as good at this season as that of two years ago, so that there is every reason to feel cheerful. There has been an unwieldy supply of chrysanthemums of late and the clean-up has not been so good as could have been wished. The leading sorts are Bonnaillon, Rager, Chieftain, Eaton, Yellow Eaton, Patty and Shrimpton. The new and strictly show varieties are little seen in the wholesale markets. Large quantities of pompons and singles are coming in. These grow in favor yearly. Roses have had a rather hard week. Most growers are off crop, which relieved conditions somewhat.

Beauties have moved slowly; so, in fact, have nearly all varieties, a good many short-stemmed flowers going at $5 per thousand.

Carnations have not improved in price, but have sold as low as 50 to 75 cents per hundred. Violets are in shorter supply and prices have stiffened.
Lilies are low and move sluggishly; so does lily of the valley. Yellow marguerites, which generally sell easily, have declined to half last week's prices, good flowers making only 50 cents per hundred. Sweet peas are not yet abundant. Their sale is hurt by the abundance of other flowers. Cattleyas are fewer in numbers, but prices run low. Gardenias are scarce, but sufficient for the demand.

There is an abundant supply of pansies, but sales are slow except for fancy stock. Owing to the mild fall, these have continued to bloom abundantly outdoors. Bouvardia Hum-boldtii is always a good seller; the pink varieties move more slowly. Narcissus Paper White appeared this week, but there is no great call for it as yet. In the way of pot plants, camellias, ericas, oranges, solanums, cyclamens, begonias, crotons, dracaenas and ferns are the leaders after chrysanthemums.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, November 23, the annual nomination of officers will take place. An expert from the Pilgrim Publicity Association will deliver a lecture, with stereopticon views, on "Advertising, the Light That Serves and Saves." M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., will be present and will speak on the coming convention of the National Association of Gardeners, to be held in Boston, December 9 and 10. There will be interesting exhibits of chrysanthemums and other flowers.

William R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, is getting a fine lot of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond. He has just finished a good crop of Ward and Russell, and Killarney Brilliant leaves nothing to be desired.

Among the pot mums coming in from W. H. Elliott, which are always well flowered, bushy, dwarf and free from stakes, are Garza, Brutus and Pink Caprice.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, has a grand lot of the old but brilliant pompon mum, Julie Lagravere, which is always in keen demand for the Harvard-Yale football game. Shrimpton is also grown for the same purpose. Bonaffon is grown more heavily than any other variety.

Penn had a charming window November 13, consisting of Ward and Sunburst roses banked at the ends with large vases of pink and yellow mums. The quantities of flowers seen at the Penn store on a Saturday morning cannot but excite surprise, but all are moved.

His yellow marguerites are coming in well.

A. H. Knight, of Shrewsbury, is a large shipper of high-grade mums. He is careful to wrap each flower in tissue paper, and his flowers always arrive in fine shape. Charles Rager, Bonnaffon and Patty are his specialties.
A. H. Carr handles all his flowers.

All the houses of the W. W. Edgar Co. are filled to overflowing with choice holiday plants. Begonias never looked better, cyclamens are selling fast and poinsettias already have bracts well developed. Azaleas are being forced in large numbers for the holidays. Chrysanthemums have this season been of unusually fine quality.

The annual election of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held November 13, when the following officers were elected: President, Richard M. Saltonstall; vice-president, for two years, Walter Hunnewell; trustees for three years, George E. Barnard, W. C.
Endicott, A. F. Estabrook and J. K.
M. L. Farquhar. A. F. Estabrook,
Richard Hittinger, J. G. Jack, Thomas Roland and J. L. Smith constitute the nominating committee.

John McFarland is now cutting heavily of Bonnaffon mums. He has a fine lot of valley and his large batch of poinsettias are developing their bracts well.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

CHARLES J. BOLGIANO has been elected a director of the Merchants' Club, of Baltimore.

THE record of the speeders' court at Chicago for November 16 reveals the name of John C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co. He must have been after onion sets.

JOSEPH EDMUNDSON, manager of the California Seed Growers' Association, was a visitor in Chicago this week. Mr. Edmundson, who is on his annual eastern trip, reports easy selling.

THE capital stock of the Nebraska Seed Co., of Omaha, Neb., has been increased from $50,000 to $150,000, according to amendments to the articles of incorporation. Henry G. von Windheim is president.

THE executive board of the Idaho Pure Seed Association held a meeting at Caldwell, Idaho, October 23, to outline plans for the annual state seed show. The members of the board present at the meeting were: J. W. Sessions, of Pocatello; H. W. Hochbaum, of Boise; E. A. Gypson and C. C. Tobias, of Caldwell; L. L. Young, of Nampa.

WILLIAM W. BARNARD, president of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, became suddenly quite ill while at dinner November 14 at his home, 1924 West One Hundred and Third street, Morgan Park. He was unconscious for several hours and his condition is regarded as critical, although latest reports from the Presbyterian hospital are to the effect that he is somewhat improved.

ACCORDING to S. F. Leonard, president of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, the bean situation is still critical. By way of making the condition more apparent, he cited the fact that the normal white bean crop in Michigan is from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels. This year the loss of navy beans in that state is 8,000,000 bushels. The situation in Michigan may be taken as typical. Navy beans are now bringing $4.75 per bushel in that state and none are allowed to be shipped that are not hand-picked.

BERMUDA ONION.

Consul George K. Stiles has made the following report on Bermuda onion seed shipments from Teneriffe:

"The 1915 export season for Canary Island onions and onion seed closed, so far as shipments to the United States are concerned, August 28, showing a small reduction from last year's figures in the quantities of seed exported. However, a slight increase in prices has made the values approximately the same, so that shippers and growers are well satisfied with the general results. "As declared at the Teneriffe con-

Announcement to the Seed Trade

Starting with the 1916 growing season, Stokes Seed Farms Co., Inc., will grow the following New Jersey Seed Crops under annual contract:

PEPPER
KALE

TURNIP
FIELD CORN

We are growing these for our own Market Garden Trade, and have every reason to feel that we can be of service to other seed houses whose trade demands the very best. Our qualifications for this work include: First, men who thoroughly understand seed growing; Second, unrivaled climatic and soil conditions, and Third, the viewpoint of retail seedsmen. The last named qualification is perhaps the most important, for we are in a position to realize the necessity of true stocks. When men save seed as a by-product of some other industry, sometimes this point is lost sight of. Inquiries will receive close attention.

TIME CLAUSES IN CONTRACTS.

The Delaware Superior court recently considered the right to recover damages for claimed breach of a contract to buy a quantity of "strictly prime clover seed, imported 1912 crop, at $8.50 per hundred pounds, f. o. b. cars New York; July shipment from Europe; to be delivered in New York as early as possible in August, maybe on the fifth." (Weishut vs. Layton & Layton, 93 Atlantic Reporter, 1057.) The jury returned a verdict in favor of the buyers, under the following instructions from the court:

When goods subject to trade fluctuations in price are contracted to be sold, and time for delivery is specified, delivery within that time is an essential element of the contract.

Before a seller can recover damages on the theory that the buyer broke his contract to purchase, he must show that he was able, ready and willing to perform his part of the contract. In other words, repudiation of a contract to buy seed does not subject the buyer to legal liability unless the seller shows that he had the goods from which he could have made delivery in fulfillment of the contract.

When a buyer wrongfully repudiates his agreement, the seller may sell the goods in the open market at the best price reasonably obtainable, and hold the buyer for the excess of the agreed price above the net proceeds of such resale. S.

WITH THE CANNERS.

A meeting of the Indiana State Canners' Association was held in the Claypool hotel, Indianapolis, November 11 and 12. The meeting was well attended, several of the large seed houses being represented. Among those in attendance were A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Charles Guelph, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., and Detroit, Mich., and Alec Mather, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn. The canners report that canned sweet corn is practically cleared up and the present market stands at about 90 cents. Canned tomatoes are also scarce, selling at 70 cents, with a prospect of higher prices. The contributing cause to this condition is the European war situation, which is taking care of all the available canned corn and canned tomatoes procurable. As a result, the growers of sweet corn and tomatoes for canning purposes will greatly increase their plantings for next year.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The Cumberland Seed Co., of Nashville, is opening a retail store in the Market square and intends to use the present building as a warehouse. The store undoubtedly will be of great convenience to the company's patrons.

Mann & Hodge, successors to Reed & Hodge, of Palatka, Fla., have received a shipment of garden peas from the north—plump seed, free from weevil and, with one exception, a full delivery. Mr. Mann is a brother of Representative Mann and is working hard to keep the farmer posted by means of government bulletins.

Crenshaw Bros., of Tampa, Fla., are making a drive on Bermuda onion seed, which, being rather scarce, will soon be wanted by their retail trade.

Albert Walton, of the Walton Seed Co., Jacksonville, Fla., says the injunction, "In the morning sow thy seed," was difficult to carry out owing to the heavy rains. This was the first season he experienced a setback, but he believes this winter will be a good one for Florida produce. L. Cameron speaks along similar lines. He is a pioneer in the seed trade here. Reports from the citrus lands bespeak a rather short crop of fruit.

The E. A. Martin Seed Co., of Jacksonville, is preparing an elaborate catalogue, being much encouraged by the re-

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Flowers are more plentiful than at any time this fall, but prices have not declined as expected. Chrysanthemums were strongest last week. Bonnaffon, Chadwick and Eaton were the principal varieties. Yellow, according to all reports, will be scarce for Thanksgiving, on account of the warm weather. Even the Frick mums are now half developed. Roses are not in as heavy supply as they have been, but prices remain the same. There are enough of them to meet the demand and the quality is of the best. The receipts of carnations were heavier than in previous weeks and there was an improvement in the quality, in both size and color. Violets and valley are plentiful and there is a good supply of Easter lilies. The demand is light in comparison with the supply. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. Chrysanthemum plants were in good supply and the demand for them was strong.

Various Notes.

C. E. Grey, who now has the W. A. Ruhl greenhouses, is sending in a nice lot of carnations and sweet peas. He says that next year practically the whole place will be devoted to cut flowers. He now has part of the place in vegetables. Claude Huckleberry is in charge of the carnations and sweet peas.

Three large funerals last week kept the florists busy and saved the market from a glut of flowers. There were a good many wagon-loads of cut flowers sent to the cemetery.

T. J. Noll & Co. are receiving a large quantity of stock and the demand at times makes them hustle to fill the orders as they come in. There now are over forty consignors who send all of their stock to the company. Orders for supplies are heavy.

Henry Kusik & Co. report that they are receiving a good supply of stock and that the shipping business was especially good last week. A fine lot of mums from the north are on sale this week.

Samuel Murray had a heavy run of funeral work the last three days of the week. A mistake was made in a previous report which stated that Mr. Murray had 100 plants of the new begonia, Mrs. Peterson. It should have read fifty plants. Mr. Read, who is with the store force, attended the flower show at Cleveland last week.

Arthur Newell was busy last week with decorations for hotel parties. The sale of cut flowers over the counter was the best he ever had.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports that last week was the busiest the firm ever had in funeral work. Mr. Rock attended the Chicago and Cleveland flower shows.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a heavy run of out-of-town funeral work last week. Stock from the greenhouses is coming in heavily.

Jacob Hepting is sending in some of

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The Exposition Gardens.

A copious rain, followed by warm sunshine, made doubly brilliant the wonderful gardens at the San Diego Exposition. This was possibly a fitting rejoicing of Mother Nature over the completed efforts of the good people of Los Angeles, who, appreciating the wonderful work of their sister city, San Diego, have raised a fund that will insure the continuance of the San Diego Exposition for another year from January 1, 1916.

All trees, shrubs and plants of the gardens are as fresh and as bright as when the exposition opened at the first of the year, all stock showing a marvelous growth and perfection. The poinsettias, interspersed with shrubs along each side of the avenues, are showing color; many will be in bloom at Thanksgiving, all of them at Christmas. In the meantime other plants and shrubs keep up a riot of color: Salvia, bright and gay; pentstemon in its prime; ageratum a mass of bloom, with stalks full of color, running up two and one-half to three feet.

Dahlias in second crop are as good and as perfect as the first crop. The geraniums are better now than during the summer. Although this is not the season for the queen of flowers, roses still are splendid in every way. Cannas, planted among the trees and shrubs, are bright and showy. Canna Firebird, planted as an exhibit by a seedsman, has attracted unusual attention. People who have not cared for the canna have been greatly interested in this variety. Firebird does more than well in this climate.

The formal gardens planted out and cared for by Captain Gray, for the seven southern counties of California, have been awarded the grand prize.

The acacias planted both in San Diego and at the exposition are full of buds, promising to burst suddenly into showers of gold.

Seemingly, all plants and shrubs are making an unusual effort, putting their best foot forward to surpass, if possible, in 1916, their marvelous showing of 1915. F. E. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Probably nowhere in the western hemisphere, outside of San Francisco, would the coronation of the new mikado of Japan have any distinct effect on the flower market. Here, however, this event resulted in the closing, November 11, of the California Flower Market, through which is moved the great bulk of the chrysanthemums and carnations grown around San Francisco. The trade felt little inconvenience, however, as there was ample opportunity to put in extra stock the previous day, and, except for the one day, the offerings have been quite heavy. In general, the market is in a little firmer condition. The last week brought a nice rain, followed by the first touch of frost, which has already finished the dahlias and will soon put an end to all outside summer flowers, though rather beneficial to the violets. At retail there are still many decorations, and the small house and counter trade is picking up, while the eastern shipping movement is as large as ever.

The early mums are now going off crop and several of the late kinds show further improvement. Bonnaffon is having a great run. Outdoor mums were hurt but little by the rain and have been moving well, especially while the Japanese market was closed. Roses of nearly all varieties are good, but the cut is hardly so large as last week, while a larger demand cleans up all offerings early, at advanced prices. Cecile Brunner is much sought for, being wanted for shipment as well as local use, and Ophelia is in fair supply and immensely popular. Valley is coming in better again. The cut of orchids continues fine and includes a fair number of varieties, though Cattleya labiata predominates. Some cypripediums are used to good effect in basket work. The cut of gardenias is limited. Offerings of flowering plants are not yet plentiful, and they, as well as ferns and foliage plants, are in increasing demand.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held November 6. As at the previous meeting, one of the matters of greatest interest was the increasing number of members from the trade outside of San Francisco. Those proposed for membership at this meeting were: Fred Howard, Los Angeles; H. Kruckeberg, Los Angeles; John Young, secretary of the S. A. F.; Henry W. Turner, Montebello;

William Hertrich, San Gabriel, and F. Burns, San Rafael.

H. Plath, reporting for the program committee, said that all the souvenir convention programs had been mailed to the S. A. F. members, and all bills in connection therewith had been paid. On behalf of the flower show committee, he reported a successful show, especially from the standpoint of attendance.

The matter of affiliation with the Society of American Florists came up and mention was made of the membership requirements. It was decided to appoint a committee to look over the membership list and see whether the requirements could be met. Frederic Bertrand, John Gill, Eric James, W. A. Hofinghoff and Mr. Eldred were appointed as this committee.

It was announced that nominations of officers for the following year would be made at the December meeting, and the society voted to hold the annual smoker at that meeting instead of in January, as in the past. As December 4, the regular date for the meeting, will be the closing day of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, it was decided to hold the meeting a week later. James Keegan was appointed chairman of the smoker committee. High appreciation was expressed of the recent reception given by the Ladies' Auxiliary, and it was hoped that such affairs would be of frequent occurrence. Dr. D. E. Van Dyke, of the University of California, gave a lecture on "The Insect Enemies of Trees and Shrubs." As an exhibit for the evening, H. Plath brought a large 4-year-old specimen of Asplenium Nidus-avis, which was given ninety-five points.

rowed down to a few of the entries and that the judges are nearing a final decision, which will be announced soon after the close of the exposition.

T. A. Monroe, who has been in charge of the exposition nursery, has been appointed salesman of the stock to be removed from the grounds. He will have a vast amount of material to dispose of and it will probably take a good while to clean it all up. Mr. Monroe was formerly one of the Golden Gate park force.

During the closed day of the California Flower Market, C. Kooyman, whose store is over the market, had the distribution of a large part of the day's cut of carnations. However, he handled only the better grades, the cheaper stock being discarded.

Burns & Co., of San Rafael, have given the name Alaska to their new white seedling dahlia, mentioned in The Review a few weeks ago.

F. Pelicano says his dahlia crop is all over. He will soon begin digging the bulbs, of which he has sold a much larger number than usual.

The famous Liberty Bell left San Francisco as it came in, bedded in flowers, and the flowers were furnished on both occasions by Pelicano, Rossi & Co. The decoration for the departure, November 11, consisted principally of yellow mums. About twenty automobiles for the escort were decorated with the same flowers, two big sprays to each machine.

November 16 will be the first anniversary of B. M. Joseph's flower shop, on Grant avenue, and arrangements are being made to celebrate in a fitting manner the end of a highly successful year.

A. O. Stein had several decorations in the Palace hotel last week. A notable one was for a Japanese affair in celebration of the mikado's coronation, on the evening of November 10, with tables for 250 people. All shades of yellow mums were the feature. The following night a somewhat similar decoration was put in for a National Guard affair.

The E. Gill Nursery Co., of Berkeley, is exceedingly busy with shipments of nursery stock, and is also getting a fine cut of Irish Elegance roses, most of which are coming to the San Francisco shops.

The Francis Floral Co. takes great pride in its new delivery automobile, the body of which was built and decorated according to a special design worked out by F. Schlotzhauer, the proprietor. The body is painted a moss vinced that every florist ought to have one, as it saves an immense amount of time and trouble. His scheme is to teach all the boys in the store to run it, so it can be kept in almost constant use. For Thanksgiving, he is getting up a line of Dutch market baskets in shades of old ivory, old rose and golden brown, in which he will make up packages of fruit and flowers.

The Market.

While one or two favorably placed retailers say they did more business during October than usual for that month, the majority agree that the month was a disappointing one. One of the most prominent retailers of the city says that his sales this season are smaller, both in number and value, by at least twenty-five per cent. Another reports that October was the first one that did not show an advance over October of the year previous, since his concern started in business. The wholesalers, on the other hand, say that the shipping business has been more than brisk, while the growers say they have nothing to complain of.

The flowers generally are better now than for some time back, with the exception of mums. The later varieties of chrysanthemums are not so good as the earlier ones. Roses are excellent in every particular and carnations are good. Orchids are coming in much more freely and the quality is above the average. Valley is scarce and of fair quality. Plant and nursery sales have been benefited by the recent rains and the stock is greatly improved in appearance. Asparagus plumosus is a little on the short side, but other greens are plentiful. Violets are at their best now and the supply is about even with the demand. Catalina holly has already made its appearance and an attempt is being made to popularize it for Thanksgiving. The berries are ripening unusually early this year and this holly is likely to be plentiful. Another green likely to be drawn on for decorations this year is the native juniper. Its grayish berries on the deep green foliage are especially attractive. A branch of this juniper on my desk has been cut nearly a month, yet the foliage still is fresh and the berries persistent.

Various Notes.

L. H. Freeman, of the Freeman-Lewis Co., has returned from his honeymoon trip to Honolulu and is at home at Hollywood. He reports having a most enjoyable time both at the islands and at the San Francisco fair, which he and Mrs. Freeman visited on their return trip.

Reeve Darling, of Darling's Flower Shop, said that at the recent opening of a large store nearby he had the largest amount of work his concern has ever carried out at a single opening.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., who has been twice at Murrietta Springs for a cure for rheumatism, is now in the Angeles hospital with partial paralysis of both legs. When seen by the writer he said he was suffering little pain. This confinement comes hard to a man of his active habits, especially at the time when his Christmas plants, of which he makes a specialty, need attention. Mrs. Gutting, who is always active in the business, is keeping things going smoothly.

Polder & Groen are propagating carnations more heavily than ever. Last year, owing to the excellence of their stock and packing methods, repeat orders kept them cleaned up and Mr. Groen says they had to turn down orders towards the end of the season.

Fred Sperry, manager of the L. A. Floral Co., says his concern is now shipping to points far east, including Rochester and Minneapolis. It will be interesting to see how these shipments arrive. Mr. Sperry is delighted with the change in quarters, for much more business has been done at the new place.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. has received a large consignment of new and rare herbaceous stock from Europe.

The H. N. Gage Co. is shipping a fine line of ferns and other pot plants to the local retailers from the Montebello nursery. Mr. Gage says that business is improving and that the bungalow on Whittier boulevard is about complete.

Howard & Smith are digging and balling roses from the new field on the Whittier road, which has been a great attraction to autoists. Judging by the way some of the lines of roses are thinning out, business must be good.

Inspector Edouart, of the horticultural commissioners' office, is one of the best posted men we have in the state on insect life and the means of destroying obnoxious pests, such as the various scales, mealy bug and other "critters." For this reason there should be a big crowd at the December meeting of the Los Angeles Horticultural Society, when Mr. Edouart will speak on this subject. Readers will kindly note that I am referring to Mr. Edouart's lecture as promised and, as the well known ad reads, "there's a reason." A flowery writer in one of "our 'steemed contemporaries'" occasionally refers in the past tense to events to come and gets early reports of things that never happen. I should be greatly embarrassed if anything of that kind appeared in this column, which is getting quite a reputation for absolute and unpardonable veracity.

S. Murata & Co. say that the violets are improving both in color and fragrance. This house is handling large consignments of orchids, and Mr. Murata says that the shipping business is quite brisk. H. R. Richards.

Business conditions show an improvement over those of the two preceding weeks. Several prominent social events and funerals have cleaned up the surplus stock and nothing has been wasted. Chrysanthemums are the leading flowers and are now in their prime. The most prominent varieties are Golden Eagle, Chas. Rager, Chieftain, Pennsylvania, Jerome Jones, Mrs. Weeks, Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick, Eaton and numerous varieties of pompons.

Cloudy weather has reduced the supply of roses and violets until there are only enough of them to satisfy the call. Cecile Brunners are particularly scarce. The leading varieties of roses are Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Mrs. Russell, the Killarneys, Sunburst, Mrs. Ward, Richmond, Lady Hillingdon and Fireflame. Cattleya labiata is of excellent quality and plentiful. Cypridiums have appeared. More carnations are coming in, with improved flowers and stems, but they are by no means overplentiful.

with cyclamens and begonias next on the list. Some azaleas are shown and celestial peppers are seen everywhere. Nurserymen are moving an unusually large quantity of stock. Seedsmen report a fair demand for bulbs. Florists are securing normal prices for their stock and little price-cutting is being done. There has been no frost in the vicinity of the city and salvia, cosmos and other outdoor flowers are still available.

Various Notes.

Samuel Roake was seen in town November 12 pushing the sale of his wild greens and moss.

J. H. Dundore, president of the Oregon Sweet Pea Society, was elected one of the directors of the 1916 rose festival. J. O. Convill, park superintendent, was appointed to the board by the city commissioners.

At one of the department stores standard varieties of 2-year-old Oregon-grown rose bushes are offered at 12½ cents each. The grower evidently did not figure on any profit when he sold the bushes to the store.

The Martin & Forbes Co. handled three large decorations November 10. One was for the banquet given by the Japanese in honor of the coronation of their mikado. The company has developed a pompon sport that has a pleasant odor, resembling honey. The new pompon is proving popular.

R. C. Cook said his business in potted plants had increased since the Woolworth store across the street had opened a plant department. S. W. W.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

The dull, rainy weather last week militated against the selling of many flowers and business, accordingly, has been dull. Several society functions and one or two large funerals have, however, tended to alleviate things a little and at no time has there been any glut of flowers. Chrysanthemums continue to occupy most attention and there is a good supply of them in all grades, with improved quality in the locally grown mums. There are fewer of the California blooms now being offered. Carnations are of better quality and, while the demand for them is subsidiary, there are more of them moving than heretofore. Outdoor flowers are now almost of the past, with the exception of dahlias. Of these good blooms still are being shown. Roses in large variety are arriving in fine condition, the demand for them being somewhat moderate. Pot plants are not overplentiful and are not in much variety. Orchids are in good supply and valley fairly plentiful. There is a demand for stevia, but none has appeared on the market.

Various Notes.

At the Florists' Club's meeting November 9 an interesting discussion took place regarding the enforcement of the new horticultural bill, and a committee was named to help the local inspector in procuring an assistant. The recently formed florists' information bureau also came up for discussion and the hope was expressed that florists in all parts of the state will lend their assistance in establishing this laudable institution. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

THE Pacific northwest is steadily coming forward in the matter of nursery stock production.

OVER the greater part of the country the 1915 growing season was exceptionally favorable, with the result that stock today not only is plentiful but good.

NURSEYMEN, when they meet, congratulate each other that the fall plantings by customers are making so much better a showing than was expected.

W. C. SLOCOCK, Woking, Surrey, England, says the season is rendered a difficult one, even for business with America, by high ocean freights, insurance and other factors.

IN spite of a rather good fall business, retail nurserymen are not pushing the wholesalers about stock for storage. Not only are the orders a bit slow in coming forward, but they are light.

V. A. VANICEK, of the Rhode Island Nurseries, Newport, R. I., has added fifteen acres on the East Main road, in Middletown, to the property purchased a year ago. He will plant the new holdings to evergreens.

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, has an unusual quantity of "addition" planting this season. For Kaiser & Co., to whom a tract of Peterson Woods was sold, a tract of 314 acres has required street planting. And there are numerous other new additions to the city that have come on the market this year, calling for many street trees.

ROOTING PRIVET AND SPIRÆA.

I should like to know how and when to root cuttings of Amoor River privet, Spiræa Van Houttei and the pink rambler, Dorothy Perkins. Any information will be appreciated.

D. K.—Mich.

Make the cuttings any time after the leaves have fallen. In the case of privet it may be necessary to strip the foliage. Make the cuttings of privet and spiræa eight to twelve inches long; even shorter ones will answer. Tie these in bundles of 100 each and pack in damp soil on a cellar floor over winter. They will be calloused before spring, when they can be run out in lines, allowing only two or three inches to remain above ground. Dorothy Perkins can be treated in the same way, although you will have better success in rooting it in a close frame in July or August, from half ripened wood; also under glass in winter from forced plants.

The Market.

Business last week showed a decided improvement over that of the preceding seven days. Roses, while not so plentiful, are of better grade. The prices obtained for them are not what they should be, for chrysanthemums have knocked the bottom out of all sales. Good carnations are to be had at $1.50 to $2 per hundred, these also feeling the effects of an overloaded chrysanthemum market.

Some exceptionally fine American Beauty roses are being offered and these are in fair demand at $3 per dozen. Sawyer is good and the new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, is attracting considerable attention. Violets are moving better. Easter lilies hang fire and there is practically no call for

The Market.

The flower market was well supplied with stock last week. The supply of mums has been heavy, but all the flowers are disposed of one way or another. Some excellent roses find a fair market. The receipts of carnations are large and at times blooms can be bought at the buyers' own prices. Easter lilies are more than equal to the demand. Valley, orchids and violets experience a fair demand.

Various Notes.

Hartje & Elder have been enjoying a good demand for their pompons.

Among the Indianapolis florists who attended the Cleveland flower show were Charles Bohne, Frank Rieman, George Wiegand, Irwin Bertermann, Clarence Thomas and Adolph Baur.

Bertermann Bros. Co. is doing an extensive business in evergreens produced at the Cumberland farm.

Frank Hasselmann has been spending much of his time at his farm.

The Claypool Hotel Florist reports business as being brisk. This concern has been busy with hotel decorations.

Fred Stolte, with Wiegand's, executed a wedding decoration at Danville this week. H. L. W.

For the Commercial Grower for Winter and Spring Delivery

Plants from those who back up the reputation of growing and shipping, properly packed, the best plants that can be produced.

GOLDEN GLEAM. As a novelty of the year we are offering a seedling of our own raising. It is a bright, glistening yellow in color; medium dwarf in growth. Fully as good two to a plant as single. Matures Oct. 20th to Nov. 1st. Second crown buds were the best.

2 1/4-inch, $1.50 per doz., $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

NEW MUMS OF THIS SEASON

Rooted Cuttings, $7.00 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

Marigold. The best yellow mid-season chrysanthemum that has ever been introduced, when grown right. It must be planted early and the bud should be secured by the 10th to 15th of August. It will be the first crown. On later buds it is by no means the equal of the early ones.

Crystal Gem. A fine, large, mid-season commercial white. Follows Oconto, the best early white.

Early Frost. For real early white plant Early Frost. Take the first crown bud. Start cutting in early October. Pure white and a good keeper. It is of equally good quality from later planting but matures later.

Modello. A fine, early November bronze. Good from any planting, and an easy doer. Sensational color. Pretty as a cactus dahlia.

Golden Queen. A fine, early, light yellow. Best with us as a second crown from early June planting.

FINE COMMERCIAL VARIETIES

Rooted Cuttings, $3.00 per 100, $20.00 per 1000.

Golden Eaton. Will replace Yellow Eaton in our general list. As good as Yellow Eaton in every way, better in color.

White Chieftain. Pure white on the second crown buds. A fine commercial variety.

POMPONS

Peace. We shall disseminate Peace in 1916. At this writing it is a very charming shell pink. It was shown as white last season at a later date. It is a beautifully formed and valuable pompon. 2 1/4-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

Harvest Moon. Our introduction of last season. A fine, mid-season yellow Pompon. Eugene Langauet. A fine, late yellow. Both good and both money making varieties. 2 1/4-inch, $5.00 per 100, $40.00 per 1000.

Alice. For freedom of flowering and as a money maker, Alice has made good. We cut from it earlier than any other variety. It is a quick plant maker. It is a good commercial shell-pink. Plant Alice December and January. Rooted Cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Matchless and Enchantress Supreme. Two leaders in carnations. Early delivery. R. C., $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1000.

HYDRANGEAS

Our Hydrangeas are all grown in the open ground during the summer, where they make a very luxurious growth, producing heavy heads. They are potted up in August and are thoroughly rootbound in October. They are extra heavy this season and will not only produce flowers from the shoots but also from the dormant buds at the base. They cannot be better and will satisfy the most critical.

The Market.

Business has taken a decided turn for the better since the coming of freezing weather. Market conditions are excellent and stock is plentiful enough to meet all demands. Chrysanthemums are the ruling flowers at present and the preference is given them. Dolly Dimple, Eaton Chieftain and Bonnafon are the best varieties. There are a few Golden Wedding appearing on the market. Single and pompon mums are overplentiful. Roses are in fine shape but in oversupply. Many growers, however, are holding back their rose stock for the Christmas trade, on account of the light demand during the chrysanthemum season. Carnations are more plentiful and the demand for them is fairly good. There are some fine orchids, mostly Cattleya labiata and dendrobiums. Gardenias are scarce at present. Sweet peas are favorites and violets are more plentiful and of good quality. There are some fine offerings in Easter lilies.

Blooming plants in all varieties can be had and a good trade in them is expected. Greens are plentiful. A number of prominent funerals and social functions called for a large amount of decorative work last week. Shrubbery from Belgium is arriving at the greenhouses and the azalea stock is already acclimated.

Various Notes.

The new building of the Doswell Floral Co., on West Main street, is rapidly nearing completion and a formal opening of the store will be held November 19 and 20. This store is under the management of Miss Maxwell. A branch store has just been opened on the south side under the management of Miss Rhoda Doswell, who had charge of the Main street store for a number of years.

The Bradley Flower Shop executed an elaborate decoration for a reception last week. Wells' Late Pine and Bonnafon chrysanthemums were used, keeping the color scheme in mulberry, yellow and white. Yellow roses were used for the tables. Miss Marjory Bradley is in Chicago for a few days.

W. J. Vesey gave a large dinner last week in honor of the party who attended the Panama-Pacific Exposition, together with Will J. Vesey, who has returned from a motor trip to Richmond, Ind., where he attended the November meeting of the Indiana Florists' Asso-

BELLE WASHBURN, the Best Red Carnation

WINNER of the Silver Medal at the last exhibition of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., January 27th and 28th; First Prize at the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, Ill., September 22d and 23rd. It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ to 4 inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family. It has a very spicy odor, much greater than the average Carnation. It comes in full flower by the 1st of December and then continues steadily through the balance of the season.

The present sharp competition in business requires the grower to plant a variety that always produces high-grade flowers, never bursts the calyx, has strong, long stems, is a steady and continuous bloomer, no cropper. The color is the most brilliant red of any Carnation now in market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs, of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18,000 devoted to rooted cuttings. We will have 100,000 strong, well rooted cuttings, guaranteed all first-class, ready for delivery during December. The price of the rooted cuttings will be $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

The Market.

Business conditions remain fair, but the supply of mums is larger than the demand and, in fact, everything is plentiful, with the exception of gardenias, cattleyas and valley, which were hard to secure last week even at an advanced price. Cattleyas were exceedingly high. Mums, of course, hold the center of attraction at present and are abundant, except the yellows, which are only in limited supply. Medium-grade stock can be bought at low prices and an oversupply of white caused the price on these to drop to a low figure. The oversupply of mums hurt the sale of roses and carnations greatly, and at the end of the week the street fakers had innumerable quantities of both and were selling them at low prices. The demand for Beauties was good during the first half of the week, but during the second half Beauties were seldom called for. Pompon mums still compete with the cheaper outdoor-grown stock. The green goods situation remains the same—a good supply and demand light.

FARMINGTON, UTAH.

The Market.

A killing frost, accompanied with eight inches of snow, has put an end to all outdoor stock. The weather is cold and it looks as if winter had set in early. The sunshine will be more than welcome to help push the flowers along for Thanksgiving. The florists are somewhat short on cut flowers and there seem to be none around. It is a known fact that funeral orders had to be turned down.

Roses, carnations and chrysanthemums are in large demand, but there is an unusual shortage of roses and carnations. Due to the cropping of roses for Christmas, it is almost impossible to purchase the shorter-stemmed grades. It is a rare treat to obtain some Ophelias, Hoosier Beauties or Hadleys. The Helen Taft is a fine specimen and has proven itself so commercially. The plant produces long stems and a large bloom. It has an attractive cerise-pink color and the foliage is first-class. The American Beauty roses have been plentiful in supply and excellent in quality; only the shorter-stemmed grades could not meet the demand. Prices average 60 cents to $3 per dozen. Carnations still are scarce, but the quality is improving rapidly. Any grade or color can be easily disposed of. Chrysanthemums are abundant and the quality is all that can be desired. Bonaffon and Chadwick are the two best sellers. There are some fine Timothy Eaton and Colonel Appleton mums, but the medium-sized chrysanthemums are called for most. The pinks are scarce. Sweet peas are scarce. In potted stock, cyclamens, ferns and potted chrysanthemums prevail. Orders for Thanksgiving are being placed, but the present shortage of stock will check the sales.

Various Notes.

W. T. Gray has opened a flower department in the Auerback department store, at the corner of Broadway and State streets, and says that the outlook for business is good.

E. A. Lambourne expects to open a flower store for himself near the corner of Main and Second streets, south.

The Cache Valley Floral Co., of Logan, has taken over the business of the Marvold Floral Co., of that city.

The Miller Floral Co. finds the demand for roses and carnations in excess of the supply. A fine lot of azaleas has just been received. O. F.

Helena, Mont.—Referring to an inquiry in a recent issue of The Review concerning hybrid delphiniums, John P. Ring, of the State Nursery Co., has a fine lot.

The Market.

Business last week at the best was rather disappointing. The supply in all lines was heavy, while the sale of stock was only large enough to take up the larger part of the receipts. The shipping business, particularly in greens and supplies, is good. The first freezing weather arrived November 15.

The rose supply is even larger than at the last writing. The same is true of carnations. Easter lilies, too, are plentiful and more than able to take care of all present requests for them. Chrysanthemum receipts are heavy and include a good assortment of all varieties and sizes, as well as pompons and anemones. The supply is so large that it is impossible to realize the full value on anything because of the indifferent demand. The first calla lilies in quantities made their appearance last week, but in spite of their newness they found a poor sale. Violet offerings include doubles as well as singles. Other offerings are lily of the valley, orchids and sweet peas.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell, R. Witterstaetter, W. Ray Murphy, Max Rudolph, R. G. Kootz and A. Rusconi attended the Cleveland show last week and were enthusiastic in their praises of it.

L. H. Kyrk has been receiving some fine smilax from Water Valley, N. Y., for which he has a ready sale.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market to offer double violets this fall.

The list of recent visitors includes Warren Huckleberry, of North Vernon, Ind.; W. W. Stableton, of Blanchester, O.; Mrs. Karl Heiser, of Hamilton, O.; J. Current, of Lexington, Ky.; Mr. Romer, representing the Briarcliff Rose Co., Scarborough, N. Y.; Charles Falkenstein, representing the Basket Novelty Co., New York. C. H. H.

Lawrence, Mass.—At the Rockingham fair Thornton Bros. took first premium for their exhibit of vegetables, plants and flowers.

Urbana, Ill.—Over 3,500 people attended the fourth annual chrysanthemum show in the floricultural greenhouses November 7. Professor White, of Cornell, visited the university November 8, on his way to Ames, Ia.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

TEMPERATURE NOT SPECIFIED.

I should like to get some information about the piping of my greenhouse. I intend to heat with hot water and I wish to use 3-inch or 4-inch flows. What size of returns will be suitable? My house is 17x100 and nine feet high in the center. There is one foot of glass in the sides; the ends are glass down to the eaves.
 H. L.—Ohio.

For a house 100 feet in length there is no occasion for using flow pipes larger than 2½-inch, and with these I would use 2-inch returns. The number of flows and returns will depend upon the temperature desired. For a temperature of 60 degrees I would use three 2½-inch flows and nine 2-inch returns. For 50 degrees it will answer if two flows and six returns are used. If the 3-inch pipe is on hand, it can be used in place of the 2½-inch as flows, and in that case two flows would probably answer for 60 degrees.

THE COAL MARKET.

If this week's reports, as received from the coal market, differ noticeably from the reports of a week ago, the difference is not so much in the facts themselves as in the manner of stating them. Now, as a week ago, the news of the coal trade may be summarized thus: The eastern markets show a satisfactory degree of activity, in accordance with the recent improvement in other lines of business; in the west the mildness of the weather has a retarding influence, though the mine owners are maintaining a fairly healthy tone in the trade by controlling the output and otherwise managing matters conservatively. In the export trade there has been a slight decline, due chiefly to the extremely high freight rates charged by the ship owners. In some districts of the middle west the shortage of cars is increasingly apparent, and may cause serious trouble if the demand for fuel becomes more urgent.

NEW KROESCHELL—HOT WATER AND STEAM

Kirkwood, Mo., May 22, 1915

Now that the firing season is over and after a long cold winter, the coldest night being 6° below zero, I want to say I am well pleased with the No. 46 WATER TUBE STEAM BOILER and the No. 14 hot water boiler, they are doing all you claim for them and more. The No. 14 hot water boiler heating that large house to 62° with the greatest ease in zero weather without the help of the steam boiler. THIS STEAM BOILER I THINK IS A WONDER, a quick steamer and holds the steam, the easiest boiler in the world to clean and to keep clean. The boiler tube hot water system is the winner, the rapid circulation and even temperature obtained from this system is wonderful.

It may be remembered that last week's report referred to the trade in smokeless coal as being exceptionally dull, as compared with the movement in other grades of fuel. Now, says the Black Diamond, "the demand for smokeless for the time being has vanished. Some shippers are paying demurrage, hoping that the thermometer will come to their rescue. Mine-run is held firm at $1.40. Lump and egg have been moved at $1.90 and $2. This coal was sacrificed to avoid the payment of additional demurrage."

LARGER RETURNS PREFERABLE.

I have erected a greenhouse, 35x100. The walls consist of thirty-nine inches of rustic work and forty-five inches of glass, with gable ends of glass. The height of the gables is eighteen feet. The house is exposed to the weather on all sides. It is to be heated with hot water. How many 2-inch flow pipes and 1½-inch returns will be needed to maintain a temperature of 65 degrees at night when the outside temperature you advise the use of ground beds for cucumbers? In that case, what method of piping would you suggest? We are troubled here with a great deal of rain.

J. S.—Ore.

While it would be preferable to use 2-inch pipe for the returns in a 100-foot house, good results can be obtained with 1½-inch pipe. By using five 2-inch flows and twenty 1½-inch returns, there should be no difficulty in securing the temperature desired, under the conditions mentioned. Even better results may be obtained by using five 2½-inch flow pipes and fifteen 2-inch returns. Ordinarily it answers to use solid beds for cucumbers, but where there is any danger from water, either from below or as drip from the glass, it is safer to grow the plants either in pots or boxes or on raised benches.

STICKY MATTER IN TUBES.

I have considerable trouble with an accumulation of sticky matter in the tubes of my boiler; it is like tar and difficult to remove. My regular tube cleaner will not do the work. Can you tell me of any tool that will do it? I am sure such information would be of great benefit to many of your subscribers.
K.—Ia.

A special device is manufactured by the Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, to remove the accumulation you describe.

COUPLING TWIN BOILERS.

I am enclosing a sketch of my boiler and some of its connections. The sketch also shows another boiler, which I wish to couple with the one already in use. Please tell me what is the best method of coupling them. The capacity of the boiler now in use is inadequate; so I expect to build a new boiler room next year and purchase a large boiler. For this winter, however, I intend to get along by using the two small boilers which I already own.

Both the boilers, as you see, are round and upright. The extra boiler is forty-six inches high to the top outlet. It has a 19-inch grate, a 3½-inch flow opening, a 2½-inch return opening and a 7-inch smoke pipe. Its estimated radiation is 585 square feet. The expansion tank is three feet long and eighteen inches in diameter, and is about eight feet higher than the top of the boilers. The returns all come in at one side of the boiler now in use.
J. O. S.—N. Y.

The sketch shows two boilers set side by side and about two or three feet

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market. The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

apart, but it gives but a faint idea of the arrangement of the flow and return connections with the boiler.

There are two methods of coupling twin boilers. One way, which is used when there is a main flow and return, is to connect the new boiler to both flow and return in as direct a manner as possible. In the present instance I would use a 3-inch flow and a 2½-inch return. The other method is used when several flows and returns connect directly with the boiler. In that case the first step is to yoke or couple the boilers themselves, connecting the flow and

ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS.

The annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners will take place in Boston, December 9 and 10. The first session will open in Horticultural hall, at 2 p. m., December 9. A number of papers will be submitted by gardeners prominent in the profession, which should provoke a good discussion. Among the subjects will be: "Is Gardening a Profession?" "The Gardener's Place in the Public Service." "The Management of a Private Estate, as Viewed by a College Graduate." "The Young Gardeners' Opportunity in This Country." "Is Cooperation Between Garden Clubs and Gardeners' Societies Desirable?" President Everitt has appointed W. N. Craig, Duncan Finlayson and W. J. Kennedy a committee on convention arrangements and they promise that the meetings will be made interesting, entertaining and instructive to all who attend.

An invitation is extended to all gardeners to attend the Boston convention, so that they may familiarize themselves with the scope of the work the national association has undertaken.

Owing to the small number of articles received in the essay contest, which closed October 1, the winners of which were to be announced at the convention in December, the essay committee, William H. Waite, W. N. Craig, Edwin Jenkins, Arthur Smith and Theodore Wirth, has decided to reopen and continue the contest, so that gardeners may participate in it during the winter months, when they have more time than in any other season of the year to devote to the writing of essays. The contest will close February 1 and the winners will be announced at the association's meeting during the National Flower Show in Philadelphia, in March, 1916. There are four classes, as follows:

Class 1—Prize $35 gold. Subject, "Horticulture as a Profession, from the Standpoint of a Gardener."

Class 2—Prize $25 gold. Subject, "The Proper Grouping and Culture of Trees, Shrubs, Perennials and Annual Bedding Plants in the Ornamentation of Private Grounds."

Class 3—Prize $20 gold. Subject, "Preparation of Ground for and General Treatment of Hardy Herbaceous Perennials," naming a list of species, limited to 100, providing a succession of flowers throughout the entire season.

Class 4—Prize $20 gold. Subject, "How to Secure a Year's Vegetable Supply with the Aid of Coldframes or Hotbeds, but no Greenhouses, Including Soil Preparation."

The essay contest is open to professional gardeners who are engaged in the capacity of superintendents, head gardeners or assistant gardeners. Contestants will address William H. Waite, chairman, essay committee, National Association of Gardeners, P. O. Box 290, Madison, N. J., for further particulars.

The Market.

The flowers now coming into the market are much better both as to quality and quantity than heretofore this season. The prices of chrysanthemums remain steady, but roses, carnations and other flowers are cheaper than they were. All flowers bring good prices, however. Pompons are much more abundant and find a ready sale. The larger and more expensive varieties of chrysanthemums sell readily at high prices. The most popular varieties are William Turner, Bonnaffon, Minnie Bailey and others. Orchids still are plentiful and cheap. Sweet peas and violets are arriving in small quantities. Roses are more plentiful and there has been a slight drop in prices. Carnations are more abundant and the quality is improving week by week. The prices of carnations now are reasonable, the blooms selling at $2 to $3 per hundred, though a few weeks ago they sold at $4 to $5 per hundred wholesale. Valley is of good quality and brings a good price. Cosmos and other outdoor flowers still are coming into the market and tend to decrease to some extent the amount of business done by florists. In a week or so, however, outdoor flowers will be gone.

Various Notes.

George Muller has had several large wedding decorations this month and considerable funeral work.

H. B. McKnight, grower for August Begerow, has grown a pineapple plant from the top of a pineapple. The plant, which is a year and a half old, is now beginning to fruit, the fruit being about three-quarters grown. August Begerow sold a large number of yellow chrysanthemums on the occasion of the Yale-Princeton football game November 13. He provided a casket cover of orchids and a standing cross of orchids for a recent funeral.

H. C. Strobell & Co. is the trade name which has been filed for the retail florists' business at 895 Broad street, by Harry C. Strobell, of 76 Milford avenue. Mr. Strobell has been conducting the business for a long time, and in compliance with a new law has just filed his trade name.

The annual flower show of the Branch Brook park greenhouses, which was held last week, was attended by thousands of people. The show was given under the direction of Superintendent A. M. Reynolds. The chrysanthemum display was especially fine, and in order that a larger number of people might enjoy the display, some of the best specimens were taken to the Newark public library, where they were placed on exhibit.

McLaughlin & Murphy report business as being good, with a large amount of funeral and wedding work. Collections are somewhat easier and the outlook for winter business is good.

The Market.

Business was uneven last week; the first half was slow, but the second half found everybody busy. Stock is more plentiful than during the last few weeks and the demand has fallen off greatly. Prices are low. Roses are plentiful and are sold as low as 24 cents per dozen. Chrysanthemums are especially fine, William Turner, Bonnaffon and Eaton being the best varieties. Sweet peas are arriving.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Scranton Florists' Club was held at the home of T. B. McClintock November 12. There was a large attendance and much business was transacted.

C. W. Baldwin, William MacDonald and Anton Schultheis were appointed a ways and means committee for the spring flower show. A motion that the committee has the power to call on any member for assistance was carried. Nine large exhibitors have already taken space at the spring show.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Ray MacDonald; vice-president, John W. Beagle; secretary, T. B. McClintock; treasurer, Miss Gertrude Schultheis. The trustees are Mrs. J. J. Wade, Miss A. L. Besancon, B. E. Cokely and Jacob Webster. The following were proposed for membership: James Ramson, of Morel Bros.; James McAndrew, Walter Hoover, William Perry and John Butler, all of Baldwin, Florist. Luncheon was served by Mrs. T. B. McClintock. The next meeting will be held at the Schultheis store on Linden street. A motion that the club hold its meetings on the first Monday of each month was carried.

Various Notes.

Baldwin reports business as being fair. His windows are attractively trimmed with mums.

Mrs. M. Muir, of Muir & Co., is on duty after a week's illness.

A. L. Besancon & Co. have had a good trade in cut flowers and plants, especially ferns, palms, primroses and cyclamens. They report that sales on mums exceed those of any year they have been in business.

T. B. McClintock has one of the finest collections of mums in the city. He is cutting good carnations. F. J. M.

Hausman Bros.' Sweet Pea House, at Hilton, N. J.

THIS is another one of our recently erected jobs, within short distance of our factory. It's one of the ones we will show you on that motor trip we have asked you to come and take with us—any day we can arrange it for your convenience.

We can tell you about our houses in these ads till the cows come home, but, after all is said and done, there is nothing like actually seeing the houses.

This Reconstructed Construction of ours does not begin to show up its advantages in photographs.

When you go into one of the houses and see the wide rafter spacing; the 20-inch glass; the absence of a third of the posts and columns; and then look carefully into all the details of all the construction features; then you begin to see why we have been making so much noise about it.

This house of Hausman Brothers is 40x125 feet. The rafter spacing happens to be 8 feet 4 inches and the glass 16 inches. It gives you a splendid opportunity to compare the narrow-spacing house with the wide ones we will show you.

Perhaps you may prefer the narrow.

We believe, however, that the wide one has distinct advantages in its favor.

When can you take that motor trip with us?

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Buffalo has been enjoying some beautiful weather, unusually warm for November. The stores have a pleasing appearance and many of them have diminutive chrysanthemum exhibits, the most popular mum being William Turner. Some good Eatons and Yellow Eatons were seen last week; in the pinks, Maud Dean made its annual appearance. Major Bonnaffon still draws the attention of the public as a good yellow. Pompons are greatly in demand, especially Noveltoma and Garza. Roses are selling well, although not up to the standard. Better sales are expected after the mum season is over. Beauties are somewhat scarce. Sunburst, Mock and Shawyer roses are remarkably good in color and length of stem. As a whole, roses are becoming quite plentiful. Violets are better and enjoy an increasing demand. Valley and orchids are sufficient for the demand. Carnations are more abundant and of good quality. Easter lilies are about the same as last reported. Snapdragons are few but unusually good. Pansies and cosmos still are to be had, but they are of inferior grade. The sales of all greens are as good as usual.

Various Notes.

At the South Park Conservatories, distinctive chrysanthemums have been on display for the public. It was reported that November 9 15,000 people attended the exhibition, and a larger attendance is expected November 16.

Good begonias and Boston ferns were noticeable at the greenhouses of S. A. Anderson, on Elmwood avenue.

Lehde & Galley, who opened a flower shop on Seneca street, October 23, find business quite satisfactory at the new stand, as well as at the other store on Triangle street.

C. F. Christensen is cutting good Maud Dean mums, for which he finds a ready sale at a good price.

At the branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son, W. F. Kasting has on display a Boston fern measuring eight feet in diameter.

C. F. Hale, of East Orange, N. J., stopped off at Buffalo on his return trip from the Cleveland flower show. Mr. Hale was much pleased with the show in general.

Arthur Kirchhoff, of Batavia, was in town November 13. A. E.

Upper Sandusky, O.—Constien Bros. have a sport of Enchantress almost identical in color with Beaute Poitevine.

A Trial of the Skinner System Will Settle This.

YESTERDAY a florist said to us: "I cannot get along without the Skinner System outdoors, but I do not install it in the Carnation houses because I could use it only a part of the time."

True, perhaps—he could have said the same thing of the safety valve on his boiler—it isn't the number of times he uses it that proves its value. It is what it is worth to him when he does use it.

Mr. Wis ey, of Murphysboro, says: "We have been using the Skinner System of Irrigation for growing Carnations in the greenhouse. For planting time alone, it will pay for itself every year. We would not be without it."

The real basis of judgment is a trial of the Skinner System.

designed and erected for
Mr. N. Grillo, of Rosedale, Conn.

We have been asked why we persist in speaking of the many jobs we have already completed. Our reason for doing this and embodying the names and addresses of our customers is that anyone interested in a greenhouse might verify, to his complete satisfaction, all our claims by corresponding direct with any of them.

The one really sure way to secure best results in your contemplated greenhouse is to select the builder whose claims to superiority are confirmed by what he has accomplished for others.

When anyone makes his selection on the above basis, he will find that the service we are rendering to others is just the service that is so vitally important to him.

If you are contemplating the erection of a greenhouse, write us—we can save money for you.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

HEAD LETTUCE FROM SEED.

Will you kindly tell me what is a good variety of head lettuce to grow, and how long it takes to grow, from seed, a crop ready to cut?

H. S. T.—Mont.

Good varieties are May King, Hittinger's Belmont and Boston Forcing Tennis Ball. By starting seed early in September, three crops can be secured through the winter. Of course, successive batches of plants must be started and be ready to be set out as soon as each crop is cut. The time required to mature a crop varies according to the season. You cannot get over two crops between now and May 1, but you could follow the last crop with tomatoes, if desired.
C. W.

THRIPS ON LETTUCE.

I am sending you a small vial full of what I think are thrips. My lettuce house is alive with them. I sterilized with steam and thought I had done the job thoroughly. I placed 1-inch pipes two feet apart, with three-sixteenth holes every two feet, under forty pounds of steam, but I did not get rid of them. My house is about 24x110 feet, with 5 1/2-foot sides and 11-foot gables. I have used seven ounces of cyanide, fourteen ounces of sulphuric acid and twenty-eight ounces of water for this house. The fumigation was strong enough to burn the lettuce a little. I shall appreciate any advice on this.
C. J. S.—Pa.

You certainly have a bad dose of thrips on your lettuce. Sterilization would be useful for the extermination of soil pests and fungoid diseases, but thrips will come and spread in spite of these precautions if your atmospheric conditions are too arid, as yours must have been. I am afraid you cannot save your present crop, as it appears to be in an almost hopeless condition. You cannot use poisonous sprays on plants if the foliage is to be eaten, and hydrocyanic acid gas is the only other real remedy.

Injury from gas is most likely with a high temperature. Select as cool a night as possible when fumigating again; 40 degrees will not harm the lettuce. Give an all-night exposure and use an equal weight of sulphuric acid and water. I would suggest using four jars, each of which should contain two ounces of cyanide of ninety-eight per cent quality, and four ounces each of sulphuric acid and water. Do not fumigate until evening. Use great care in locking doors, etc. Open them for a time before entering in the morning; then ventilate freely. One dose may not clean your house, so four days later give it another application.
C. W.

is recognized as the one wood for water tanks, troughs, vats and spouts, as well as for all laundry appliances. Its marvelous quality of rot-resistance puts Cypress in a class wholly by itself, especially when the use is a most trying one. To be wet on one side and dry on the other side, and to be alternately sweated and dried up, and hot and cold at the same time—all this just suits Cypress. You know it, we guess.

Vol. 4 is the Barn Book; Vol. 20 is the Farm Needs Book; Vol. 28 is the Trellis and Arbor Book, and Vol. 18 is a Bungalow Book—all profusely and handsomely illustrated. And they are very, very Free. WINNING WEALTH WITH WAR WINDOWS

Don't become so enthused over a bright idea for a timely decoration that you neglect the sales factor in your display. Whether your war window depicts a battle on a local gridiron or the strife in Europe, see to it you don't obscure the fact that you offer seasonable merchandise—flowers—for sale.

THE florist who devises nifty windows does not often have to go far for his idea. He chooses something of timely interest to the general public, something the people are thinking about and talking about, such as Thanksgiving day, football season, elections, horse-races, motor shows, and so on ad infinitum, whereupon he studies its relation to his business and, likely enough, hits on a clever plan of showing it to the buying public, in his window.

The football season in college towns or in cities offers the wide-awake retail florist a chance for distinctive treatment of his window. Flowers and football go well together. Big mums in the college colors are worn in profusion at football games in some localities, while in other places scarcely a flower will be seen. It is simply a matter of associating the two in the minds of the people.

The Primary Idea.

This should be the primary idea in arranging a window intended to suggest the wearing of flowers to the football game. The psychologists have their law of the association of ideas. The florist is a psychologist for the time being when he undertakes to hook up the concept of flowers with the concept of football. The simplest display of this kind would consist of an inflated pigskin and some school pennants in the center of a display of seasonable flowers. What are the college colors? There is no better way to start the students to wearing flowers to the games than to show them flowers of their college colors. In a certain state university the colors are yellow and blue. Yellow chrysanthemums and violets have almost become the school flowers, as the wearers of flowers sometimes outnumber the wavers of pennants in the grand stands.

Football is only one of many recurring events which can be made to boost sales at this season. The motor shows afford as good a chance, the opera, or any event that occupies a conspicuous place in the thoughts of the people. But don't forget the association of ideas—when you stage a battle scene in the window don't let it take all the space; show also some of the things you have for sale.

Windows and Movies.

Show windows and moving pictures do not appear to be related, but they have some things in common. The man with a show window has an advantage over the manager of a movie in one respect: His window is a means of letting the public know what it is he wants them to buy, and he can bring customers into the store, figuratively speaking, through the window. The moving picture exhibitor must require his customers to pay their money first and see the thing they have paid for afterward.

Not so with the florist. His best chance of winning a customer is to show him something he wants. The moving picture man can offer his commodity to the public only by the indirect means of posters and lurid illustrations. Some retail merchants—happily, not many florists—copy the theater owner's method and plaster their store windows with more or less unsightly signs. That they take this way of inviting the attention of the public to what they have inside the store is, in most cases, a sure indication that they do not realize the selling power of an appropriate, distinctive window display.

The Once Over.

Almost anything novel will catch the eye of the public. Show people something they have never seen before and they will come in droves. Humanity has a huge bump of curiosity, and the more it is fed, the bigger it

THE florist who devises nifty windows does not often have to go far for his idea. He chooses something of timely interest to the general public, something the people are thinking about and talking about, such as Thanksgiving day, football season, elections, horse-races, motor shows, and so on ad infinitum, whereupon he studies its relation to his business and, likely enough, hits on a clever plan of showing it to the buying public, in his window.

The football season in college towns or in cities offers the wide-awake retail florist a chance for distinctive treatment of his window. Flowers and football go well together. Big mums in the college colors are worn in profusion at football games in some localities, while in other places scarcely a flower will be seen. It is simply a matter of associating the two in the minds of the people.

The Primary Idea.

This should be the primary idea in arranging a window intended to suggest the wearing of flowers to the football game. The psychologists have their law of the association of ideas. The florist is a psychologist for the time being when he undertakes to hook up the concept of flowers with the concept of football. The simplest display of this kind would consist of an inflated pigskin and some school pennants in the center of a display of seasonable flowers. What are the college colors? There is no better way to start the students to wearing flowers to the games than to show them flowers of their college colors. In a certain state university the colors are yellow and blue. Yellow chrysanthemums and violets have almost become the school flowers, as the wearers of flowers sometimes outnumber the wavers of pennants in the grand stands.

Football is only one of many recurring events which can be made to boost sales at this season. The motor shows afford as good a chance, the opera, or any event that occupies a conspicuous place in the thoughts of the people. But don't forget the association of ideas—when you stage a battle scene in the window don't let it take all the space; show also some of the things you have for sale.

Windows and Movies.

Show windows and moving pictures do not appear to be related, but they have some things in common. The man with a show window has an advantage over the manager of a movie in one respect: His window is a means of letting the public know what it is he wants them to buy, and he can bring customers into the store, figuratively speaking, through the window. The moving picture exhibitor must require his customers to pay their money first and see the thing they have paid for afterward.

Not so with the florist. His best chance of winning a customer is to show him something he wants. The moving picture man can offer his commodity to the public only by the indirect means of posters and lurid illustrations. Some retail merchants—happily, not many florists—copy the theater owner's method and plaster their store windows with more or less unsightly signs. That they take this way of inviting the attention of the public to what they have inside the store is, in most cases, a sure indication that they do not realize the selling power of an appropriate, distinctive window display.

The Once Over.

Almost anything novel will catch the eye of the public. Show people something they have never seen before and they will come in droves. Humanity has a huge lump of curiosity, and the more it is fed, the bigger it grows. Barnum made a fortune with circus and sideshows. But why use a show window for a sideshow unless you're in the circus business? Some merchants make this mistake in their well-meant endeavor to profit from the public's curiosity. They get people to notice the window, but if they themselves have overlooked the primary principle of window advertising, which is to direct the spectator's attention to the store itself, or the line of merchandise it handles, it will not be surprising if the spectators also lose sight of it.

A Misfire.

Bad calculation of this sort is common. Some decorators regularly get off on the wrong foot. Perhaps you know a florist who does. An illustration of publicity that misses its mark—for the retailer, at least—is the use of news-pictorial posters and war photographs pasted on the pane in the hope that passers-by will stop to look at the pictures and, while doing so, look in the window also. So many stores use the same pictures, or similar pictures, that they fail to attract notice to any one store more than another. The only advertising value the posters ever could have lies in the fact that they cause people to stop in front of the window, and this value diminishes in proportion to the number of stores in the vicinity which use the same device.

Current news or ideas drawn from the news of the day, when used for advertising purposes by individuals, offer a highly desirable source of publicity, not to be confused with the sort just described. Originality goes a long way in getting up a successful window display and the florist who contrives to advertise his own business by utilizing the public interest in current events is apt to be the man who sets the pace for his competitors. So long as his window does not become a mere sideshow, either by lack of relation to the florists' business, or by unduly subordinating the advertising element just for the sake of novelty, there is no better way of putting a "pull" into the window.

An Indianapolis War Window.

War, politics, conventions, any similar timely subject, affords ideas for the versatile window decorator. The illustration on page 15 shows a window with "war paint" all over it. It was arranged not simply for the sake of the timeliness of a war display, but also to meet the needs of a special occasion. It was one of numerous windows recently rigged up in military fashion in Indianapolis, when the state militia, assisted by United States army officers, conducted a spectacular fete named "War in Indiana." Prizes were given for the windows which carried out the idea most successfully.

This window was in the store of the E. G. Hill Floral Co. It was the work of C. C. Thomas. A temporary fountain was built in the window, giving water effect, with background of stone and bark, making a fort. Cannons protruded over the water, and in the water were mines, a submerged submarine, a torpedo boat, also a battle ship. In midair were several aeroplanes and Zeppelins, while on the land the invading army had a sunken fort, trenches filled with soldiers and cannons, the red cross ambulance and tent, a wireless station and the cavalry. A 6-foot cannon made entirely of flowers, with several stacks of rifles, completed the window, but Mr. Thomas was careful that the stage setting did not monopolize the attention to the exclusion of the things he had for sale, as the background of ferns and American Beauties led the eye from the picture to the interior of the store, as every topical window decoration should.

CLOSE OF THE SHOW SEASON

Many Novel Features Attract Attention to Flowers

HOUSTON, TEX.

Fashions Combined with Flowers.

If the ghosts of the departed florists had visited the Texas flower show, it is safe to say they would have shaken their heads and whispered that things are not "as they used to was." For instead of just plain flower show, like in the days of old, the Houston show brought in living models parading about in elegant gowns and wearing all manner of bouquets; it saw brides, bridegrooms and bridesmaids demonstrating how the flowers and ceremony go; it saw a demonstration of the latest fashions and frills for ladies and mere men.

But while the Houston flower show, which was held November 17 to 20, was combined with a fashion show, jewelry show and vaudeville show, the flower show still remained, and was a great success because of the large attendance attracted by the special features. This show, the second annual one given by the Texas State Florists' Association, was scheduled to be a great hit by its sponsors, and nothing was left undone that would advertise the event. Everyone in Houston knew of the show and itched to pay the single admission price of 25 cents, or $1 for the entire show.

The show opened with a parade of 100 decorated automobiles, containing hundreds of pretty girls, all of whom had flowers.

BALTIMORE.

Maryland Week Flower Show.

The annual exhibition of the Maryland Horticultural Society opened at the Fifth Regiment Armory November 16. Governor-elect Harrington and Mayor Preston, of Baltimore, were in attendance and spoke before the society on that evening. The flower exhibit was in charge of a committee appointed by the Florists' Club, to whom credit must be given for the able and efficient manner in which the arrangements were carried out. The exhibition space was well filled and while the number of exhibits was not so large as formerly, the quality of the entries more than offset the fewness of the exhibitors.

Chief among the exhibits must be mentioned the well grown mum plants, both standard and in bush form. Mack Richmond, gardener for Mrs. W. B. Cochrane, and Chas. Siegwart divided the honors. In the cut chrysanthemums a fine display was made. George Morrison, gardener for Mrs. Henry B. Jacobs, showed a vase of twenty William Turners and one vase of twenty Odessas, which were all that could be desired. Gustave Lotze showed twenty Nerissas, which carried the honors in pinks, and also won on twenty Appletons. He also showed a fine seedling of a light lemon color. M. J. Hannigan showed good Chadwicks, both white and yellow. The R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. exhibited fine pompon mums, well arranged in rustic baskets, for which a blue ribbon was awarded.

Display of Johnston Bros., Providence, at the Recent Show of the R. I. H. S.

The plant division was large. The groups were well arranged and attracted much attention. The exhibit by George Morrison was awarded first in this class, and in the cut mum class for private gardeners Mr. Morrison captured most of the honors. I. H. Moss, Harrison's Nurseries, and F. C. Bauer had good displays of hardy evergreens. Samuel Feast & Sons showed a specimen cibotium, which was awarded a blue ribbon, as was a large specimen of Harrisii, also exhibited by Feast & Sons.

Roses were shown on the second day and they were all of extremely good quality. Stevenson Bros. exhibited Prince E. C. d'Arenberg, Sunburst, Ophelia, Richmond and Killarney. This firm was winner of prizes for a vase of Mrs. Russell and a vase of Killarney Brilliant. Lehr Bros. showed Thora, a sport of Maryland; White Killarney, Maryland and Ophelia, all of which were good. James Hamilton showed Hoosier Beauty, which would have been awarded first in its class if the vase had contained the proper number of blooms. Lohr & Fritze exhibited Killarney, White Killarney and Maryland.

The classes for carnations brought out some good competition. They were staged November 18. Gustave Lotze was the largest winner. James Hamilton, Joseph Merritt, I. H. Moss, Charles Siegwart and A. S. Richmond were winners.

In designs, some fine exhibits were staged. Robert L. Graham won first on a wreath of white carnations, red roses and valley, but a wreath of Ophelia roses and cattleyas, by Mrs. Mary Johnston, was a close second.

In the class for basket arrangements, Mrs. Mary Johnston won on a beautiful basket of Bonaffon mums. Samuel Feast & Sons were second with a basket of cattleyas, pompons and violets.

Display of Phillips Bros., Newark, N. J., at the Recent Show in their City.

An automobile covered with yellow mums, which won first as the most original design, was entered by Robert W. Johnston.

The Florex Gardens, of North Wales, Pa., showed a vase of Prima Donna roses, which was awarded a certificate of merit. The South Park Floral Co., of Newcastle, Ind., sent a short-stemmed pink rose, with a sulphur yellow reverse, which was named Baby Doll. The carnations shown by the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., were Aviator and Superb, a good light pink, somewhat darker than Enchantress Supreme. Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, exhibited a vase of the new Belle Washburn carnation. C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, Neb., sent a vase of his new red carnation, Nebraska. Miss Theo, shown by Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass., is a dark pink of a good shade. The carnation that attracted as much attention as any was Morning Glow, a pleasing shade of light pink, of the fringed-petal type, which was sent by Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, Mass. An exhibit of seedling mums was sent by Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich., which arrived in bad shape, although some of the pompons came through all right.

The judges during the first days of the exhibition were Messrs. Gude and Field, of Washington, D. C., and S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia.

The show drew a large attendance

The judges of the show were Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, and Charles J. Wood, of Marion.

THREE EASTERN EXHIBITORS.

It is apparent from this year's flower shows that exhibitors are spending more thought, time and money on the staging of their exhibits. Every up-to-date exhibitor nowadays aims to stage his display in an original or unusual manner. This spirit is commendable, for it has been largely responsible for of Newark, N. J., at the first annual mum show of the Essex County Florists' Club, held at the Bamberger store, Newark, November 11 and 12. Philips Bros. won the sweepstake prize for the best all-round display by a retailer. The third illustration shows the flower, fruit and vegetable exhibit of Duke's Farm, of Somerville, N. J., at the exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York, held November 4 to 7, at New York. A. A. MacDonald staged this exhibit, which was awarded a special prize and gold medal.

THE CLEVELAND ROSE.

Regarding the new rose named Cleveland as the result of a voting contest during the recent show, C. H. Totty says: "We are distributing this variety in 1916. It is a seedling from Hugh Dickson, Ltd., of Belfast, Ireland, and we believe will make its mark as a forcing rose on account of its wonderful color. It produces a tremendous quantity of medium length blooms, large and full, and the color is a wonderful shade of rose pink, with an underlying base of orange which will hold the color even in the hottest weather."

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society outdid itself in this year's chrysanthemum show. Never before had professionals and amateurs been so eager to enter exhibits. The New Bedford public library was the brightest spot in the city during the two days' exhibit, November 9 and 10, the show rooms being crowded at all times.

SOLANUM SHOOTS WITHERING.

We are enclosing a twig from one of our Jerusalem cherry plants. It may be quite dry when you receive it, as it is already pretty dry and curled, before being mailed. We have two batches, one in a warm house and the other in a cool one. They are field-grown and bushy and apparently healthy, but every little while one of them begins to wither and curl up its leaves. Cutting off the affected twigs does no good, so we throw the plants out. What is the cause of the trouble?

G. W. H. & S.—Pa.

This is not at all an unusual occurrence. The plants in question suffered more or less in the lifting. Probably all the soil fell away from their roots, and unless treated with great care they would not establish themselves like plants which had even a small ball of earth when potted. I think if you will examine the wilting plants you will find them to be poorly established in the pots. Such plants need a shaded location and should be sprayed once or twice a day until they are strong enough to stand direct sunshine without wilting. This is not a disease, as you may have imagined. About everyone who is in the habit of potting up solanums has had similar experiences.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

GOOD COMMERCIAL VARIETIES.

I am interested in the reply of A. F. J. B. to F. C., under the title of "Good Commercial Varieties," in The Review of November 11, page 42, and I am submitting herewith a list of the varieties we grow, so that A. F. J. B. may revise it, if that is deemed advisable. I should like, also, to have him state his reasons why any particular variety he may suggest is better than the one we grow. Also, will he kindly give the approximate height?

For instance, in his list Mayor Weaver follows Chieftain, where we have Dr. Enguehard. Is Weaver superior to Enguehard, and why? We do not grow Golden Glow, as it is too early and of decidedly inferior quality. As to the magnificent Wm. Turner, this is easily the best of all the varieties we grow, even for commercial purposes. I presume the criticism of this variety by A. F. J. B. has more particular reference to growers who ship their flowers. We sell directly to the consumer and rarely ship any. For this reason, would A. F. J. B. recommend Nakota and Elberon? If so, where would he place them in my list—I mean, as regards the season of blooming?

The varieties we grow are: White—Smith's Advance, Early Snow, Charles Rager, Wm. Turner, White Chadwick and Timothy Eaton. Yellow—Chrysolora, Ramapo, Appleton, Golden Chadwick and Yellow Eaton. Pink—Unaka, Chieftain, Dr. Enguehard and Maud Dean. J. R.—Pa.

There is perhaps no floricultural subject on which there can be a greater diversity of opinion than on the question under discussion. There are a great many mighty good varieties of chrysanthemums. There is also a great diversity in the taste of individuals, besides the differences in markets and the conditions under which the blooms are sold. We grow almost entirely for the local wholesale market. This market will consume large quantities of medium-sized blooms, a grade that will sell at wholesale for $1 to $2 per dozen blooms. The compact, incurved blooms are preferred, to the exclusion of such varieties as Golden Wedding, etc.

Smith's Advance is reflexed and is accepted because there is no other in the market at that time. If Early Frost will come in as early, it will be grown in place of Advance. Arlette Dubois is incurved and Alice Salomon is also a loose incurved bloom. Your Early Snow would sell here and might be easier to handle than Salomon, which has a tendency to be uneven. Mrs. Rager is our ideal of a commercial mum. It is one of the easiest varieties to grow, always produces a good bloom and can be grown with equal success with one to six blooms per plant, the only difference being in the size of the bloom. Lynnwood Hall produces large, pure white blooms, with good stem and foliage. White Dean, like its parent, Maud Dean, has wonderful substance and comes near the ideal commercial mum. W. H. Chadwick is par excellence, when well done, but is a little hard to propagate. We do not grow Timothy Eaton any more. When well done, this variety is good, but we found that when grown to a medium-sized bloom, there were too many of those dirty white flowers among them. It bears too many culls unless it is grown especially well.

The pink section is the weakest of the three. Unaka is far from satisfactory, but the best at its date. Fedora is a pretty, straight-petaled bloom. We are looking for better varieties to displace these. Chieftain is an ideal commercial sort, but somewhat lacking in size when grown to more than one flower. Mayor Weaver has a beautiful color, a good stem and fair size. Dr. Enguehard produced so many off-colored blooms that it became unprofitable. Maud Dean fills the bill for a Thanksgiving day pink; it can be grown to either large or small size successfully.

In yellow we want only a few Golden Glow for extra early. Our main early yellow is Comoleta, which is of fine color and ideal form, and can be grown to as many as three blooms per plant. Chrysolora makes a fine bloom. Robert Halliday is one of the best commercial yellows, in spite of the fact that it has been grown for about twenty-five years; it is of good commercial size and has good form, bright color and a high percentage of perfect blooms; it can be grown to two flowers. Ramapo produces too many culls and is quite susceptible to red spider. The spider loves it. Appleton has the same faults. Lena Baum is a sport from Mrs. Rager, identical in every respect except the color, which is a straw yellow. Major Bonaffon needs no description; many are discarding it, as it seems to be losing vitality. Dolly Dimple is a reflexed bloom; it is so fine and such an easy doer that grower and retailer alike accept it as one of the best. Nagoya is a deep yellow of medium size; it can be grown two flowers to the plant and always makes a well-shaped flower; this is also true of Dolly Dimple. Golden Chadwick is fine when well done, but is not so easy to manage as the last two. Yellow Eaton meets with the same objections as the variety it sported from.

We grow Wm. Turner, Nakota and Elberon in limited quantity. As stated previously, they must be grown to fancy blooms, or the blooms will lack finish and the stems are likely to be weak. Nakota always has good stems. Our market will consume a limited quantity of these large fellows, but not nearly as many as of the medium-sized grade. Naturally, we encourage the sale of these large ones, but we have found that an oversupply of them has a tendency to reduce values all along the line.

The heights of the varieties named in my list and not in yours are as follows, from June 1 planting: Early Frost, three feet; Arlette Dubois, three feet; Alice Salomon, five feet; Lynnwood Hall, five feet; Comoleta, five feet; Robt. Halliday, four feet; Dolly Dimple, five feet; Nagoya, five feet; Fedora, three feet; Mayor Weaver, five feet; Nakota, four feet; Elberon, five feet.

CARNATIONS

SALT EXTERMINATOR OF GRUBS.

The inquiry by C. B., of Ohio, in The Review for November 11, seeking an exterminator of the grubs in his carnation field, has interested me greatly, for I have been troubled by this pest and have found a reliable insecticide for it. Common salt sprayed over the field at the rate of twenty barrels to an acre, directly after fall plowing, will help to rid the field of grubs and other insects. The salt also acts as a mild fertilizer. T. M. Fitzgerald.

TWO QUERIES ON STIGMONOSE.

You will see that the enclosed carnation leaves are affected with some sort of disease. Please give me the name of the disease and suggest a remedy.

A. R.—Ind.

Can you tell from the looks of the enclosed leaves what is the matter with my White Enchantress carnations? I have never before had any experience with this sort of trouble. The plants were benched about September 1, but have never grown as the others have. What few blooms they bear do not look as they should. What can I do for them? They are too woody and grow too slowly. What would be the best solution to spray them with? The foliage is speckled all the way to the top. G. W. B.—N. Y.

A. R.'s plants are suffering from the disease known as stigmonose. For this he can do but little until he succeeds in getting the plants into an active state of growth. Avoid overwatering and overfeeding. If the soil was good to start with, there is probably enough plant food in it to run along until toward spring. Keep the surface open by frequent slight scratching. When propagating avoid all plants which show many of these light spots on the foliage. It is necessary to use great discrimination in this respect, however, as some varieties, such as the Enchantress family, are sure to show it to a greater or less extent, according to the cultural conditions.

G. W. B.'s plans seem to show the effects of both stigmonose and red spider. Those light spots inside of the leaves are caused by the stigmonose, while that scurfy appearance on the surface is caused by the spider. If G. W. B. will examine the leaves closely he will be able to see the tiny insects. For the stigmonose the treatment will be the same as has just been recommended for A. R.'s plants. Salt water sprayed on the foliage is the most effective remedy for red spider. Get an Evans salt sprayer and use it according to directions. A. F. J. B.

THE VARIETY IS MATCHLESS.

We are sending you, under separate cover, a sample of carnations which we bought last spring and for which we paid a good price. The flowers ought to be large, but we have had none larger than the ones sent. The plants are strong and vigorous and yield fairly well, but the stems are short and the flowers are small. If you can tell us the name of the variety, we shall greatly appreciate the favor. These are growing in a house where other kinds are doing well. S. G. C.—Wyo.

The variety in question is Matchless. This carnation, as it is grown in these parts, has fine, large blooms. The stems would, at this date, be short or fairly long, according to the way in which the plants were handled. If you planted later than the second week in August, they would likely be short now. The foliage enclosed with the blooms seems healthy and, with ordinarily good care, these plants will give you first-class stock in due time. A. F. J. B.

FUNGUS DISEASE.

Enclosed you will find some diseased carnation shoots. The branches are drying up and dying, and we cannot find the cause or a remedy. We have used two applications of lime on the soil in the bench, but have not allowed any of the lime to get onto the plants. There were signs of stem-rot, but the lime checked it. The leaves of some of the plants have light streaks on them. What can we do to stop this trouble? Most of the plants are healthy and have a good crop of shoots in all stages of growth. S. B.—N. Y.

Applying lime to the soil will have little or no effect on the disease which is troubling your carnations. It is a fungus disease, which must be treated locally, and the best remedy is Bordeaux mixture. One or two thorough applications will probably check it. Cut out what affected branches you see before you apply the Bordeaux, as they will die anyway. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION SUPERB.

In The Review for November 18 the following paragraph appeared in the report of the Chicago show:

"Superb, entered in the flesh pink classes by the Thompson Carnation Co., was ruled out as being too dark to compete in this color, and a protest was filed. Superintendent P. W. Peterson pointed out that at the Cleveland show Superb won two firsts and two seconds in classes open only to flesh pink."

With reference to this N. P. Miller, secretary of the Chicago show, states:

Church Wedding Decoration by W. D. Salmon & Co., Grenada, Miss.

"A protest was entered by G. M. Fish, manager of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., on this carnation, and I wish to state through your paper that the judges decided as follows: 'We scored the three entries in this class, and your entry lost out by one-half point.' This was signed by J. S. Wilson, W. A. Kennedy and August Koch. It was not a case of color, but of points."

SALMON'S DECORATION.

What may be done by an enterprising florist in a small town in the way of a wedding decoration is shown by the two accompanying illustrations. This was one of several large wedding orders turned out during the month of June by W. D. Salmon & Co., Grenada, Miss., which ran into the hundreds of dollars. This particular decoration was in the First Baptist church at Grenada for the Brown-Brewer wedding, and was the work of E. J. Weyneth.

The pulpit was occupied by a white Italian pergola, over which were twined yellow Rambler roses. The white lattice which screened the organ was also decorated with yellow ramblers, as were the arches and windows of the church. Palms and ferns filled the baptistry in the background. Along the aisle were white columns decorated with ramblers and supporting French baskets filled with Sunburst roses. The color scheme was further carried out by yellow and blue candles. This was in keeping with the gowns of the bridesmaids and matrons, half of whom wore blue and half yellow.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hardy Lillies.

The importations of Lilium speciosum and L. auratum will soon be here. Florists doing a retail trade can hardly afford to be without some of each variety. Use good-sized pots for them. Those eight to ten inches in diameter, containing four to eight bulbs each, will give better returns with less labor than smaller pots containing one or two bulbs each. If the soil is fairly moist, do not water for some time. The pots can be stored in a cool house, below a bench clear from drip, or on a cellar floor. They will naturally flower from June until September, according to how they are forced or retarded. L. speciosum album is invaluable in design work. L. speciosum Melpomene, or magnificum, are also extremely useful colored forms.

Lilium auratum is an uncertain lily. It starts irregularly. Some large bulbs will never flower at all. This may be due to premature digging or to disease. It is a good plan to put the bulbs singly in 4-inch pots and, after they are well started, a number can be placed together in large pots. If this is not done, the different spikes will not flower uniformly.

For outdoor planting it is well to protect the ground where they are to go, using a mulch of straw or leaves. In planting, cover nine or ten inches deep. Put some sand below and over the bulbs. Do not bring any fresh manure in contact with them, but you can, if you wish, give the surface a mulch of such material. It is much more satisfactory to plant now than to pot the bulbs and plant them out in the spring. Do not keep any variety of lily out of the soil any longer than is absolutely necessary, as they soon shrivel and lose much of their vitality.

Planting Late Dutch Bulbs.

At this season there are always some tempting offers of left-over Dutch bulbs, and, with the ground still open and in fine condition for planting, the present is a good time to purchase any narcissi or tulips, planting either outdoors or in coldframes, for spring flowering, to follow stock which has been in the flats for some time. The idea that bulbs will not do well if planted at this date is all wrong. A few years ago I planted thousands of narcissi and tulips in Christmas week and they bloomed satisfactorily. It will pay to try a few in coldframes. In these it is possible to advance or retard them easily; in fact, by using board shutters over them during hot spells they can be kept back later than bulbs in the open air. Try some of the Darwin and cottage tulips in frames and they will prove extremely serviceable when the forced bulbs are over.

Pentstemons.

Pentstemons raised from winter or spring sown seeds are late in flowering. To secure strong plants, put in a good batch of cuttings now in a cold greenhouse. Seeds may be sown, if preferred, but if stock plants are on the place, cuttings, which root easily, will be found the more satisfactory. Pentstemons are splendid border plants, good for bedding and excellent for cutting. I wonder if any enterprising florist has tried them in benches as a spring crop. There seems no good reason why they would not succeed if treated in the same way as snapdragons, and certainly they would prove a pleasing addition to our list of spring-flowering plants, where something out of the common is always asked for.

Antirrhinums.

To follow chrysanthemums, there are few better crops than snapdragons. Far the best selling color is pink. A more limited number of white and yellow and a still smaller number of red can be sold. Do not dig up and plant any cut-back, field-grown plants; they are not worth the candle. Young plants from 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, seedlings preferred, should be used. There are times of glut in the wholesale markets, but many growers do not ship there and can move all their flowers at home. There is no better paying crop for the average country florist than snapdragons. Seed from a reliable strain comes from seventy-five to ninety per cent true to color. Seedlings are more vigorous than cuttings and will flower profitably over a longer period. We have had plants benched early in August which were full of flower when pulled out the following July, and these had only four and one-half inches of soil. Careful watering and feeding kept them going. For planting out now, allow the plants 10x12; later in the season they can go as close as 8x8, but the wider space now gives the best returns.

Let the young plants come right into flower before heading them back. If you pinch them while the shoots are soft, the plants will break weakly and most of the shoots will fail to flower. As soon as a crop is cut off, do not depend on any grassy growth which has not flowered, but on shoots which start from the base of the plants. Leave a little of the upper growth on until these get well started, then remove it. Keep a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees for snapdragons. The lower figure gives somewhat fewer winter flowers, but a much heavier crop of finer quality in the spring.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Calanthes.

The foliage of calanthes should be retained as late as possible. Do not, therefore, withhold water too suddenly, but give it in much reduced amounts from this time on. Calanthes want a warm house, not less than 60 degrees at night, and 65 degrees is better. As the flowers develop give them, if possible, a drier heat and a lower temperature, but not below 58 degrees at night. The spikes are now pushing up and, given warm treatment, many plants should be well flowered for the holidays.

Vanda Cærulea.

Some of the Vanda cærulea have already flowered; others are just showing their spikes. These latter will bloom at a time when such flowers are valuable. As soon as spikes are perceptible be sure to protect them from marauding snails with a band of cotton-wood. Plants of this vanda do not need a high degree of heat; the cool end of the cattleya house with good light will suit them admirably. Keep some live sphagnum on the surfaces of the pots. The plants seem to thrive better with this moss covering. To flower this beautiful blue orchid successfully, the plants must not be heavily shaded in the summer. Often the finest, dark-leaved plants will not flower at all.

Phalænopsis.

Phalænopsis, the beautiful East Indian orchid, is not so greatly appreciated in the east as in California, but it is pleasing to see how its culture is increasing. The plants must have a warm, moist house. They need more shade than probably any other orchid, to prevent the beautiful shiny leaves from burning, and they must be ventilated with extreme care. All air must be well warmed before reaching the plants; anything in the nature of a draft is injurious. P. Schilleriana, pink suffused with lavender, and P. amabilis, pure white, are the two most profitable varieties to grow, the last named being most in demand. When occasion permits, sponge the plants with tepid water. This, if done carefully, not only keeps the foliage clean, but also prevents red spider from getting a foothold, and it is in winter, when much fire heat is used, that this sponging is most necessary. To grow phalænopsis well, a house should be provided with tanks of water in order to prevent aridity.

WHEN CATTLEYAS ARE BULBS.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals has sustained the contention of Maltus & Ware that certain orchid "bulbs" imported through the port of New York, which were assessed with duty by the collector of customs at twenty-five per cent ad valorem, were mother flowering "bulbs," imported exclusively for propagating purposes, and were therefore entitled to free entry under paragraph 210 of the tariff act of 1913. The Board of United States General Appraisers at New York had overruled the protest of the importers.

The decision of the court is important, inasmuch as it sets at rest the question as to whether or not orchids, by reason of their peculiar method of propagating, are to be considered strictly as mother bulbs. The court says that the evidence fairly shows that the thickened portion of the cattleya is not a true bulb, but is a pseudo-bulb. Nothing is to be found, however, in the tariff act of 1913, or in its legislative history, which would justify the conclusion that Congress intended that the term "bulbs" should be given a strictly scientific or botanical meaning. That such an intention can not be attributed to Congress, the court states, is established by the fact that paragraph 210 of the act enumerates canna, dahlia, herbaceous peony, Iris Kämpferi, begonia and gloxinia bulbs, which, according to competent witnesses introduced by the government, are not in a botanical sense bulbs at all, but are pseudo-bulbs, just as much as were the bulbs which were here the subject of controversy. The testimony rather strengthens the view that it is not the legislative purpose to confine the proviso to true bulbs; that is to say, to bulbs recognized as such by botanists.

The court does not decide whether cattleya bulbs which have not yet flowered are entitled to free entry under the proviso to paragraph 210. The bulbs in question had already produced flowers and leaves.

ON A RICH MAN'S TOMB.

What is seen or not seen, in a picture or elsewhere, depends largely on each observer's habit of thought, on the nature of his interest or curiosity. For instance, a person who has no interest in florists' pursuits would see in the illustration on this page an elegant mausoleum, surrounded by strikingly beautiful grounds. The object on the door of the tomb would only be one of the minor details. But the floral designer with a sharp eye for business would see a wreath, a large and apparently well-executed wreath, with a tomb and pretty scenery for a background, and he might remark regretfully that the background was so big and imposing as to detract from the fine effect of the principal feature, the wreath.

Wreath Placed Annually on the Tomb of Morosini.

At any rate, the illustration was intended primarily to display the wreath. Yet the background also has its significance, as a testimonial to the wreath and its maker, for a poor specimen of the designer's art would not be likely to be placed in a position of such honor.

The wreath was the work of A. Kottmiller, 426 Madison avenue, New York city, and was made of orchids and valley. The orchids were principally oncidiums and vandas. The mausoleum which the wreath adorned is situated in Woodlawn cemetery, New York, and is the last earthly resting place of C. P. Morosini, a partner of Jay Gould. An equally large and costly wreath—valued at several hundred dollars—is placed at the entrance of the tomb on each anniversary of this rich man's death.

FOR NEPHROLEPIS GROWERS.

Aid from Botanic Garden.

At the Brooklyn Botanic Garden there has been assembled a collection of between sixty and seventy varieties of nephrolepis, over fifty of which are named, as shown in the lists given below. The catalogues of English growers offer about forty additional varieties, which the Garden expects to purchase within a few months.

In addition to maintaining this collection for the purpose of scientific study, the Garden desires to make it of value to American growers of nephrolepis, and makes herewith the following offer: Small plants or runners of any of the plants named will be furnished to growers interested in trying them out as fast as a limited supply of stock plants will allow. Requests for information regarding any of the varieties listed below will be answered by the writer of this note as completely as available data will permit. Furthermore, the Garden is having reprinted the writer's article on nephrolepis prepared for Bailey's Cyclopaedia of American Horticulture, and will be glad to send a copy of this reprint to any grower on request. This contains a general discussion of nephrolepis, with descriptions of all the varieties about which information was obtainable.

In return growers are asked to send in any new forms which they may produce, and also any old forms—such, for example, as Barrowsii, which has not yet been obtainable in the United States, although listed in English catalogues. In connection with the cyclopaedia article the writer will welcome and greatly appreciate notification of any mistakes or omissions or other information pertinent to the subject.

List 1. Varieties of N. exaltata of authenticated identification, with two or three exceptions noted, the stock plants having been obtained from their original source:

N. exaltata (from Porto Rico).
Bostoniensis (Becker).
Piersoni (?), elegantissima, elegantissima improved, elegantissima compacta, superbissima, muscosa, viridissima, Dwarf Boston; Whitman, Whitman compacta, magnifica, gracillima (?); Amerpohlil; Clarkil, Smithil; Craigil, robusta, Wanamakeril; Scottil, Wagner, falcata; Anna Foster (?); Elmfordil; Harrisil, Millil; Rooseveltil, Teddy, Jr.; Scholzell (typical 2-pinnate), Scholzell (3-pinnate, erect lvd.), Scholzell (3-pinnate, spreading); Glatrasil, New York; todeoides (?).

List 2. Varieties of other species than N. exaltata; identification not yet verified:

N. cordifolia, tuberosa plumosa, pectinata, Duffil, rivularis, new species (?), biserrata (davalliolides ?), biserrata furcans, hirsutula, hirsutula tripinnatifida, Wittboldil, floccigera, acuminata, Philippinensis, superba (or Westoni).

Besides these, other forms to the number of ten or fifteen are being grown at the Garden. Some of them are possibly of no commercial value, but others are of value and are likely to be introduced eventually. The latter have been sent to the Garden with the understanding that they will not be allowed to go out.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS SEED.

When should Asparagus plumosus seed be taken, and what is the process of drying off inside plants?

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

TO MAKE HYDRANGEAS BLUE.

The discussion on how to make hydrangeas blue, begun in The Review of October 14 and continued in the issues of October 21 and November 4, has interested me, and as a grower of hydrangeas I would like to give my experiences in this respect. I have found that hydrangea flowers will become blue if alum is used in the water; also that if the soil does not contain iron, nails and old metal placed in the soil or water will make the flowers blue. I have taken pink-flowering plants and made them produce blue flowers by these methods.

At Columbus, Ga., the hydrangeas are all blue, due to the fact that alum is used in purifying the water for drinking purposes. Moreover, the soil at Columbus contains iron.

On our ranch the soil contains iron, but we have a private water supply, in which alum is not used. As all the hydrangeas not treated are pink, it stands to reason that both alum and iron are needed to change the color of the flowers.

I start the treatment when the flower heads begin to form, watering the plants twice a week with the mixture of alum and water. To a 1-gallon can of water I use as much alum as will safely rest on two forefingers. When the flowers are about to open, I discontinue this treatment and use clear water. By these means—using alum in water and the iron in the soil—I have obtained all the blue hydrangeas I wanted, and I am sure that anyone trying this formula will have similar results.

J. C. Armstrong.

CONTROL OF HYDRANGAEA COLOR.

I have become interested in the discussion in recent numbers of The Review on the control of color in flowering Hydrangea Hortensia. I fully believed that there was a practical method in use that insured success, and also that some of the expert growers would submit the answer, but this has not happened, and the replies from competent correspondents lead me to infer that "there ain't any sich method." If this is really the case, it is not creditable to the profession.

By referring to a few sources of information, I found that the "capricious change of color" was commented on as early as 1796, and it would thus appear that we have been on the quest ever since. As no further suggestions may appear, it may prove of some interest and possibly of some value to summarize the matter I have found recorded. Extended reference would no doubt yield some modifying experience.

The observations refer about equally to pot plants and outdoor garden plants. Pot plants in composts of decayed or decaying vegetable matter—leaves, wood, muck, bog, marsh and peat soils—yielded results varying in color and produced in varying periods of time, from six months to a number of years.

Where change of color was sought by the use of alum or iron solutions, there was like variability.

Of outdoor plants the same observations are recorded. Some plants had pink flowers, others blue ones, and still others had both colors on the same plant at the same time, in several tones of color.

There was also reversion of blue to pink and pink to blue after long periods. This seemed to indicate that in some soils the active agent was in such form that it required a lengthy period to become available; in other instances it seemed to be existent in sufficient quantity to produce color for a term of years.

In outdoor changes credit is also given to oxide of iron, sulphide of iron, saline springs, fluor spar, etc., all of which were present in various localities where changes were observed.

Two positive statements appear from individual experimenters. One of them says that the use of liquid manure will invariably produce pink flowers, no matter what other agents may be employed therewith. The other says that three parts of old, fine charcoal to one part of soil produced handsome, deep blue flowers in successive batches of plants during a 3-year period. I believe a year's observations at an experiment station would disclose the active agent.

The Market.

There has been a decided change in the weather during the last two weeks. Instead of pleasant, Indian summer days we are having unusually bad weather; at times it is rather cold, the temperature going down to the freezing point and below, with heavy rains.

Business for November so far has not been as good as expected and is rather disappointing after having such good trade in October. However, it is hoped that the Thanksgiving trade will make up for the dullness during the first part of this month. Stock is plentiful. The cut of chrysanthemums is heavy. Roses and carnations are plentiful and are the best ever produced at this season of the year. Chrysanthemum day, which was observed November 13, did not come up to expectations, although considerable stock was sold, especially in the cheaper grade of mums.

Various Notes.

Mrs. A. H. Dailey attended the Chicago flower show.

C. L. Baum attended the Cleveland flower show and visited florists and friends at Cincinnati and nearby cities.

Addison J. McNutt is cutting some fine roses, especially Ophelias and Hoosier Beauties, with stems from three to five feet long.

Charles Crouch continues to have a heavy cut of fine chrysanthemums.

DAVENPORT, IA.

Club Meeting.

The Tri-City Florists' Club held its November meeting at the conservatories at Vander Veer park, the chrysanthemum show being at its height. A novelty of merit was a chance seedling of Primula obconica with double flowers of a fine pink shade. Some half dozen or more plants propagated from the original seedling were shown and should prove a good addition.

In addition to the regular order of business, the question of holding a Tri-City flower show was brought up and the following committee appointed to consider the matter and report at the next meeting: Moline, J. Staack, A. Anderson, C. Sorensen; Rock Island, H. Gaethje, L. Stapp, Ed. Patten; Davenport, Wm. Goos, H. Pauli, C. J. Reardon.

A. Anderson gave a talk on the Chicago flower show, as did C. J. Reardon. Chas. Schwake, of New York, a visitor, also gave a short and interesting address comparing the Chicago and Cleveland shows. John Williamson, of Boston, a visitor, favored the club with a talk on clematis.

C. O. E. Boehm, superintendent of parks, announced supper and the members were unanimous in the belief that the meeting was one of the best yet.

The club adjourned to meet at the Patten home in Rock Island December 8.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been about all we could ask, with plenty of stock to be had. Mums are getting pretty well down and this week will wind up nearly all except a few stragglers. Mums have moved much better this season than usual. Roses are of extra fine quality and there has been almost an oversupply, owing to the heavy demand on mums, but we are feeling easy now. Carnations are more plentiful and are used up rather closely right along. Valley seems to be scarce. Sweet peas are making their appearance and are welcomed for corsage work. There are a few Paper Whites and they find ready sale.

Various Notes.

Samuel Graff has opened a branch store in the Hartman Theatre building, and has nice quarters there. While it is small, it has a good front for showing stock.

The Evans Floral Co. has discontinued its stand in the Virginia hotel and is looking after all business at the greenhouses.

The Munk Floral Co. is figuring on putting in a new front at the store.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is well satisfied with the smoke consumer installed a short time ago.

J. M.

Ames, Ia.—The formal opening of the $65,000 propagation building and greenhouse at the Iowa State College was attended by many members of the trade. There were flower, fruit and vegetable exhibits and a novel display consisting of a miniature greenhouse, built by the horticultural students of the college. The horticultural department now has more than 30,000 square feet of glass.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The market and business conditions have not changed to any extent, although the social functions and party decorations have become more numerous. There is plenty of all kinds of stock and most of it is of first-class quality. Carnations are exceptionally slow and have been for the last three weeks. The market is overstocked, but a decided change is expected as Thanksgiving approaches.

Chrysanthemums are fast ebbing away and the Eaton varieties will soon be the remaining flowers. The sales of mums have been good this season and some extra choice stock was sent to the market by the local growers. Pompons continue abundant.

Valley is not overplentiful. Violets still are on the short end of the market, but the near-by growers are shipping in some excellent stock. California violets still are arriving, to supply the ever increasing demand. Roses are beginning to pick up, both in sale and condition. Beauties are decidedly scarce and the demand is far in excess of the supply. They are commencing to take the place of chrysanthemums to some extent.

Big Doings in Prospect.

The Minnesota State Horticultural Society will hold its forty-ninth annual meeting at the West hotel December 7 to 9. Allied organizations will meet with it and have part in the program. Thomas E. Cashman, nurseryman and florist, of Owatonna, is president, and A. W. Latham, of Minneapolis, is secretary. The membership is 3,412. The program of the meetings includes the following subjects of trade interest:

DECEMBER 7.

"Strawberries by the Acre," by George J. Kellogg, retired nurseryman, Janesville, Wis.
 "The Nurseryman as King," by O. S. Harrison, York, Neb.
 "Bulbs," by Max Kaiser, Merriam Park, representing the Minnesota State Florists' Society.
 "Greenhouses and Their Appurtenances," by Wm. Keeling, florist, with Holm & Olson, St. Paul.

DECEMBER 8.

"Greenhouse vs. Hotbeds; Investment, Care and Results Compared," by Frank H. Gibbs, market gardener, St. Anthony Park, Minn.
 "Minnesota's State Flower," by E. A. Smith, of the Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn.
 "Planting for Color Effect in the Garden," three essays competing for prizes offered by Mrs. D. W. C. Ruff.

Exhibition and judging of flowers by A. S. Swanson, retired florist, Wayzata, Minn.

DECEMBER 9.

"Campaigning on the Yellowstone Trail," by Clarence Wedge, nurseryman, Albert Lea, Minn.
 "The Peony, New and Old," by A. M. Brand, nurseryman, Faribault, Minn.

Clarence Wedge, of Albert Lea, is president of the plant breeders' auxiliary and has on his program one nurseryman, W. S. Higbie, of Eden Prairie.

During the state meeting, and in the same hotel, the Florists' Club will have a flower show. The committee had a final meeting last week, at the store of Rice Bros., to complete all details of the arrangements.

Various Notes.

The florists' school session November 18 had Wm. Desmond, of the L. S. Donaldson Co., with an excellent paper on salesmanship.

Hans Rosacher is planning the erection of five more greenhouses. He will devote two to roses and two to carnations, the fifth to be used for ferns.

Will Bros. are sending in some excellent violets and chrysanthemums.

Oscar Amundson reports several large decorations and states that society is more active.
 G. S. A.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Conditions last week were satisfactory to both grower and retailer. The market on roses and violets is somewhat tight, but mums, carnations, bouvardias, orchids, etc., are plentiful and of good quality. The demand readily takes care of the supply. Mums will be cleaned up for Thanksgiving. Pot plants of all kinds for the Christmas holidays are now in the best of condition and a good supply will be on hand, from present indications.

Club Election.

The St. Paul Florists' Club held its regular meeting at the O. R. Eckhardt store November 16. The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, John Nyloff; vice-president, William Keeling; secretary, O. R. Eckhardt; treasurer, N. C. Hansen.

The attendance was large and a number of important topics were discussed.

Various Notes.

Henry Puvogel has erected a 50-foot, round, brick chimney, to replace his old sheetiron smokestack. This concern reports business good and stock in the best of condition.

Messrs. A. Lauritzen and William Swanson have purchased the old park board greenhouses at Como park. The range, which consists of eight houses forty-seven feet long, will be wrecked by the new owners.

The West Side Floral Co. reports business good. The mums have nearly all been cut. They were entirely satisfactory. Bulb stock, carnations and sweet peas look fine. This concern recently purchased two adjoining lots, a space badly needed by the growing business.

NEW ENGLAND

New Haven, Conn.—David Rees has opened a flower store at 355 Grand avenue.

Springfield, Mass.—Edward B. Beals has sold his greenhouses to Russell C. Parsons.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Miss Ethel Horan, daughter of James Horan, was married November 10 to Frederick J. Brady.

Newport, R. I.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peckham observed informally last week the fifty-sixth anniversary of their marriage at Orchard Hill Farm, Middletown.

Newport, R. I.—John H. Phalen has been summoned for grand jury duty and John Anderson, Jr., for the petit jury in the Superior court.

Waterbury, Conn.—Albert S. Nodine, who has been supplying several local florists with stock from his range on the Meriden road, has opened a retail store of his own at 134 South Main street.

Charles Vogt reports business good at his new location on Seventh street. His store makes a fine showing, for it extends through to Sixth street, giving him two fronts.

J. W. Hoffman, who for the last two years conducted a store on Sixth street, has discontinued his business.

C. R. F.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business showed some improvement last week. Orders for decorations are increasing steadily. The cut stock was well cleaned up last week, but towards the end of the week yellow mums were scarce, while other colors were plentiful. The cooler weather has increased the demand for carnations, roses and other flowers. The price of stock has advanced in all lines. Carnations are steadily increasing in quantity. Lilies and valley are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell has entirely recovered from his accident and is back on the job. He reports business as being good.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a good share of orders for decorations and funeral pieces. This company has booked many decorations for December.

T. J. Noll & Co. report business as being good both in cut stock and supplies.

Henry Kusik & Co. say that business is good, but that there is not enough stock to fill all orders, especially for yellow mums. The out-of-town business has been brisk during the last few days.

Miss Jewell, formerly of East Eleventh street, has moved to her new location at 1118 Walnut street. The trade wishes her success in her new location.

W. J. Barnes and family have the sympathy of the trade in the death of Mrs. Barnes, which occurred last week.

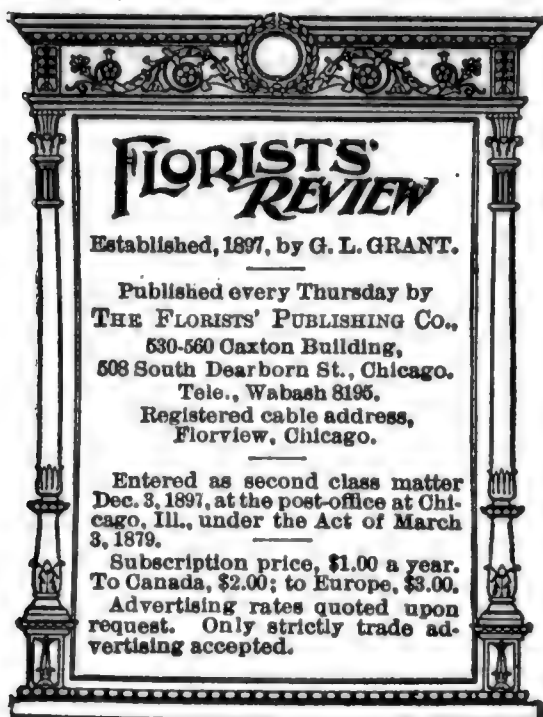

H. H. C.

Lynn, Mass.—Gibbs Bros. have opened a vase and jardiniere department in their flower store. Importations from France, Belgium and Japan are shown, as well as Aztec ware and dinner sets.

Manchester, N. H.—For a recent sale held for the benefit of the fresh air fund, Frederick Bixby contributed 1,000 America gladioli, which were disposed of at a good price by young women of the society.

New London, Conn.—George E. Fisher has resigned his position as manager of the store of S. J. Reuter & Son, and expects to open a flower store of his own on State street. Mr. Fisher has been with S. J. Reuter since 1910.

Greenfield, Mass.—Believing that an auto truck is the first step towards a wider business radius, or a larger market for his wares, E. A. Richards has purchased an Overland for his delivery department and will now solicit business at more distant points.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex. Secretary and treasurer as before.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

ALONG with the great success of the William Turner mum this season comes word of at least three lemon-yellow sports of that variety.

THE trade is buying for Christmas much larger quantities of stock than were being ordered at this date last year. There seems to be a unanimous belief that business will be good.

THE apothecary has turned himself into a merchant by adding an infinite variety of wares to the stock in front of the prescription counter. Why shouldn't the florist do more or less the same thing?

THOSE who mail plants or bulbs will have to look out for the new postal regulation regarding terminal inspection of plants or nursery stock sent to California, Florida, Montana and Arizona. The new rules are strict and someone is likely to get caught.

THE manner in which a certain newspaper states its circulation claims reminds one of our friends of Hek's Jerry S., which made a mile in 2:39½, the best time for a 9-year-old on a circular track before 11 a. m., driven by a trainer with red whiskers and wearing a fancy vest with no buttons.

THE posterettes advertising the National Flower Show are ready for distribution. Anyone who will use them on his correspondence will be supplied on request addressed to W. F. Therkildson, chairman of the publicity committee, 475 North Fifth street, Philadelphia, or to the general office of the show committee, 1205 Widener building, Philadelphia, where Miss M. C. Hudome is in charge.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

BASKET OF POMPONS.

The Review would like to receive a good, clear photograph of a basket of pompon or single mums, not too elaborate; something that the average florist can sell.

THE BIG DIVIDEND COLUMNS.

The classified ad pages at the back of The Review are known as the big dividend columns. They contain hundreds of crackerjack salesmen for as many concerns. At one stroke every advertiser in the big dividend columns talks to an army of good buyers. This department is the most thumbed section of The Review—it is a buying bureau for the greater part of the trade.

The grower who uses the classified department is introduced to the trade by a friend of the family. A trade paper held in high esteem by its readers naturally is the best business-getting medium for the man who wants to sell its readers.

Recently several growers who appreciated these facts began experimenting with classified ads in The Review—at little cost to them. How solidly they broke into the big dividend columns they tell below. Listen:

We have received orders for all our surplus stock advertised in The Review's classified department, and we are much pleased with the pulling power of your publication.—Oakland Gardens Nursery, Detroit, Mich., November 15, 1915.

Our peonies were all sold through the classified ads. Kindly discontinue the peony ad and insert the following instead.—Babcock & Sons, Charlevoix, Mich., October 25, 1915.

Here is persuasion that holds water. It cannot miss the most skeptical seller. Performance surely is the happiest proof in the world. Who will be the next to break into the big dividend columns?

BOUQUET GREEN.

In mid-November there is not much going in bouquet green, the season really being encompassed in the three weeks following Thanksgiving, but just before the season opens there always are a lot of inquiries from people who are feeling out the market—"getting hep," as the saying goes. These investigators have been much in evidence during the last week.

In Wisconsin green no longer is picked in large quantity on speculation. It is necessary to go farther and farther into the woods each year and the picking costs more. There are, of course, moderate quantities still brought into the general stores and offered for exchange under the old system, but the bulk of the stock now is picked with a definite understanding as to its disposition. The result is a considerably more steady market and a somewhat higher cost at the railroad. An oversupply now results from misjudgment of the probable demand rather than from the appearance of unexpected quantities of green.

Last year there was more green picked than was needed. It seems that during recent years of bad weather and high prices, florists in general and many others got out of the habit of using lycopodium in quantity, and this, coupled with the general business depression last fall, cut the demand below the point anticipated. With this in view, no great amount of green has been picked on speculation this season; the weather has been favorable, but no other condition has tended to stimulate the shippers to pick green much beyond definite engagements. There seems to be enough green to meet all ordinary demands, but not enough so that there should be much danger of the market getting out of hand.

At Chicago November 23 green was quoted at $5.25 to $6, according to the quantity wanted.

THE GLADIOLUS CONVENTION.

H. Youell, secretary of the American Gladiolus Society, is asking members to vote on the place for the next annual meeting and exhibition. He has sent out the following letter:

It is most important that the place of holding the next annual show of the American Gladiolus Society be decided upon as soon as possible.

We have been invited by the Rochester florists to hold our show there next year, but as their exhibit is held the end of August, this seems entirely too late.

Cleveland has been suggested, and possibly good arrangements could be made there to secure a fine show.

An invitation has also been received from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to hold our show in Boston next year, with the promise of $400 in prizes being offered. Probably in no city in the United States is there more interest in flowers than in Boston.

Will you kindly mark the city of your choice and return to me by November 30? Only those whose dues are paid to 1916 are entitled to vote.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

As supply decreased, business improved last week, business being extremely satisfactory in most of the wholesale houses, although there was complaint that carnations did not bring what they should, probably because of the competition of the pompon mums. This week, with Thanksgiving approaching, the market opened strong. The lower temperature has operated to improve the quality of receipts, with the exception of roses, many of which are somewhat off color as a result of the preponderance of cloudy days. Supply in most lines is no more than sufficient to meet the demand, while in some there is a decided shortage. With the Thanksgiving demand superimposed upon such conditions, the market is clearing in a manner that leaves no room for complaint. A feature of the holiday demand is the large number of unusually good orders from distant points.

Beauties are scarce. Those who have a few say their excellent quality is a contributing cause of their popularity, but it is probable the general shortage of Russell and red roses has much to do with it. White roses are practically the only ones available in quantity. Popular enough in the hot weather, the white rose can hardly hope to compete with its warmer colored sisters when the days grow crisp; its only place is in funeral work.

Carnations continue to arrive in abundance, and so large is the variety in color, size and length of stem that they may be utilized for almost any purpose. Demand, though good, is not strong enough to handle the large volume of receipts. Valley is still short enough to be an object of interest. Sweet peas are more plentiful and finer than ever before at Thanksgiving. Easter lilies are inclined to hang, though not in large supply. Rubrums are practically out of the market for the present. Violets, single and double, are moving in a more satisfactory manner than in several weeks. Daisies and mignonette are available. Snapdragons are again with us. Cattleyas are most unqualifiedly scarce and have brought excellent prices.

Chrysanthemums have passed their zenith. Supply is rapidly declining and receipts move with a corresponding degree of ease. All varieties, however, do not move with the same facility. The yellows always lead in this market, with the whites and pinks trailing behind in the order named. Pompons, while less plentiful than a week ago, still are so abundant the buyers hesitate to pay advanced prices.

Greens are again coming into their own with the approach of Christmas. Orders for boxwood are gathering strength, and winter berries and pine branches make their holiday appeal. Plumosus sprays remain well on the short side of the market. Anything green, however, is in order and the demand grows with the passing of each day.

The Amling Addition.

With reference to the plans of the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood, to double its range of glass, as reported in The Review for October 28, it is announced that a contract has been made with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., for a range of nine steel frame connected houses, ridge and furrow style, each house 44x550, nine feet to the gutters, twenty feet to the ridge. The contract, which approximates $100,000, calls for labor and material to complete the houses, with a vacuum steam heating system. The total cost of the plant, including a new brick and steel service building, boilers and other equipment, will be about $135,000. The range covers 220,000 square feet of ground and represents 275,000 square feet of glass. This is the first contract signed by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. and is one of the largest ever made for commercial greenhouses all for immediate erection. P. L. McKee, president, was the designer of the plant. The erection will be in charge of B. F. Dupre. The manufacturing end will be looked after by J. E. Jones.

The parties to the deal on the Amling side were Albert F. Amling, Otto Amling and Wm. Collatz. The work of building was started November 22 and the job is to be finished next May. The houses are to be used for roses for the Chicago wholesale market.

The Then Seedling.

Crossing carnations has been the hobby of John Then for a number of years. His experiments have been rewarded with varying degrees of success. Mr. Then, however, would not be satisfied with anything of mediocre grade or even common excellence, so he kept quietly at work crossing carnations and watching results until a brilliant red seedling was evolved that as No. 701 took the first prize for any red seedling and also the sweepstakes for the best of the seedlings at the Chicago flower show.

This is the third year the seedling has been grown and there are now

1,000 plants on the benches in Anton Then's greenhouses at 2219 Winnemac avenue. These, according to John Then, were benched July 20 and are now blooming freely and throwing shoots profusely. The flower is an intense brilliant red of excellent size. The plant produces an amazing number of growths. One of its chiefest features, recommending it as a commercial variety, is its keeping qualities. These should make it a first-class shipper.

Various Notes.

A new delivery car has been ordered by Nick Monsen, 3640 Fullerton avenue. This is a definite way of showing his faith in the certainty of good business.

The passing of the season of Chieftain need not be regretted, says N. J. Wietor, who considers W. L. Brock as in every way as good. The trouble nearly all growers have with it is losing the foliage, but Mr. Wietor says the first thing the buyer always does is to strip off the lower leaves, so the loss of a little foliage on the bench does not count against it.

With the flower show and the balmy days behind us, Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, feels confident the trade will enjoy a more or less uninterrupted run of good business until the winter is passed.

Nagoya chrysanthemums are giving an excellent account of themselves in the greenhouses of Hoerber Bros., Des Plaines, Ill., according to Fred Hoerber, who inspected the houses the other day. Mr. Hoerber is a booster. He says that in view of conditions prevailing in other lines of business, he cannot see where the florists have any room for complaint.

One of those who believes in the Mrs. Charles Russell rose and bases his faith on things that have come under his own observation is A. L. Vaughan. He believes this rose is without a peer as a keeper and shipper, as he sent a large shipment to the Pacific northwest recently and, although the box was delayed in transit, the roses reached their destination in prime condition.

For twenty-seven years C. A. Samuelson has sold flowers within half a block of the corner of Michigan avenue and Twenty-second street. It is a long time and confining work, but he has considerable to show for it, including two absolutely clear farms in the Snake river district of southern Idaho, one of which is owned individually, the other a partnership investment. Negotiations are in progress for the acquisition of an adjoining farm. There are already ninety acres of apple orchard of bearing age and Mr. Samuelson is looking forward to the day when he can exchange the cares of city business for the freedom of farming.

According to C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, they now have a total of 250,000 rose plants. Of these,

It will be pleasant news to his many friends here that F. R. Hills, formerly of Maywood, is prospering at Los Angeles, where he makes fern growing his specialty. Mr. and Mrs. Hills have enjoyed meeting again many of the eastern florists who have visited the coast this year.

The Mrs. Moorfield Storey rose was not largely planted for this market, but John P. Risch, whose firm took up this novelty, likes it well. Incidentally, Weiland & Risch were the first in this section to feature Killarney and among the first to take up Mrs. Russell.

To vary the routine of university life, W. J. O'Carroll, botanical gardener of the University of Chicago, was married last week to Miss Noonan, of this city.

Another indication that business is on the upgrade! Miss Greeley, of the John Kruchten Co., says the sales of the plant department are showing a steady increase.

A short market and a brisk demand between Thanksgiving and Christmas are predicted by A. T. Pyfer, who believes the mums and pompons will go out just as roses go off crop and while carnations are in only medium crop. Mr. Pyfer also foresees that, with less than a month to go, a good many rose growers will be hard put to it to make a crop by Christmas.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

There is an improvement, a decided, unmistakable improvement, in the cut flower market. We have almost reached the beginning of the so-called social season and things are commencing in earnest. The supply has eased off a little, adding zest to the demand. The late varieties of chrysanthemums have succeeded the midseason sorts. This means that the quality of the flowers offered is of the best. Bonnaffon is king; then there are the Chadwicks and the Eatons, both yellow and white, with Maud Dean and Dr. Enguehard in pink. Of course there are other sorts, lots of them, but these standard varieties lead in quality and in favor. Less and less is heard of fancy prices. There are, and probably always will be, a few chrysanthemums of superlatively fine finish that bring a little more, but the tendency of the day is toward selling in the original shipping boxes. Handling is expensive in such bulky goods, and is to be avoided, so say the wholesalers. Of course this does not apply to shipping orders, where stock must be selected carefully and as carefully repacked. It does apply to the local buyers, who take their stock with them or want a quantity "p. d. q." Pompons have been rather in excess of the demand. They are gaining in popularity, but not so fast as the increase in their production.

Carnations, violets and roses have all shortened in supply and advanced in price; the first two, especially, are higher. Cattleyas, gardenias and sweet peas are scarce, as is white lilac, though promises are made for all four. Pansies are not in demand just now. Mignonette is coming in a bit more freely. Pink lilies are still a novelty. Indications point to a good Thanksgiving, with higher prices on Beauties, violets and well grown specialties.

A Popular Opening.

Charles H. Grakelow opened his new flower store, at the southwest corner of Broad and Cumberland streets, November 19 and 20. Invitation cards were sent to the customers and friends of Mr. Grakelow. The way they responded must have been highly gratifying to him. The lot is about twenty-five feet front on Broad street, by 125 feet deep. The shop occupies the ground floor. It is of old English style. The furniture is Venetian. A conservatory occupies the space in the rear of the shop. A handsome display of cut roses in the leading varieties adorned the shop for the opening and there was music. The conservatory was filled with decorative and blooming plants. A cut glass vase was given to each visitor as a souvenir, while a few of Mr. Grakelow's closest friends were invited upstairs to partake of a buffet repast. Among those present were Mayor-elect Thomas B. Smith, W. Freeland Kendrick, Alvah R. Jones, Benedict Gibbs and many, many more.

Current Events.

George S. Hampton has returned from Cleveland. That simple sentence is not difficult, but it would take a much more clever writer to tell you of the wave of health, and confidence, and hopefulness that flowed from Mr. Hampton; how he would certainly seek a doctor if he felt any better; how Herman Knoble had told him that somebody had said that you hadn't good sense if you didn't think Cleveland had a good show, and how he had told Herman Knoble that your goods must be bum if you didn't think Cleveland had a good show; how baskets were formerly nice baskets, now they were real flower or plant baskets, made for flowers or made for plants, made in America and made right; how he was so frightfully busy he would have to stay home for a while, though there were lots of people he would like to see and who would like to see him. This and a whole lot more, properly handled, would make interesting reading.

William C. Herbert, the well known dahlia grower of Atco, N. J., tells a rather curious story indicative of modern ideas in selling flowers. It seems there was a certain red and white dahlia, whose type and name shall be left for the reader to determine. The first name was not considered worthy, so an enterprising salesman in one of our well known flower centers rechristened the variety George M. Cohan. Everybody who knows the famous actor bought a flower or a bunch to wear in his honor, so that this dahlia brought an excellent average price, quite as good as any, and decidedly better than most of the other varieties. "What's in a name?" The question certainly does not receive a negative answer in this case.

The other day Phil was accosted by a man in a dark corner of one of Philadelphia's leading stores. The man gave some information for publication with his name and hurriedly departed. Phil approached the cashier's glass-enclosed desk. The cashier, a lovely blonde, was examining the contents of the cash drawer thoughtfully. "Can you help me?" Phil began. The delicate color left the cashier's face. The drawer was hastily shut—"by telling me," Phil continued, "who that man was just talking to me in the corner?" The soft color returned to the cashier's face. "I do not know," she said.

Not long ago, Maurice L. Cooke, director of public works, stationed a man in the City hall to count the people passing through the entrance in one day. Of course, there were assistants and a thorough system to make sure. The result of over 90,000 persons was published in the daily papers at the time. It so chanced that the department of public works required a scale for weighing heavy material shortly afterwards. Director Cooke advertised for bids. It happened that the manager of Fairbanks' scales had read the 90,000-people-in-a-day story, so he put in a bid offering to place his scales worth $1,500 in position for the sum of $1. In other words, he wanted to have those 90,000 people see Fairbanks' scales and was willing to pay $1,499 for the privilege. Now you want to know what possible bearing this story has on flowers beyond the fact that some florists will see those scales? What right has the story in this column? Well, you see, it so chanced that Edwin J. Fancourt thought it would be nice to have a dictaphone in the National Flower Show committee office, room 1205 of the Widener building. So he talked to the dictaphone people, who have had so much to say about letting your stenographer earn his or her salary, and persuaded them that if they wanted to stop people from doing business the way it was done in 1898, it would be a mighty good thing to put a $275 machine into the committee's office for five months, for the price of three admission tickets to the National Flower Show, to be held in Convention hall, Broad street and Allegheny avenue, from March 25 to April 2, 1916.

Ladies' Night.

The entertainment given by the Florists' Club in honor of the ladies took place in Horticultural hall Wednesday evening, November 17. There were about 125 persons present, members, their wives and daughters. There was a good program of operatic talent, refreshments and dancing. The affair was well planned and carried out and gave much pleasure. It was of the sensible and early kind that does not mar the day after.

Various Notes.

A high official objects to the statement in this column that the National Flower Show headquarters is in the Arcade building. He says that the proper name is the Widener building. Room 1205, Widener building, Chestnut street above Juniper street, is correct.

Charles L. Durr has three greenhouses, 25x100 feet each, at Oak Lane, that are a model of neatness. The sweet peas, chrysanthemums and other stock are in excellent condition.

carnation arrivals shows continuous improvement. The best carnations were selling at $2.50 per hundred November 20, and from this as top many of the older kinds dropped as low as 50 cents per hundred.

The chrysanthemums still dominate the market. The Chadwicks are exceptionally fine, but so are Enguehard and Turner. The mums in pots are selling fast and, as no frost has interfered, the flood of pompons and hardy outdoor stock is limitless. There will be plenty of mums until Christmas, but their domination will now decrease rapidly. They have had a brilliant season and the average quality has been excellent. Every enterprising retailer has utilized them for gorgeous window display.

Orchids are obtained with difficulty and prices have responded, as 75 cents is obtainable for the best. It will be another week before the supply increases. Some grand cypripediums are arriving. There are few gardenias. Easter lilies and callas are abundant. Valley can be had at $4 per hundred. In addition to the varieties of cut flowers noted, shipments are increasing of sweet peas, pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, bouvardia and mignonette.

Various Notes.

December 13 will be election night at the club and Chairman Kessler, of the house committee, will assist in making the meeting memorable with surprises, appropriate for the occasion. There also will be an exhibition of cut flower novelties.

The Market.

The cloudy, cold days arrived last week, but remained only long enough to check the mums. There has been a great improvement in the mum market. Thanksgiving trade looks good and the demand will be heavy, but there will be plenty of stock to meet it. Carnations will be much shortened in crop and prices have already increased. Carnations which have been retailing for some time at 25 cents per dozen are now selling at 50 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

The Summerfield Floral Co. will have a large cut of mums. This company expects to cut from 1,200 to 1,500 Golden Wedding mums, which certainly are fine. The carnations also are good, but they will not enjoy as brisk a sale as those of the week previous.

The Springfield Seed Co. had a large cut flower business last week. One day the store force handled large orders for six funerals. This company's business in this line has increased wonderfully and the store is open day and night, and the night man reports that there is no time for sleep.

plants in readiness for the Thanksgiving trade. This company had a large order from St. Louis last week, calling for elaborate funeral pieces for a local funeral.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The earlier part of the week, business was somewhat quiet. November 17 started in with an immense lot of funeral work and since then business has picked up quite a little, though trade November 20 was not so vigorous. The quality of all the stock is exceptionally good and there is plenty of all kinds. The most popular flower, of course, is the chrysanthemum, and there is no end to the varieties. There is the usual large assortment of singles in all shades, and also pompons. Garza, in pink and white, sells well. Roses have sold well of late and some fine stock continues to arrive. The Francis Scott Key is most popular, and the Hearst and Russell also are disposed of freely. Wards are fine. Orchids and gardenias sell well. Violets are of good quality and are moving nicely. Valley is plentiful, but receives no big demand. Carnations are getting much larger and better. They are quite plentiful. The Alice and Philadelphia are being grown a great deal. Paper Whites and Romans are arriving daily, but in small quantities. Red, pink and white bouvardia are exquisite and enjoy a good demand. A large quantity of primulas, cyclamens, ardisias and cherries are being shown in pots. Palms and ferns are selling well. The supply of greens meets all demands.

Various Notes.

Miss Rose E. Brown has returned to her old position with H. E. Wilson.

Visitors this week include Arthur J. Trautman, of Geneva, N. Y., and F. J. Langenbach, of the Burt Olney Canning Co., Albion, N. Y.

A fine baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ransford W. Wilson, November 16. The trade extends hearty congratulations.

roses and adiantum, besides several large and costly baskets, was made for an out-of-town funeral. The home trade with this firm remains fairly steady.

The formal opening of a new flower store will take place November 23 at Main and Bank streets, Albion, N. Y. It will be owned by the Burt Olney Canning Co. The display of Golden Chadwicks and Bonnaffons is quite pleasing. About 2,000 will be ready for Thanksgiving trade.

Club Meeting.

The November meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club was held November 18. The topic for the evening was chrysanthemums. The discussion was opened by B. F. Barr, Rudolph Nagel and H. K. Rohrer, followed by nearly all the members who grow mums, of whom there are about twenty. Charles Tuckers, an amateur grower, gave a most interesting talk on many of last year's introductions, which he has grown this year.

On exhibition were vases of Turner, Harvard, Patty and Thanksgiving Queen, by B. F. Barr. Fred Spinner, of Lititz, showed a vase of handsome Roman Gold. H. D. Rohrer showed specimen blooms of Nakota, Dolly Dimple and Turner.

President B. F. Barr appointed Frank L. Kohr, David Rose and John R. Shreiner to arrange for the club's banquet, to be held December 16. A short business session will precede the banquet, when nominations of officers for 1916 will be held. A trip to Lititz will be made on the afternoon of the same day, calling on C. S. Loeffler and Fred Spinner.

Club Trip to Manheim.

November 18 the club visited the Manheim brethren. At the Monroe Hostetter place the carnations were found in fine condition. Sweet peas gave promise of a good cut. Mr. Hostetter has a large lot of Primula Forbesi, which he grows for cut blooms.

At the Phares S. Hostetter range sweet peas and calla lilies are the principal crops.

Emanuel P. Hostetter was the next call. Houses of plumosus and Sprenger asparagus are in the best possible shape. Mr. Hostetter's Boston yellow daisies, carried over from last year, are producing choice blooms on long stems. White and yellow snapdragon occupy considerable space. A house planted to orchid-flowering peas looks most promising. Several houses of grandiflora peas are giving nice blooms. His carnation plants look well and large

The Market.

The first part of last week showed great business improvement. The weather, being cold, seemed to put life into the buyers at the wholesale market. Quality, too, improved greatly and the supply was large. Prices were not high and only the extra fancy blooms in mums were held a little too high. There were fine blooms of Eaton, Golden Wedding and Chadwick. The Bonnaffons were supreme in white and yellow and had the greatest demand, with prices running from $12.50 to $25 per hundred. Pompons have been a glut and are not selling as well as last season. A great supply is expected for Thanksgiving day.

Roses and carnations still are suffering for want of demand and only low prices in thousand lots move them.
The downtown retailers still display cheap signs on these and the growers will be glad when the mum season is at an end. Beauties have been scarce in this market of late. Violets should take a brace from now on, as the cold weather should tone up the quality.

Valley and lilies had quite a fair demand, but they hold up their price;

Florists' Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, November 18. The meeting was held in the lecture room at the Missouri Botanical Garden and the attendance was one of the largest ever had by the club, numbering eighty-five. When President Bourdet called the meeting to order, all officers were present. After the routine business had been disposed of, the various committees were called upon to make reports. Chairman Ohlweiler, of the show committee, reported that they favored a spring flower show, but, owing to the fact that the American Carnation Society would hold its annual meeting and exhibition the last of January, they thought it advisable not to hold a spring show next year, but that in 1917 a spring flower show would be held on a large scale. This was accepted and the committee was continued. Chairman Ammann, of the American Carnation Society, made a report of the meeting of the executive committee of the society, held at Cleveland, and named all the chairmen of the various committees. These members were all present and assured the chairman that they were ready for any kind of work to make the meeting a success. The following florists were elected to membership: Alfred Werner, of Werner Bros., rose growers of Clayton, Mo.; E. D. Emme, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, and Arthur Waldmann, a retailer. The chair appointed Messrs. Ammann, Guy and Fillmore a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of our late fellow-members, William C. Young and Edward G. Eggeling, and report at the next meeting. On motion the club subscribed $100 to the fund to bring the national political conventions to our city. According to the treasurer's report, the club is well off financially.

The chair then called on Messrs.
Jaenicke and Ammann for a report on the Chicago and Cleveland flower shows. These reports were quite lengthy and, according to them, both shows must have been grand affairs. A vote of thanks was extended the garden staff for the use of the meeting hall. The next meeting will be held in our old quarters, December 9.

The Shaw Banquet.

The twenty-sixth annual banquet given by the Missouri Botanical Garden took place at the Liederkranz club, November 19, at 7 p. m. This banquet is given yearly in accordance with the will of the late Henry Shaw, to florists, gardeners and nurserymen. The attendance numbered about 200. Among these were twenty-five members of the St. Louis Florists' Club. Dr. Moore, as usual, was toastmaster. After cigars he introduced J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, who lectured on bulb culture in Holland. The lecture was accompanied by lantern slides and was most pleasing to all. The twenty-sixth banquet was a decided success.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its postponed meeting Monday evening, November 22, at the Missouri Inn Garden, Grand and Magnolia avenues.
One of the interesting features of the meeting was the talk of the coming meeting of the American Carnation Society, in which this society will take a leading part, as President Young, of the association, was made chairman of the decorative committee and he is to Robert Aull, former park commissioner, who was well known to all in the trade and to park commissioners and superintendents throughout the country, died at St. Luke's hospital November 20, at 12:30 a. m., from paralysis. Mr. Aull was 62 years of age and leaves a wife, daughter and son to mourn his loss.

M. F. Widmer, of Highland, Ill., says he has had splendid success with his mums this season. He cut some grand blooms of the leading varieties, which were all in before the glut came on.

Vincent J. Gorly, head of Grimm & Gorly, was appointed chairman of the florists' committee to secure subscriptions among the trade to bring the two national political conventions to this city. The appointment was made by the Business Men's League and, if hustling will bring the conventions, Mr. Gorly will do his part.

At the French war-relief bazaar, which will take place December 13 and 14 at Dreamland, Mrs. Jules Bourdet has been given charge of all the floral arrangements. The bazaar is given by the women's auxiliary of the Societe Francaise.

Leo Eberenz, a landscape gardener, while planting trees at 5352 Cabanne avenue, was attacked by an employee with a spade, and is now in the city hospital in a serious condition. This took place November 16.

Among the grand mum blooms that were seen this season at the wholesale houses, none were finer than those grown by Pierre Schneider, of the Oakland Floral Co., at Kirkwood, Mo. C. A. Kuehn handled the cut.

The Market.

The near approach of Thanksgiving is giving the market a firmer tone and the outlook for that well-known New England holiday is quite promising. There is still an unwieldy supply of chrysanthemums. They are flowering later than usual and a heavy Thanksgiving cut is assured. This, it is feared, will tend to unbalance the market. The mum leader now is Bonnaffon. No other chrysanthemum in any way approaches this quarter-century-old mum in favor. Other favorites are White Bonnaffon, Patty,

Enguehard, White Eaton, Yellow Eaton, Intensity and Harvard. Pompons continue in abundant supply. Roses are selling better and prices show a decided improvement. Especially good now, and to be classed among the good sellers, are Ophelia, Russell, Stanley, Mock, Hadley, Key, Sunburst, Taft and Ward. Beauties have improved in price. Colder weather is needed to tone up prices still more.

Carnations have much improved in price. November 20 reds and crimsons made $3 and $4 per hundred. The bulk of other colors made half these prices. Violets are more abundant and a considerable surplus was left November 20. A good many Rhinebeck doubles appeared November 19, but did not sell well in competition with local singles. Pink snapdragon has been selling better, as have yellow marguerites. Some stevia and Paper White narcissi are available. Of calendulas there is a good supply. Cornflowers are not abundant and sell well. Lilies continue in good supply and valley is in excess of the market's needs. Cattleyas are scarce and have made a sharp advance in price. Only a limited number of Cypripedium insigne is coming in as yet. Gardenias are scarce. Bouvardia Humboldtii sells much better than the small-flowered varieties. Trade in asparagus and ferns is improving.

Various Notes.

For the Harvard-Yale football game in Boston, November 20, there was a heavy call for red chrysanthemums and violets. White chrysanthemums, with the letters Y and H in blue or crimson, were also much in evidence. As it turned out, there was a considerable surplus left over of both violets and mums. Red roses and carnations also got a good up-lift in values.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, received word last week of the death of his brother, Carl, on the Russian frontier, where he was fighting with the German army. The deceased was on a visit to Europe when war broke out. He endeavored to return to America, but was detained and drafted into the army. He was for a number of years associated with his brother at Braintree, and was well liked. His premature passing has brought forth many expressions of sincere regret.

Albert Roper, of Tewksbury, had some superb Intensity chrysanthemums November 20, which realized fancy prices. His new carnations, Alice Coombs, Grace and others, are just coming into their true form. Some of the latest are wonderfully fine.

Norris F. Comley, of Lexington, had 15,000 single violets November 20. Of White Bonnaillon and Bonnaillon he has 70,000, a great proportion of which were in for Thanksgiving.

The Budlong Rose Co. has a sport from Sunburst rose of a rich coppery color, which takes well. Stanley is superb, quite the finest pink sort on the place. Francis Scott Key is doing well. Ophelia remains a great seller, as do Hadley and Russell. In mums Patty, White Eaton, Yellow Eaton and Bonnaillon are the leaders now.

The Halifax Garden Co. is cutting heavily this week on Enguehard, Chieftain, Bonnaillon and Savannah mums. In carnations Mrs. Ward remains a prime favorite. Others grown in quantity are Pink Delight, Matchless, Alice, Beacon, Enchantress and White Enchantress. In roses Ward, Sunburst, Taft, Maryland and Richmond are leaders. A fine large house of Hadley and Ophelia is coming along for Christmas.

Wax Bros. had one of their large show windows decorated with crimson flowers for Harvard November 20, the other being a symphony in blue for Yale. Both windows were tastefully rearranged the same afternoon. Business for the ball game broke all records here, and general trade is good.

The Exeter Rose Conservatories,
Exeter, N. H., is shipping to J. S. Manter a fine grade of Ophelia, Ward, Sunburst, Richmond and Killarney roses. Mr.
Manter says that his sales of roses for October and November are quadruple those of a year ago.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, has a splendid lot of Chieftain, Bonaffon, Rager and Pompon mums for Thanksgiving.

Among those who had fine picks of single violets for the Harvard-Yale game were Kidder Bros., 11,000 of grand quality; Chandler Bros., 12,000; John T.
Gale, 6,000; Edward Bingham, 8,000, and William Sim, 40,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wax have as a guest Mrs. Mary Glass, of Chicago, a sister of Mrs. Wax.

L. E. Small says that Champion carnation so outclasses Beacon that he has no further use for the latter. Alice is doing remarkably well with him, as are Pink Delight and Matchless. He is starting to cut a nice lot of bachelor's buttons, in which he is a great specialist.

At Galvin's, on Park street, some large ripe pineapples in small tubs were made a feature in one window last week. Advance orders for Thanksgiving were good here.

Mann Bros. handle a wide assortment of flowers this week. They have fine lots of Lilium longiflorum, speciosum, stevia, Paper Whites, snapdragons, callendulas, callas and pompon mums.

At Penn's a beautiful window was arranged November 20 for the football game. They sold 80,000 violets and great numbers of red chrysanthemums. White mums with blue and crimson letters were featured here and made a big hit.

The National Association of Gardeners will meet in session in the lecture room, Horticultural hall, Boston, at 2 p. m., December 9. A dinner will be held at the hall at 8 p. m. the same evening. Much interest is being taken in the convention locally and a large attendance is assured.

A. G. Lake, of Wellesley Hills; James Wheeler, of Natick, and A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, are shippers of excellent yellow marguerites.

The sanctioning of street venders of flowers, which has been discussed and favored in Philadelphia, is again attracting attention here. There is no question but that a number of boys on the streets could dispose of a lot of flowers which would otherwise be wasted, and the purchasers would be, in the main, those who rarely patronize a retail store. The question is one worthy of renewed discussion.

J. Newman & Sons, the old and reliable Tremont street florists, did a good business for the Harvard-Yale game, and anticipate good Thanksgiving trade. Funeral orders continue to come in satisfactorily.

B. P. Winch, of Framingham, grows carnations chiefly, but has this season had a good many mums. His leading carnations are Pink Delight, White

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

W. ATLEE BURPEE is critically ill at his home near Doylestown, Pa.

THE Iowa production of timothy and clover will be unusually light this year.

CONSIDERABLE quantities of seeds are reaching New York on each steamer from Copenhagen.

GEORGE DEYO, with the Crossman Bros. Co., Rochester, and Miss Grace Slocum, also of Rochester, were married recently at Salt Lake City.

FARMERS will have less seed stock than usual to trade with among each other this year. There will be more buying than usual.

THE first shipment this season of valley pips from Copenhagen arrived at New York November 16. It consisted of 360 cases, consigned to Loechner & Co.

THE annual rains in the California seed growing districts have begun, rather later than usual, but in time to relieve any anxiety on the part of the growers.

No one seems to be able to decide yet just what the price of sweet clover should be. It is certain to be lower than last year, but the question is, how much lower?

LOUIS B. REUTER, of New Orleans, recently took unto himself a bride in the person of the daughter of a leading local florist and has been honeymooning in New York.

A. H. SMITH, treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, now spends his days listening to tales of murder, robbery and arson. He is serving on the regular jury panel of the criminal court.

THE government of Bermuda last summer sent a representative to Long Island and Maine potato growers who were growing stock under contract for export to Bermuda for seed. His report has been published in the Royal Gazette. Field inspection of stock for import now is required by the Bermudian regulations.

THE man who is writing the retail catalogue has decided not to worry; he will shove up the price of beans to the point where nobody will order more than a handful, and give onion a boost, but other items he will leave with little change in spite of the reports of scarcity, taking care, however, to reduce prices on the few items that are abundant.

W. W. BARNARD, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, who was reported in last week's issue of The Review as seriously ill in the Presbyterian hospital, is improving slowly, though still confined to the hospital. A. H. Goodwin, who has been in the Wesley hospital for some time, is convalescing as rapidly as can be expected and has been removed to his home.

THE American Mutual Seed Co. is a new organization, incorporated for $60,000 under the laws of Illinois, with headquarters at Forty-third and Robey streets, Chicago. John F. Summers is secretary and manager. Mr. Summers was engaged in the seed business at Malvern, Ia., several years ago, is a graduate of the Iowa Agricultural College, and for the last few years has been conducting the large farm

BULB RECEIPTS ON DECLINE.

Another drop in the receipts of Dutch bulbs occurred last week. The total of each arrival falls a little behind that of the week previous, showing that the end of the shipments is not far off for this season. The receipts last week came on the Rotterdam steamer Noordam, arriving at New York November 15. The consignments on board the

HOLLAND VIEW OF BULB TRADE.

Certain Holland firms have aroused the wrath of the trade in England by advertising in an undignified and, it is alleged, untruthful way in the British newspapers, with the result that the trade raised a fund to advertise a refutation of the statements to which exception was taken. A Holland firm of bulb exporters, J. J. Grullemans & Sons, of Lisse, has contributed $50 to the fund and in so doing sent a letter from which the following was taken:

"The miserable, begging advertisements appearing lately in some of the English papers have created a disgust among the bulb exporters of repute here generally, and we now enclose a cheque

SORGHUM SEED RATES REDUCED.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has upheld the complaint of the J. G. Peppard Seed Co., of Kansas City, Mo., against the seed rates of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway. The commission holds that the increase in proportional rates for sorghum seed and cane seed in carloads from Kansas City to Texas points is not justified. Rates not in excess of rates formerly in effect are prescribed for the future. The reports of the proceedings state that "March 27, 1913, the rates on cane seed were made 5 cents higher than rates on wheat, increasing the rate on cane seed from Kansas City to certain Texas points from 25 cents to 31 cents, and to other Texas points from 27½ cents and 29 cents to 33½ cents and 36 cents, respectively.

"During the shipping season of 1914, the only shipping season since the increased rates took effect, the Peppard Seed Co. business in Texas decreased from 1,665,625 pounds in 1913 to 1,002,450 pounds. The Peppard Seed Co. and other Kansas City seed dealers expressed the opinion that the competition is so strong on this seed and the margin of profit so narrow under average crop conditions that the increased rates must decrease their Texas business greatly, if, indeed, the business will not be entirely destroyed. The discrimination alleged is based exclusively on the intrastate rates paid by the Texas competitors.

"The railway admits a lack of uniformity in its rates on cane seed. They state that the rates on flax, cane and millet seed which became effective March 27, 1913, were published as a result of a complaint by a seed concern located at Sherman, Tex., that there were no commodity rates on cane seed from interior points in Kansas and Oklahoma to Louisiana, although commodity rates were published from Kansas City.

"The commission finds upon all of the facts disclosed that the railroad company has not justified the rates assailed, and that for the future reasonable proportional rates on sorghum and cane seed in carloads from Kansas City, Mo., to Texas points should not exceed those that were in effect immediately prior to March 27, 1913. An order will be entered accordingly." E. H. P.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

George Tait & Sons, Norfolk, Va., state that they do not remember having experienced, in all their long career as seedsmen, a similar summer to the one that has just passed. As climatic conditions were the same in Virginia and the Carolinas, this caused enormous crops over a wide territory at one time, with the result that the markets were overstocked and prices were extremely low. It is hoped that such an unusual condition may never occur again. Shipments of peas and beans are still being made, as there had been no frost at the time of writing these notes, November 15. The end of October is usually considered the closing of the season. The shortage in spinach has scarcely been felt, but there will be a scarcity of new-crop seed. I understood George Tait to say that their big stocks carried in Europe are on the way, under bond not to be resold except to American planters.

The Williams Seed Co., Norfolk, has taken a stand in the city market, to relieve the congestion in the retail store during the busy seed season. The firm is also adding a plant department, having purchased land with a view to erecting greenhouses under the care of F. W. Herreen, a veteran grower of long local standing. The superb display of bulbs cannot fail to secure, with the aid of the handsome catalogue issued, a large share of patronage.

VITALITY

There is a certain quality possessed by some men which we call vitality. It is being greatly alive—living each minute in full and keen consciousness—using the senses constantly and to full capacity. Men of vitality, living as they do more fully than others, exercise their acute faculties in choosing the accessories of their daily lives and the means for their pleasure and comfort. It is among such men that Horseshoe Brand Giganteum is used mostly. This is because of their superior quality and free-flowering capacity, due to the careful cultivation given them. You cannot get lily bulbs better than Horseshoe Brand Giganteum and you might get worse ones. The best insurance you can get covering Easter Lilies is Horseshoe Brand Bulbs. King's Acre Nurseries, Ltd., Hereford, England—Wholesale catalogue of nursery stock. Roses and fruit trees are specialties and are listed most conspicuously, occupying twenty-eight of the total thirty-six pages, but ornamental trees, shrubs and vines also have a place in the book.

Nearly half of the space in the catalogue is occupied by cannas, which are carefully classified. Of course the Childs specialty, the gladioli, occupies much the largest space in the book, though it is stated that only the cream of the 200-acre stock of gladioli is offered. Among the other stock listed are miscellaneous bulbs, cannas, dahlias, lilies, irises, peonies, and other perennials.

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.—"Flowers and Supplies for Florists," a tastefully arranged, well illustrated catalogue of Christmas specialties; sixteen pages and cover. MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business conditions last week were vastly different from those of the week previous. The weather was cloudy and cold; in fact, Saturday we had the first real glimpse of the sun, which had been hidden all the week. Of course all kinds of stock shortened tremendously and prices in consequence began to soar. The week before it had been necessary to dump surplus stock, but as soon as the shortage manifested itself last week the demand seemed to be stimulated and in a few days orders were turned down that would have more than made up for the stock thrown away last week were the stock obtainable now. Thanksgiving promises to be a good holiday this year. Heretofore Thanksgiving has not amounted to a great deal, but from present indications and taking the advance orders and inquiries into consideration, this year will show a marked improvement, provided, of course, there is sufficient stock to take care of the orders.

Roses are scarce. The cut has diminished greatly and great difficulty is experienced in filling orders satisfactorily. The stock is in fine shape and prices have come back to about normal. Carnations have shortened quite a bit and prices have gone up to some extent. The market is cleaning up well and no effort is necessary to dispose of the daily cut. Chrysanthemums still are a big factor in the market. They are probably somewhat past their zenith, but some extra fine stock is to be had every day. Prices on good stock are satisfactory. The mums are taking the place of roses and carnations to some extent. While mums will, in all probability, be in for Thanksgiving, in neither supply nor quality will they compare favorably with those of last year. Violets are scarce. The cut has not diminished, but the demand has increased materially. The quality is getting better each day and, although they are cleaning up every day, there will be a limited quantity for Thanksgiving, part of the supply being already ordered up. Valley is extremely scarce just now and few orders are being taken care of. It is probable that the supply will be somewhat greater this week, but there will be no surplus for some time to come. Orchids are off crop and are quite hard to obtain. They are coming in irregularly, but the stock is in excellent shape.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SEATTLE ARMORY DECORATION.

Steel girders and whitewash quickly lose their forbidding appearance when a florist uses them to hang decorations on. At least this was true when Rosaia Bros. decorated Armory hall, in Seattle, for the convention of the American Bankers' Association. The accompanying illustration shows how really useful an unsightly steel girder may be to a florist. Evergreens, ferns and foliage were generously used and the tempting effect is evident in the illustration. There is often an advantage in the use of a few flowers rather than many and Rosaia Bros. profited from this fact in the armory decoration. Many of the pleasing details escape the eye unless the photograph is studied closely. For instance, the absence of chairs about the sides of a ballroom floor is something out of the ordinary. A second look at the illustration shows that arbors and benches were built back of the front decorations. Through the arches of the latticework in the background will be seen banquet tables. The effect of this resembles the Italian gardens of some of the fashionable outdoor dining places of famous American resorts.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A sudden drop in temperature, reaching below freezing point in some of the less favored localities, checked the supply of outdoor roses considerably last week. The frost does not appear to have damaged the plants sufficiently to prevent their going on and flowering, especially should the present warm weather continue. In some places tender plants like coleus and lantanas were damaged a little, but in others the plants are as fresh looking as in mid-summer. Carnations have been checked, but there is quite a large number grown under glass and cloth, which help keep the supply full. Already some Christmas plants, or rather plants that are usually grown for Christmas, such as Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and cyclamens, are making their appearance. Growers of azaleas are beginning to be worried about their plants, eastern shippers apparently being of the notion that any old time is good enough for the coast shipments. As time goes on it becomes all the more apparent that some coalition of nurserymen and wholesale growers will have to take the matter of importing into their own hands here and cut out the middleman, unless the latter appreciates the fact that there are live growers on the coast who will have to be looked after. The retailers have been busy with funeral work, and there were several good weddings that helped business a good deal last week. Greens are in good demand and firm in price.

Various Notes.

C. E. Morton, lately of Phoenix, Ariz., has returned to this city and opened a retail store at 323 West Eighth street. Mr. Morton is well known here and should make a success of his store, as the city is rapidly growing southward, in which section he has a good location. Friends will be glad to know that he has derived great benefit to his throat during his stay in Arizona.

Early in the week the force at the Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson store was busy with wedding decorations. Manager John Gordon shows his adaptability in turning out not only exquisite baskets and shower bouquets of Cecile Brunner roses, but also the old-fashioned colonial bouquets with frills, such as we used to see so many years ago that we hate to think of it.

Every once in a while—to use an overworked and rather vague expression—Tom Wright disappears from the purlieus—another one—of West Fourth street, and if any one asks where he is, Manager W. Wern says he is gone up Bakersfield way to his hog ranch. But his last visit being longer than usual led to inquiries, and these in turn led to the information that Mr. Wright and Mrs. Wright had enjoyed a pleasant auto trip on the valley route to San Francisco and home by the coast, reporting an excellent time everywhere. Meantime business has been good at the store, several wedding decorations and a good deal of funeral work being reported.

Arthur Gleave, formerly manager for the late J. Whipple, of Santa Barbara, has been visiting in the city, having just returned from San Francisco.

H. W. Turner says that his roses are cleaning up daily and on some occasions he has to cut down his orders. Large orders for plants are already coming in for future delivery, and I noticed that more benches are being devoted to propagating. One of the points that are agitating Mr. Turner is the proper way to spell the name of the rose Elger. Elgar is the way many people spell it, but Mr. Turner stands for Elger. Whichever is right, it surely is a beautiful rose as grown here and much in demand among the better class of retailers.

M. L. Germain, president of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., wrenched his back recently and had to retire for a day or two. Extra large consignments of Holland and Belgian nursery stock and azaleas are arriving here in good shape, rather later than usual.

J. Menasco, of Covina, says that notwithstanding the cold snap he hopes to have outdoor roses along about Christmas.

H. R. Richards.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.

Business conditions have been improving and there is a decidedly better transitory trade. Inquiries for Christmas orders are already coming in.

A. Gleave, for more than five years manager of the J. Whipple retail store, has secured a good location on State street and will start in business at once. Mr. Gleave is well known in the city and surrounding country. He recently returned from a trip to Los Angeles and San Francisco, where he visited the fair and secured ideas for his new store.

the Chinese are better and move in large quantities. Prices are, of course, higher. Turner is all gone. Nonin is fine, but not a good shipper. Street venders have made Bonnaffon rather common, and Hunter, Enguehard and other pink varieties are more popular at the shops. Pompons continue both plentiful and popular. Frost reduced the cut of violets for a few days, but they are coming in freely again and are in prime shipping condition, being one of the leading features in the out-of-town business.

Carnations are better and move fairly well. Plenty of marigolds, gypsophilas, cosmos, etc., still appear. There is a good large cut of most roses, and sales for them are increasing, with a fair northern demand. Red varieties are a little scarce, Hadley leading in popularity. There are not enough baby roses to meet both local and shipping demands. Radiance moves well locally. Gardenias are coming in more freely and are of better quality. Phalaenopsis is scarce, but other orchids are in good supply, including many dendrobiums, odontoglossums and laelias, as well as several kinds of cattleyas. The plant supply has been augmented by the appearance of a large amount of Scotch heather and a few nice primulas. Small chrysanthemums still are popular and more cyclamens are coming into bloom. A good many fern and plant specialties have been prepared for Thanksgiving. No great quantity of madrona berries has appeared, but a little of the so-called California holly is already coming in.

Various Notes.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is beginning to cut gardenias from its young plants and is getting some fine, large blooms, with prospects of an excellent cut for the holiday trade.

N. Peterson, of the Peninsula Nursery, San Mateo, has installed a new heating system. He is bringing in about the finest carnations that can be found around the bay, some of his best varieties being Champion, Princess Dagmar, Alice and Benora.

For the last week or so the exposition has brought into play a large number of smudge pots, or crude oil heaters, to save the large outdoor plantings of begonias, dahlias, etc., from the frost. So far the heaters have done their work well, though a few of the dahlias have been nipped a little.

A new store has been opened at 404 Market street by the Bay Counties Seed Co., a new concern. The company is headed by Mr. Field, of 203 California street, and Milton Tonini, formerly associated with C. C. Morse & Co., is manager. A general stock of bulbs, seeds and plants is handled and Mr. Tonini is considering entering the wholesale cut flower business with certain classes of stock. This makes at least five seed and garden supply stores catering to the commuters' trade on lower Market street.

The Lynch Nursery Co., of Menlo Park, is bringing in good cyclamen plants and has quite a number of them coming on for the holidays. This company has ready for shipment about 30,000 strings of smilax, said to be the largest batch of smilax on the coast. It is grown in the open air under oak trees, which give it protection from killing frosts.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

N. Peterson, of the Haight Street Floral Co., says that business is picking up and that he expects a marked improvement from now until Christmas.

Thomas Wright, of Los Angeles, was a recent visitor to this city.

There is an impression among the local florists that the supply of spring bulbous flowers is going to be much smaller than last year, at least in imported lines, and possibly in some California-grown varieties, as it is understood that California bulbs have been closely cleaned up. In imported stock, the supply of bulbs has been light, and, while early orders are said to have been well taken care of, late buyers find it hard to get anything.

The Menlo Park Horticultural Society held its annual banquet November 20, when cups for the best exhibits made by members during the year were presented. The committee, consisting of Percy Copp, John Daly and Percy Ellings, made sure that there was something to put in the cups. John Daly acted as toastmaster.

Under the name of the Floral Shop, Mrs. Frank Smith started business November 9 at 926 Tenth street, Modesto, Cal. Mrs. Smith has had considerable experience in the business and is keeping a nice store. She ordered a good stock of bulbs, plants, etc., as well as cut flowers, from San Francisco dealers.

The Cottage Gardens Nurseries Co. is letting construction contracts for improvements to its new establishment at Eureka. A dam 160 feet long and twenty-eight feet high is being built, to make a reservoir of about 4,000,000 gallons capacity. A machine room is being built and a contract has been let for the boiler house. The Market.

Business last week was affected somewhat by the stormy weather, which checked the counter trade. The dark days held back the flowers so that the supply and demand were equalized. Carnations show the greatest falling off; there are hardly enough to fill orders. Chrysanthemums are of splendid quality and are the best sellers. Yellow Eaton, Eaton, Col. Appleton, Brutus, Harvard, Golden Eagle, Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick and Maud Dean are the ruling varieties. Oregon-grown violets are scarce and some California stock has come in. Mrs. Frank Beu is one of the leading pompons.

There has been a good run of funeral work and the demand from outside customers has been strong. Considerable stock is being held back by the growers to come in for Thanksgiving. Unless they have a few bright days, the cut of carnations will be less than usual.

Almost all the outdoor blooms have been rendered useless by the storms, though there has been no frost in Portland.

Club Meeting.

The Portland Floral Society November 16 held one of the best attended meetings of the season. The growers' committee held a meeting earlier in the evening and further organized by naming F. H. Van Kirk secretary. It was decided to direct the efforts of the committee toward the matter of credits, and a committee was named to draft a letter to be sent to all the retailers in the Pacific northwest whose names could be obtained. This letter was brought before the society and was fully approved and authorized. It was signed by thirty-four concerns and individuals who wholesale stock. Its principal feature was the following resolution:

Whereas: For several years past the system of credits in use by the growers and shippers in this vicinity has given poor collection results, and

Whereas: The principal growers in this vicinity are members of the Portland Floral Society, we deem it proper and advisable that a date be set in each month for the settlement of accounts; and it is therefore

Resolved: That a settlement of each month's accounts be requested not later than the fifteenth day of the month following such date, affording ample time for the retailer to make his collections, and, further, it was unanimously resolved that a report of delinquents in this matter be rendered to the growers' committee of the society at each monthly meeting.

Representatives of several foreign bulb dealers were present and in the discussion over coöperative buying it was suggested that their governments assist in an advertising campaign to induce the public to purchase bulbs at the proper time, as some of the seedsmen stated that about half of their yearly sales of bulbs were made after they were in bloom in the market, a date too late for any good results from outdoor planting, and that the sale of bulbs was being seriously hurt by such failures. Ladies' night was set for December 13 and the committee reported all arrangements completed for a fine program. Members of the society, their families and employees, with now and then a friend, will be welcome.

Various Notes.

John Willius, lessee of the Pfunder range on East Forty-ninth street, has finished the demolition of the house which had to be removed on account of the improvement of East Forty-ninth street.

The Tonseth Floral Co. featured the F. T. D. in its window display. A miniature railroad with telegraph lines along a hillside and with suggestive messages on telegraph blanks attached to the window glass, which were connected with the wires by baby ribbons, formed a neat display.

The civic bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has awarded prizes in the city beautification contest totaling nearly $3,000.

Only a few members of the floral society were able to accept the invitation of Prof. A. L. Peck to visit Corvallis November 17 during the meeting of the state horticultural board. The writer was in Seattle and several others who had intended to go were prevented by various causes.

The flower store at 430 Washington street, which was opened about a year ago by Clark & Breeze and since the retirement of Mr. Breeze has been operated by Mr. Clark alone, has gone out of business.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 22 to 24, 1916.

THE nursery business of the late George H. Chase, at Malden, Mass., has been purchased by his brother, Homer Chase, a nurseryman at Augusta, Me. The business will be carried on at Augusta and the Malden office will be discontinued.

IN order to supply the rapidly increasing demand for boxwoods, firs, junipers, etc., J. B. Watkins & Bro., of Midlothian, Va., have erected a large greenhouse, which will be devoted to propagating evergreens. Hydrangeas also will be grown in large quantities.

ARTICLES of incorporation recently were filed by the Rhinelander Nursery Co., of Rhinelander, Wis. The directors are: D. F. Recker, C. P. Crosby, J. Weisman, A. E. Weesner, D. R. Hanford; the officers: President, D. F. Recker; vice-president, A. E. Weesner; treasurer, J. O. Moen; secretary, D. R. Hanford. The capitalization is $10,000.

NURSERYMEN who send seeds or plants by mail should remember that, under the new ruling, they can send a larger package than formerly. The outside limit for combined length and girth is now seven feet, instead of six feet, thus permitting a package a foot longer than could be sent last spring. Also, the shipper now can get a receipt from the postoffice for a parcel post package the same as from the express people by paying 1 cent extra.

WESTERN NURSERYMEN TO MEET.

The Biggest Winter Gathering.

Except for the annual convention of the A. A. N., the largest meeting of nurserymen each year is the December session of the Western Association of Nurserymen, held at the Coates House, Kansas City. This year the dates are December 8 and 9. The plan is to make the meeting the occasion for meetings of the A. A. N. executive body and the various committees charged with putting into operation the new methods adopted at Detroit last June.

The Program.

Secretary E. J. Holman announces the following official program for the meeting, beginning on the morning of December 8:

Address of welcome, Henry L. Jost, Mayor.
Response, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.
President's address, C. C. Mayhew, Sherman, Tex.
Secretary's report, E. J. Holman, Leavenworth, Kan.

Discussion and action for proposed amendment to the constitution providing for honorary membership for those who have distinguished themselves as nurserymen, and for those whose fellow-

MOVING LARGE SPRUCES.

Is this the time of year in which to move large Colorado blue spruces? I have two to transfer, but I only have to move them six feet. They are about thirty feet high and the diameter of the lower trunks is about twelve inches. How far around will it be necessary to excavate these in order not to injure the trees, and can you give any suggestions as to how to go about it in the

ANNOUNCEMENT

THE NEW CHRYSANTHEMUM shown as Smith's Cameo was awarded the sweepstakes prize in the seedling classes at both Cleveland and Chicago, and has been greatly admired by the thousands of persons attending these shows. We consider it one of our greatest achievements, and those in the Trade referred to it as the best seedling of the year. Upon investigation, recent tests have given positive proof that it is inclined to shatter or drop its petals. This serious defect disqualifies it as a shipper, and for this reason alone we have decided, much to our regret, that it is unworthy of our indorsement and dissemination. Justice to our patrons is justice to ourselves, and we feel assured the course taken will be appreciated.

Little Gem, certificated at Cleveland, will not be disseminated until 1917, owing to limited stock. Will, however, be pleased to book your order one year in advance.

easiest and most satisfactory way? The roots do not run deeper than three feet, but they seem to spread over a surface about twenty feet in width. Will it be injurious if any of the roots are cut? In transferring any kind of good-sized trees in the fall, would you recommend watering them after setting them? For instance, a haw or evergreen tree?

L. B. W.—Wyo.

The best time to move evergreens of the size you mention is in winter, when you can get a good frozen ball with them. Dig around the plants before freezing-up weather arrives. Let the trench not only encircle the plant, but go a little below the roots. Then gradually pick away the earth below the roots. Endeavor to work one or two short pieces of plank below the ball, so as to detach it entirely from the other earth. Start the trench a good distance from the trunk, work toward it and save the roots all you can. Leave as large a ball as you think you can move, and as the distance they are to be moved is small, by the use of some iron or stout wooden rollers you should have no great trouble in moving the trees if a pair of horses are used.

The balls must, of course, be thoroughly frozen, and a clean course must be dug out to the new location. The new hole can be filled with straw. Remove this when sliding the tree into the hole, later packing it closely around the ball of earth. If necessary, guy the trees through the balance of the winter to keep them erect. When frost has disappeared, fill around the trees, firming thoroughly. If they are at all dry, soak with water. Watering either large or small trees or shrubs is beneficial in fall or spring, unless the ground is really damp. Be sure to dig a hole of ample size. C. W.

Gloire de Chatelaine

We have a fine lot of plants in 5-inch pots, grown for the retail trade. We have kept the buds and blooms picked off until the plants have reached a good size and they are now ready to burst into full bloom. They will make fine stock for retailing from this time on and through the winter. They will be in great shape for Xmas selling.

We advise that you have them shipped now and allow them to come into bloom in your houses, as a plant in bud will always ship better than one in full bloom.

MORNING GLOW

A commercial bread and butter Carnation, winner of Certificates of Merit from Massachusetts Horticultural Society and American Carnation Society. Parentage, Winona by the Queen. In color it most nearly resembles Winsor and Gloriosa—a light rose-pink, shading to a silvery pink in the outer petals, resembling the tints of an apple blossom; the color deepens during the summer; the plants stand the hot weather well, so that one dislikes to throw them out when the time comes. Its color is what first attracts customers, its keeping qualities hold them; it sells in the Boston market in spite of its lack of size, which ranges from 2 1/2 to 2 3/4 inches in diameter. Good for funeral work; makes plenty of cuttings, which root easily; a good keeper and shipper; has paid me better than any standard variety. We have confidence in it ourselves—with the exception of 800 plants of standard varieties and a bed of yellow Marguerites, we have planted all space to this variety, nearly 20,000 plants.

BELLE WASHBURN, the Best Red Carnation

WINNER of the Silver Medal at the last exhibition of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., January 27th and 28th; First Prize at the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, Ill., September 22d and 23rd. It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ to 4 inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family. It has a very spicy odor, much greater than the average Carnation. It comes in full flower by the 1st of December and then continues steadily through the balance of the season.

The present sharp competition in business requires the grower to plant a variety that always produces high-grade flowers, never bursts the calyx, has strong, long stems, is a steady and continuous bloomer, no cropper. The color is the most brilliant red of any Carnation now in market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs, of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18,000 devoted to rooted cuttings. We will have 100,000 strong, well rooted cuttings, guaranteed all first-class, ready for delivery during December. The price of the rooted cuttings will be $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

FORT WAYNE, IND.The Market.

Wintry weather has prevailed for the last ten days and the florists' trade is being benefited by a more zestful demand. Society events are numerous and each affair demands its quota of flowers. Business from near-by towns has been exceedingly good and funeral work is more than plentiful. The football game November 21 created a big demand for chrysanthemums, which are now in their height, especially the larger and finer varieties. The best on the market now are Eaton, Golden Wedding, Chadwick, Wells' Late Pink and Enguehard. Pompons are moving well. Chrysanthemum plants are in splendid variety and quality, in both singles and doubles. In fact, all seasonable flowers are in heavy supply and the outlook for stock for Thanksgiving is encouraging. Roses are in plentiful supply, notwithstanding the fact that many growers have cut back their stock for the holiday trade. Carnations are of excellent quality and prices are good. There is a large cut of lilies, both Easter and calla. Sweet peas are increasing in production, but do not sell so readily because of the popular preference for pompon and single chrysanthemums. There is a good supply of Beauties and the prices for them are stiffer. Daisies, candytufts, antirrhinums, mignonettes and bouvardias are all in good supply.

Various Notes.

The retail store of A. J. Lanternier & Co. has been redecorated and new fixtures have been installed. Trade here is unusually good and the stock excellent. The Lanternier greenhouses are sending in some extra fine carnations, with large blooms and long, stiff stems. The chrysanthemums are fine and the potted mums in single, pompon and double varieties are shown in a wonderful variety of color. Miss Hilda Lanternier has returned from Fort Recovery, Hometown, Ind., where she has been for several months recuperating from a nervous breakdown.

Miss Marjory Bradley has accepted a position as landscape architect for the conservation committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs, of Chicago, which position she will assume December 1.

Rooted Cuttings, $7.00 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

Marigold. The best yellow mid-season chrysanthemum that has ever been introduced, when grown right. It must be planted early and the bud should be secured by the 10th to 15th of August. It will be the first crown. On later buds it is by no means the equal of the early ones.

Crystal Gem. A fine, large, mid-season commercial white. Follows Oconto, the best early white.

Early Frost. For real early white plant Early Frost. Take the first crown bud. Start cutting in early October. Pure white and a good keeper. It is of equally good quality from later planting but matures later.

Modello. A fine, early November bronze. Good from any planting, and an easy doer. Sensational color. Pretty as a cactus dahlia.

Golden Queen. A fine, early, light yellow. Best with us as a second crown from early June planting.

POMPONS

Peace. We shall disseminate Peace in 1916. At this writing it is a very charming shell pink. It was shown as white last season at a later date. It is a beautifully formed and valuable pompon. 2 1/4-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

The Market.

Business conditions could only be called fair last week, but the retail trade was about up to the average. The supply of stock at the wholesale market was larger than could be taken up by the stores; consequently, large lots were sold to the street fakers at a low figure. Mums, of course, are in the largest supply and the retail trade used a large number, but many were sold at low prices. Roses, while a little off crop, are too plentiful to bring good prices. Carnations have been moving fairly well; they are in good supply and of good quality. Beauty was one of the slow sellers of the week, numerous mums hurting the sale of these. Valley was in fair demand and the supply was ample.

Various Notes.

J. P. King, of Mount Airy, is shipping good Chadwicks, both white and yellow, to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Mack Richmond, gardener for Mrs. W. B. Cochrane, is cutting some good gardenias and has a bench of splendid Sunburst roses.

The Myer-Stisser Co. reports a good sale of bulbs this fall.

Visitors last week included George Hermann and J. Harrison Dick, of New York; William F. Gude, of Washington, D. C.; S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia. W. F. E.

DES MOINES, IA.

The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. held its annual chrysanthemum festival November 13 and again succeeded in attracting a large number of people into the store and houses, many of whom may go there the next time they want flowers. The visitors were particularly pleased with Timothy Eaton and Yellow Eaton mums, which certainly were as fine as any in the Hawkeye state. Carnations were good in practically all varieties.

A recent visit to the Pratt establishment, formerly known as the J. F. Marshall greenhouses, found the grounds and range in good order, with Charles McCanniff in charge. Carnations are the principal crop. Godfrey callas, Easter lilies and Asparagus Sprengerii are given considerable space.

The Iowa Seed Co. is cutting high-grade mums in many varieties, but for size, William Turner is preëminent. Roses, carnations and pot plants are more than satisfactory. This company has erected another greenhouse for the retail department, making a total of five houses devoted entirely to local trade.

ERNEST ROBER,

WILMETTE, ILL.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

A plentiful supply of flowers, with the exception of orchids and gardenias, is to be had for the Thanksgiving business. Advance orders indicate that this will be one of the best in recent years, although prices may be a little lower than usual. Last week the only flower having an unvarying price was valley, which stood at $4 per hundred. Several killing frosts have cleared the market of outdoor flowers, but pompon chrysanthemums are to be counted by the wagon-load and at prices which are decidedly detrimental to trade in other varieties of stock. Last week extra fine roses were to be had at from $2 to $6 per hundred. American Beauty roses brought up to $3, with a limited quantity of specials at $4 per dozen. Chrysanthemums were offered to buyers at practically their own figures. Snapdragon is good and the sale on this is improving. The weather is not quite cold enough for violets and their sale is decidedly draggy. Business during the entire month has been satisfactory and, according to a number of storemen, the future looks up bright. The announcement of the various diplomatic, official and semi-official events to take place at the White House is pleasing news to retailers and wholesalers alike.

Various Notes.

Among the week's visitors was James W. Campbell, of Ardsley, N. Y., who accompanied the chrysanthemum plant having 1,200 flowers, which was grown on the estate of Adolph Lewisohn, to the Cleveland flower show, where it attracted widespread attention. While in Washington Mr. Campbell visited the places of national interest and spent considerable time inspecting near-by greenhouses. Other visitors were R. T. Brown, of the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Knight, of New York; Robert Shoch, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington is scheduled for December 7. Plans are being made for a motion-picture exhibition on that occasion. Some of the pictures to be shown will be those taken on the battle fields of Europe, depicting actual conditions abroad. Refreshments will follow the business meeting. C. L. L.

The Market.

Real winter weather made its first appearance November 15 and wrought a desirable change, for the market has stiffened considerably and the quality of stock now plays an important role. The weather has checked long-distance shipping to a certain extent. The demand also experienced a change for the better. Beauties are sufficient for the demand, selling out every day. The quality is as good as has been seen this season. Other varieties of roses are more plentiful, with the exception of Mrs. Russell, of which there never seems to be enough. The varieties most plentiful are White Killarney and Killarney. Carnations are more plentiful than ever, but as their quality is good, no difficulty is experienced in clearing them. The supply of violets, both double and single, is large enough to supply the call. Valley is about the same as last reported.

Chrysanthemum receipts are smaller than those of the week previous, because of the cold weather. Pompons are about the same. The quality is good, but the quantity is somewhat small. Callas are to be had again. Easter lilies are quite sufficient. Snapdragon and mignonette are available. Stevia has made its appearance and comes in handy in boxes of cut flowers. Greens of all kinds are sufficient, especially adiantum.

Various Notes.

J. G. Pickleman has a handsome window display of white and yellow mums. Business is not quite as lively as anticipated.

Barney Myers is cutting some fine lily of the valley. He has sent in his first stevias of the season.

Joseph Sangster, of Jefferson street, has acquired an automobile for delivery purposes.

E. Stroh has been busy with decorations and funeral work.

A busy week was experienced by the forces at both the Palmer stores, principally with funeral work and wedding decorations.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

STANDARD PIPE OR OLD TUBES?

I have two new greenhouses and should like to get some advice on the heating system. Some figures on the cost of the piping have already been submitted to me, but seem to me to be entirely unreasonable. You will find a drawing of the houses enclosed. Would it be preferable to use 2-inch pipe or 4-inch second-hand boiler tubes? I can get the 2-inch pipe much more cheaply. I shall use a Kroeschell boiler; will it be necessary to pit this boiler? I intended to grow carnations, but it is now so late that I shall grow lettuce. In that case will it be necessary to have heat both under the benches and at the side of them? As the diagram indicates, there are five benches, each five feet nine inches wide, in the two houses, besides a 3-foot bench at each outside wall.

Will you give me an estimate of what the piping should cost? I have had a concern figuring on an outfit of 4-inch second-hand boiler tubes and such other material as is necessary to complete the piping system only, without the boiler, and the price charged, in the proposition submitted to me, was $1,550 for 3,750 feet of the second-hand tubes. Would that be enough piping?

C. G. C.—III.

The sketch shows two houses, each 21½x184, with three feet of glass in one wall of each house. A temperature of 60 degrees is desired in zero weather. The estimate of 3,750 feet of 4-inch second-hand boiler tubes and other material is not far from correct, so far as the amount of radiation needed is concerned, but the price would seem to be much too high, especially if the labor of installing the system is not included.

However, I would prefer to use 2-inch pipe for the radiating surface, with one 3-inch flow pipe on the outside plate of each house, together with three 2½-inch flow pipes additional in each house. One of the 2½-inch flows should be on

Engineering Advice

We have assisted many growers in the development of successful heating systems and our engineering department offers a service and the benefit of a knowledge and experience of incalculable value to those who contemplate the erection of heating plants no matter how small or how large, hot water or steam.

KROESCHELL CENTRAL HEATING SYSTEM

Installed for John G. Frisz, Vincennes, Indiana.
 This plant at present covers over two and one-half acres of ground space and was formerly heated by a large number of boilers located in different parts throughout the plant.

Two years ago Mr. Frisz contemplated an addition of a new block of houses, and as the heating systems in use were not successful, Mr. Frisz called on us for advice.

We suggested a central heating system and recommended that all boilers be torn out and disposed of, and in place of same advised that the new power plant be located at the extreme northeast corner of the plant alongside of the railroad tracks.

The new equipment consists of two No. 18 Kroeschell hot water boilers (central station type), one 60 H. P. steam boiler, two 8 inch circulating steam boilers, and steam condenser. Only one of the hot water boilers was required to heat the entire plant although the temperature had reached 20° below zero, the coldest winter in this section for many years.

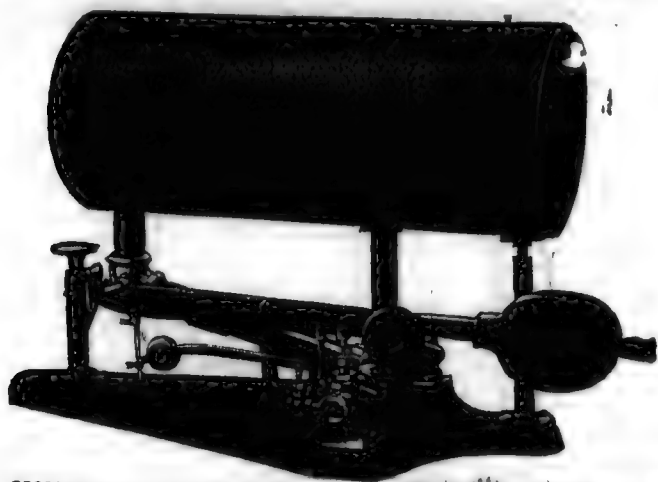

In planning this heating system the equipment installed allows for a great increase in glass.

With our system there is no expense on the operation of the circulating pumps, as the exhaust steam from same is utilized to reheat the water coming from the greenhouses. With this system there is absolutely no waste.

The same season the new heating system was installed 20,000 sq. ft. of glass was added to the plant, and in spite of this the new system made a saving of over 12 carloads of coal over the amount of fuel consumed the season before; and remember, the new plant heated 20,000 additional glass besides.

pipes as main flows to connect with the boiler. The 3-inch main flows may be connected directly with the flow pipes on the outer plates. One 4-inch flow may be used to supply three 2½-inch flows in one of the houses, and the remaining 4-inch flow may be used for the other house. The 4-inch flows should be carried at about the level of the purlins. When the 4-inch flow reaches the middle of the second bench in the first house, a 2½-inch flow pipe should be taken off. Then reduce the main flow to 3-inch, and over the middle of the third bed take off another 2½-inch flow. The main flow may then be reduced to 2½-inch and carried to the inside plate of the first house, where it should connect with the flow pipe. In the other house the connections will be the same, except that the flow pipe on the inside plate should be connected first.

Carry the flow pipes through the house, giving them a fall of one inch in twenty feet, and at the farther ends of the benches drop them down and connect with the 2-inch return pipes, distributed under the benches as already directed. The returns also should be given a slight fall, and when they reach the boiler end of the house they should be connected with the main return pipes, which should be of the same size as the main flow pipes. Each of the main flow pipes should be connected with the expansion tank at its highest point, which will be not far from the boiler.

Unless it is possible to sink the boiler so that it will be about as low as the returns, I would install a mercury generator, or some similar means of placing the system under pressure.

A system such as has been described will require about 1,200 linear feet of 2½-inch pipe, 500 feet of 3-inch for the outer wall flows, about 3,700 feet of 2-inch for the coils, and fifty feet of 4-inch for the main flow and return pipes. Using new pipe throughout, the cost for the pipe and fittings should not be more than $1,500. About one-half that amount would be enough to pay for good second-hand pipe.

ABOUT BOILER CAPACITIES.

I have two greenhouses, each 15x38, containing 1,800 square feet of glass. I also have a 7-section Gold boiler, with a grate 19x28 inches. Will this boiler heat the two houses? Can you tell me, also, the number of square feet of glass that a 20-horsepower steam boiler will heat, if used as a hot water boiler?

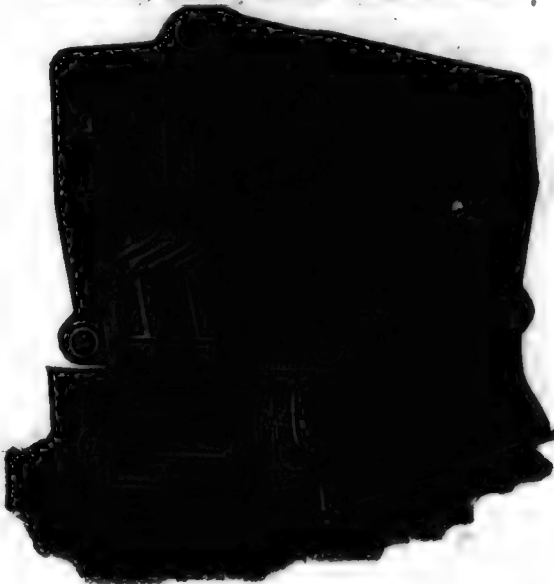

C. B. W.—N. Y.

The amount of glass that can be heated with a given boiler depends to a great extent upon the temperature to be maintained, since the boiler would have to be fifty per cent larger for 65 degrees than for 50 degrees. If the two houses are well built and have about an average exposure, they will require a boiler with a rating of approximately 500, 600 and 800 square feet of radiation, respectively, for 40, 50 and 60 degrees, when the temperature is 10 degrees below zero outside. The actual radiation needed in the houses will be about twenty-five per cent less for each of the temperatures mentioned than is specified as the capacity of the boilers.

I do not know enough of the actual performance of a Gold boiler of the size mentioned to make positive statements regarding its efficiency. Although a good deal depends upon the size of the grate, the results will be considerably modified by the nature of the heating surface of the boiler. I am of the opinion, however, that the boiler men-

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business is rather quiet. Chrysanthemums are coming at their best, with a large supply of all sizes of blooms, but the prices so far this season have not ruled as good as last year. Roses have been scarce, especially white, and prices have been slightly stiff. Violets, which are beginning to come better, both in quality and quantity, were short November 20 on account of the large demand for the Yale game.

Various Notes.

Primroses in pots at 49 cents each formed a special last week at the flower department of The Shepard Co.

The trade certificate of the Quality Flower Shop, doing business at 14 Main street, Pawtucket, has been filed at the office of the city clerk, the name of the owner being given as M. J. Leach & Sons.

George Johnson & Son have just added a new delivery car to their equipment.

J. H. Cushing, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, has been confined to his home by a severe bronchial trouble.

Elmer E. King, of Attleboro, is a member of a hunting party that is enjoying an outing in Maine. They report having bagged several deer.

Lester J. Meader has a large force of men at work on bedding in the grounds of the State Normal School.

Increasing business has necessitated M. J. Leach & Sons, of Pawtucket, to add another delivery car to their garage.

Smith the Florist has the flower stand at the Hall & Lyon store on Saturdays.

Lucian O'Connor, son of Timothy O'Connor, is reported to be fighting in a Canadian regiment in the trenches in France.

Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, was a member of a party that spent last week on a fishing trip down Narragansett bay.

W. H. M.

Rahway, N. J.—The Artistic Flower Shop is now owned by a company of which G. R. Sloan, of Elizabeth, is manager.

The Market.

Last week was cold and rainy, the coldest weather of the season thus far. At present it is clear and everything points to another spell of fine weather. It is to the interest of all that we have fine weather this week, for it should bring the heaviest business of the year, with the exception of that at Christmas.

Carnations are now the most plentiful flowers, but few of them are going to the dump. The quality is fine at last; they wholesale at $2. The out-of-town orders for carnations are heavy. Roses are not so plentiful as they were, but the quality is good. Ophelia, Kaiserin, Russell and Hoosier Beauty seem to be the most plentiful, though there are plenty of Wards and some good Killarneys. It is surprising, however, how largely the Killarneys have been displaced in this market by the newer and, I think, better roses. Roses are mostly retailing at about $1.50. Few are sold at wholesale. Lilies are not so plentiful as they were a short time ago, though there is a fair supply of both rubrum and Easter lilies. Valley is on the short side. Chrysanthemums are the show feature, of course, but there is no surplus of any kind this season. For a few days when the weather was too warm, they came in rather faster than they could be sold, but that is all changed.

I am informed that the bulb stocks in this city were never so closely cleaned up as they are at present, this early in the season. Many items are sold out entirely, despite the fact that imports were heavier than those of last year and thousands of home-grown bulbs have been sold. I have noticed many irises in bloom during the last two or three weeks. They were either of the intermediate type or the western variety, Sylvan Fairy. I saw many outdoor hyacinths in bloom last week.

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. has its refrigerating plant in operation in one part of the storeroom and is rapidly installing the system in the other. The company will have room enough to do most of the cold-storage work as soon as the plant is completed.

Geny Bros. seem to have had an unusually heavy fall business, keeping sold out most of the time. Their pot chrysanthemums have been unusually good.

McIntyre Bros. are cutting good orchids. They bid fair to have the heaviest cut of orchids ever grown in this city.

Haury & Sons continue to sell quantities of good pot mums. Their singles and pompons are exceptionally fine. They are doing a good cut flower business. F. B.

The Market.

Flowers are overplentiful and reasonable in price. Orchids are scarcer and the price has gone up again. The chrysanthemums now coming in are of excellent quality and find a ready sale. Pompons and anemones are abundant. Valley is arriving in large quantities and is of good quality. Potted primroses and cyclamens are coming in and form part of the window displays at some of the stores. Sweet peas are more plentiful and of better grade. Carnations are fast becoming more staple, both as to quality and price. Roses are good and arrive in sufficient quantities to supply all demands. Ophelia and Stanley seem to be the best sellers. Violets are more plentiful and are not at all high-priced for this season of the year. There is a good sale for ferns in pots and in baskets.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club was held November 18 at the Krueger auditorium. The committee in charge of the recent chrysanthemum show reported. It was the consensus of opinion that the show was a great success, considering that it was the club's first show. From the experience gained in the presentation of this show it is expected that the club members will be able to present a much better one next year. The attendance at the meeting was the largest the club ever had. Charles Schenck, of New York, was elected a member, and three applications for membership were received. The entertainment committee, of which Richard Youell is chairman, was authorized to arrange for a ladies' night under the auspices of the club. A nomination committee was appointed, consisting of August Begerow, W. W. Adams and John Crossley. The committee will make its report at the January meeting and the new officers will then be elected.

Various Notes.

Fred P. Wolfinger has installed a number of new store signs, which certainly attract the attention of the passers-by. One of these is a large sign brilliantly illuminated at night by many incandescent lights. On the roof a large square sign has been erected at such an angle as easily to be seen by people several blocks down the street, which is the center of the business section of Newark.

Last week Philips Bros. provided a decoration for a large reception and dance at the Krueger auditorium. The decoration consisted of large quantities of freshly cut evergreens and cedar boughs, and clusters of chrysanthemums and carnations.

J. Dixon Strobell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Strobell, of 76 Milford avenue, and Miss Elizabeth J. Norris were married November 17 at the Calvary Presbyterian church. R. B. M.

Hose that outwears all other covers.

Your men can drag "Greenhouse" about over cement, sharp gravel, sand, brick, cinders, etc., around corner-posts and doorways, over sharp projections, and the rubber cover will "stand the gaff" in wonderful shape. "Wears like pig's nose" is really no exaggeration.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Two or three good frosts have killed all the outdoor stock. Business during the first part of last week was rather quiet, but toward the end of the week things brightened up somewhat. More roses, carnations and mums were on the market than could be sold. So far, November has not come up to the October record of sales. Thanksgiving business will help some.

Club Meeting.

The second monthly meeting of the newly organized florists' club was held at the William Halbrooks place. The attendance was good and five new members were taken into the club. The new members are Miss Nellie Goodge, C. E. Gysemen, William M. Halbrooks, Jr., Isaac R. Mills and Otto Kuebler, of Newburg. Miss Goodge was unable to attend the meeting, but wanted to be put down as a member.

Theodore Kuebler gave an interesting and instructive talk on the mum. Carl Elsperrmann will talk on Christmas plants at the next meeting, which will be held at the J. C. Elsperrmann store, December 15. After adjournment the members were invited to Mr. Halbrooks' greenhouses, a short distance away, where lunch was served.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting excellent roses, carnations and violets. The mums are extra good. As fast as the mums are cleaned out the benches are filled with other stock. Emil Niednagel and C. L. Niednagel attended the Chicago flower show.

The Blackman Floral Co. is enjoying a good business. Its roses, carnations and mums are excellent. The men are cutting lilies, snapdragons and greens. George Blackman attended the Chicago flower show.

Miss Nellie Goodge says business was good during the second half of last week. She is hardly able to be about yet since her fall, but she says she just has to go to the greenhouse to help.

J. C. Elsperrmann has been confined to his bed for some time. Business is excellent at the store. Carl Elsperrmann has all of the stock, including the carnations, in nice condition.

designed and erected for
Mr. N. Grillo, of Milldale, Conn.

We have been asked why we persist in speaking of the many jobs we have already completed. Our reason for doing this and embodying the names and addresses of our customers is that anyone interested in a greenhouse might verify, to his complete satisfaction, all our claims by corresponding direct with any of them.

The one really sure way to secure best results in your contemplated greenhouse is to select the builder whose claims to superiority are confirmed by what he has accomplished for others.

When anyone makes his selection on the above basis, he will find that the service we are rendering to others is just the service that is so vitally important to him.

If you are contemplating the erection of a greenhouse, write us—we can save money for you.

"S-U-B-S-T-I-T-U-T-E" SPELLS "INFERIORITY"

That is a safe general rule; in the case of CYPRESS as THE Greenhouse Lumber it is an absolute truism. Small wonder that those who urge the "substitute" have but the one cry, "cheaper." But the substitute is NOT "cheaper," except as to initial cost.

The only businesslike way to figure material costs in Greenhouse building is BY THE YEAR.

There's nothing consolingly "cheap" about repair and replacement bills. The truly cheapest greenhouse is the one that shows the least totals—at the end of a term of years—first cost and up-keep together.

By that rule CYPRESS for greenhouse construction has all other woods beaten at the start. It is the absolute cheapest, figured by the year of its life. If built of heart Cypress, with "Pecky" Cypress for certain parts, the wood cannot be substituted by any other material ever grown or made. Talk of a "substitute" is worse than bosh. It is not quite square. If contractors would say: "We can build you a greenhouse of cheaper wood," that would do, for the so-called "substitutes" are all cheaper in first cost. BUT MORE EXPENSIVE IN THE END. Do you care? You bet you do—you're a business man as well as a flower grower. "The Building Age," August, 1912, issue, page 409, in specifications for a small greenhouse, says: "These timbers should be made of Cypress, for on account of its straight grain, strength and durability, this has been found to be THE WOOD BEST ADAPTED FOR GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION."

GET ACTION on our Cypress Pocket Library; the booklets are absolutely free. Write for one, or a dozen. Vol. 3—(nothing but greenhouses) is the first one you want. CHASE A POSTAL AFTER IT. NOW. Also ask for Vol. 36, the book on carpentry, both instructive and interesting. Vol. 37 is the Silo Book.

The Working Principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave

In A B C Language

If you light a match and hold it, the heat won't bother you until the fire touches your fingers. Now take a nail, hold it at one end and apply a lit match at the other—in a moment you will have to drop it because the heat has been conducted to your fingers.

That's the working principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave, and that's why it is self-ice-clearing.

More than 90% of the Metropolitan Patented Eave is in constant contact with the inside heat, and being of one continuous piece of cast iron, the heat penetrates right through to the outside. That's why no snow or ice can accumulate on a Metropolitan Greenhouse. Heat cannot penetrate eaves that are made up of two or more sections.

The Metropolitan Eave is but one of the many improvements we have made in Greenhouse construction.

Thanksgiving 1915

Another fine increase in sales brings Thanksgiving to the front as one of the important special flower days

It is a case of "just a few flowers for the table" at Thanksgiving. But there are 20,000,000 tables in the United States! So is it any wonder the fourth Thursday in November is one of the important special flower days? No, not always has been, but is. Getting better every year. So we florists have a double reason to be thankful—the same reason everyone else has and the added, special, extra reason that ours is one of the few trades that profits by a holiday that has been looked on as set apart for football and gormandizing. Indeed, we should be thankful, extremely, humbly thankful. Things are coming our way!

Flowers Have Become a Necessity.

People in the provision trades once spoke to us patronizingly, commiseratingly, because, as they said, flowers were "a luxury"; it was to be expected that a florist would have harder sledding than almost anybody else, for almost everything was more necessary than flowers. But we are entitled to look with sympathy on, to deal gently with, the man who says as much today. Poor fellow; he doesn't know! Flowers graced many a Thanksgiving table that saw no turkey. Flowers have become a necessity—if not to all the people, at least to a great many, and not by any means all of them wealthy.

If you look back over your records for several years, probably you will find a fairly steady increase in your sales. If you make a chart of each year's sales, like the red line the recording thermometer traces on its paper dial, or like the diagram the daily newspaper prints every now and then to show the rise and fall of stocks or wheat; if you make such a chart of your sales you will find that business for most of the holidays, especially the largest ones, increases no faster than regular business increases. But here and there you will find a day that shows up with an increase that keeps getting better and better as compared to the daily run.

One Is Thanksgiving.

Most conspicuous of the business peaks are Easter and Christmas—some would say Christmas and Easter—but they have not risen rapidly of late. Mothers' day, of course, stands out as showing the most rapid increase, for it is comparatively new. And there's Memorial day, big only in recent years. But how Thanksgiving looms up these last few seasons! In 1913 it was better than ever before; in 1914, an oasis in a desert, comparatively speaking better than either Christmas or Easter. And then, in 1915! Well, just read the reports in this issue of The Review!

It is apparent everybody, everywhere, had a big Thanksgiving. There were plenty of flowers; they could be offered at moderate prices; everybody bought some. It was quite turning the tables on the provision man, who had to pay so much for his turkeys he could only sell a few even though he cut his profit small. It's an object lesson for us.

Medium-priced Stock in Request.

Anyone reviewing the Thanksgiving business will be sure to note that it was the moderate-priced stock that was in demand. It always is so when people buy flowers for their own use.

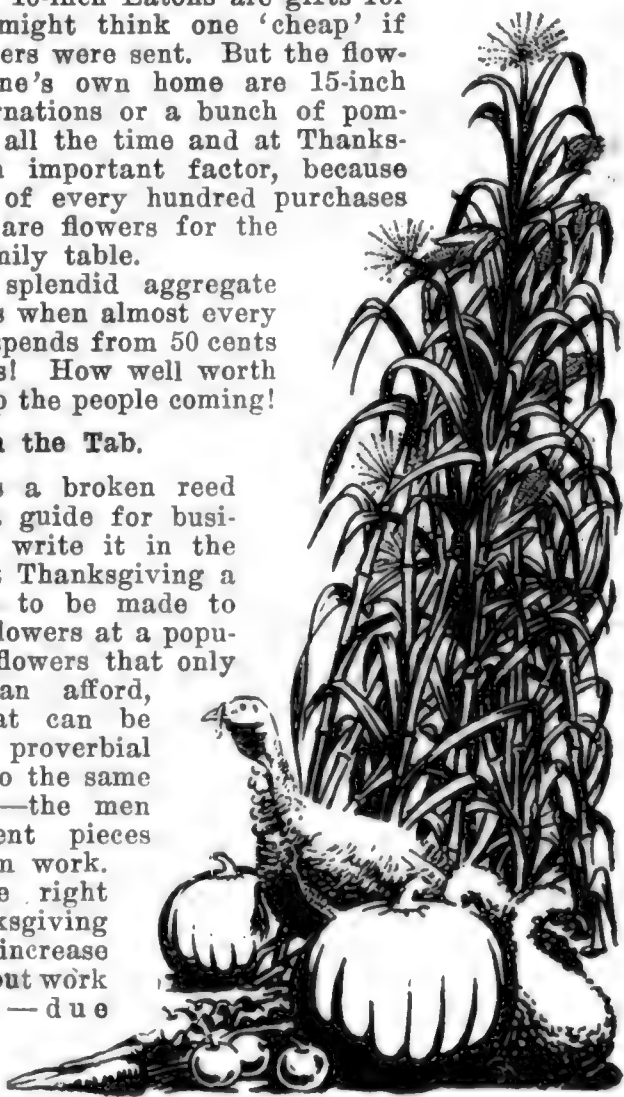

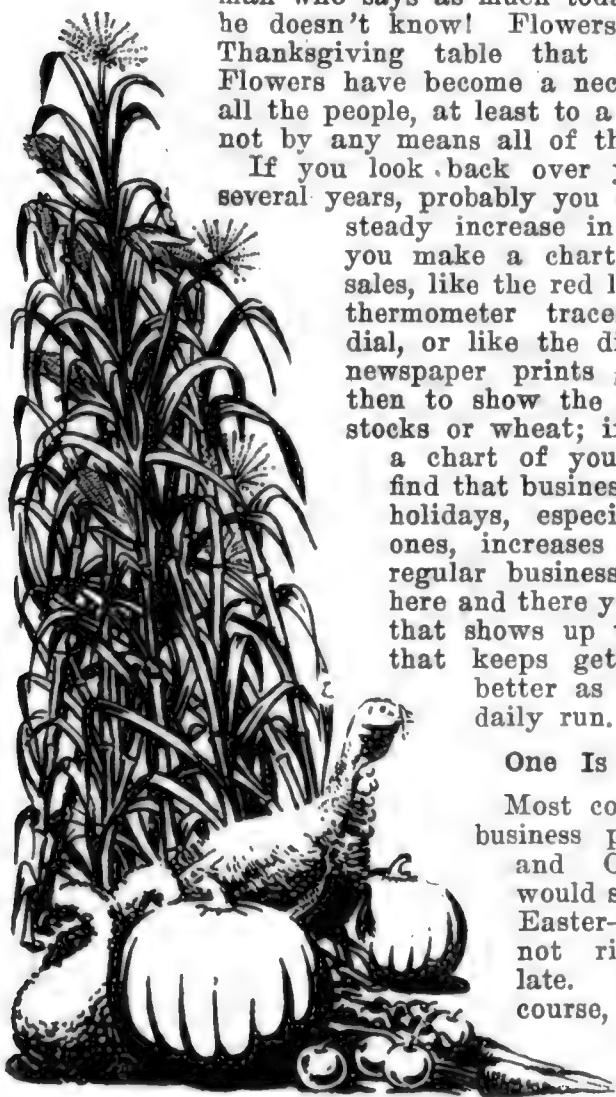

"You know before a customer tells you," commented a thoughtful retailer the other day, "what is to be done with the flowers selected. The long-stemmed Beauties, the 4-foot Russells and the 10-inch Eatons are gifts for somebody who might think one 'cheap' if more useful flowers were sent. But the flowers to go to one's own home are 15-inch roses, a few carnations or a bunch of pompons." It's so all the time and at Thanksgiving it is an important factor, because ninety-nine out of every hundred purchases at this holiday are flowers for the buyer's own family table.

But what a splendid aggregate of sales it makes when almost every family in town spends from 50 cents to $1 for flowers! How well worth the effort to keep the people coming!

Put It on the Tab.

Memory is as a broken reed when used as a guide for business plans. So write it in the record that next Thanksgiving a special effort is to be made to obtain and sell flowers at a popular price. Not flowers that only the wealthy can afford, but flowers that can be sold like the proverbial hot cakes, and to the same class of people—the men with the 50-cent pieces going home from work.

Make a note right now that Thanksgiving sales made a big increase practically without work on your part—due wholly to good times and the rising appreciation of flowers—and write it in the book that next year you will be one of those who see to it that the thoughtless are not permitted to forget.

A Happy Augury.

But to the trade there is a more immediate interest than the prospect that next Thanksgiving will be even better than the excellent one of last week. It lies in the assurance of a splendid Christmas business.

The people again have money, it is argued, else nowhere near so many of them would have bought flowers for Thanksgiving, and there is every prospect of a banner Christmas—a Christmas business that is all the more important now that the supply of stock has become so great. On the whole there will be more stock this Christmas than ever before, cut flowers and plants, and the support of the public is a vital necessity if all are to be cleared. What if demand should be less than in other years? But, never fear! It won't; not after such a fine increase as Thanksgiving shows.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

["Landscape Gardening as Applied to Home Decoration," by Samuel T. Maynard, formerly professor of botany and horticulture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College; second edition, rewritten and enlarged. Published by John Wiley & Sons, Inc., New York. Size, 5x7½ inches; 396 pages; nearly 200 illustrations. Price, bound in green cloth, $1.50 net.]

Many horticultural books bear the plain evidences, as plain as if stamped on the cover in big red letters, that they are suitable for the use of only one class of readers, either the amateurs alone or the professionals alone. This book, however, is so written as to be interesting and instructive to both classes. It is neither so elementary as to be useless to the practical expert, nor so technical as to bewilder or repel the poorly informed beginner. It is not a dreary or difficult book to read. Its ideas are presented in such a form as to be easily assimilated, like food that is both palatable and wholesomely nutritious. The illustrations partake of the same character as the text, being both attractive and helpful.

It treats the different stages of the process of home-making in a progressive or chronological order, beginning with the selection and purchase of the site and the construction of the residence, and then depicting the successive steps in the laying out and planting of the grounds. Equally interesting, perhaps more interesting to many readers, are the directions that are given in regard to "renovating and improving old homes." The second part of the book contains a description of some of the choicest of the trees, plants and shrubs, with suggestions as to the purposes for which each variety is best adapted. There is a chapter on the extermination of insects and fungi.

FERTILIZER FOR ASPARAGUS.

I have about 2,400 asparagus plants that do not develop so well as they should. I kept the plants, which are 3 years old, on the dry side all summer. During the last week of August I began to water them abundantly, but they did not appear to respond. Last winter they did not do so well as some I saw in other houses. Would a small amount of nitrate of soda stimulate the plants? Granting that it would, how much nitrate would you advise me to use on a bed 6x100 feet? I could grind the nitrate of soda fine, spread it on the bed by hand and wash it in with the hose. Kindly advise and oblige a subscriber in trouble. F. C.—Pa.

Nitrate of soda would be a rather strong stimulant to apply to a bed of asparagus that is not in active growth, and I do not advise its use.

A top-dressing of cow manure about two inches thick would be more likely to give permanent results, provided that a proper night temperature is maintained—about 60 to 65 degrees. It is quite possible that the asparagus has been kept too dry during the summer and that this is one of the reasons for the poor start it is making. W. H. T.

FERTILIZER FOR SMILAX.

What is a good fertilizer for smilax that has been planted a short time, and how soon shall I start feeding the plants? In the bench of young plants I also have some older plants from last year. Please advise as to the fertilizer to use. W. G. F. G.—Mo.

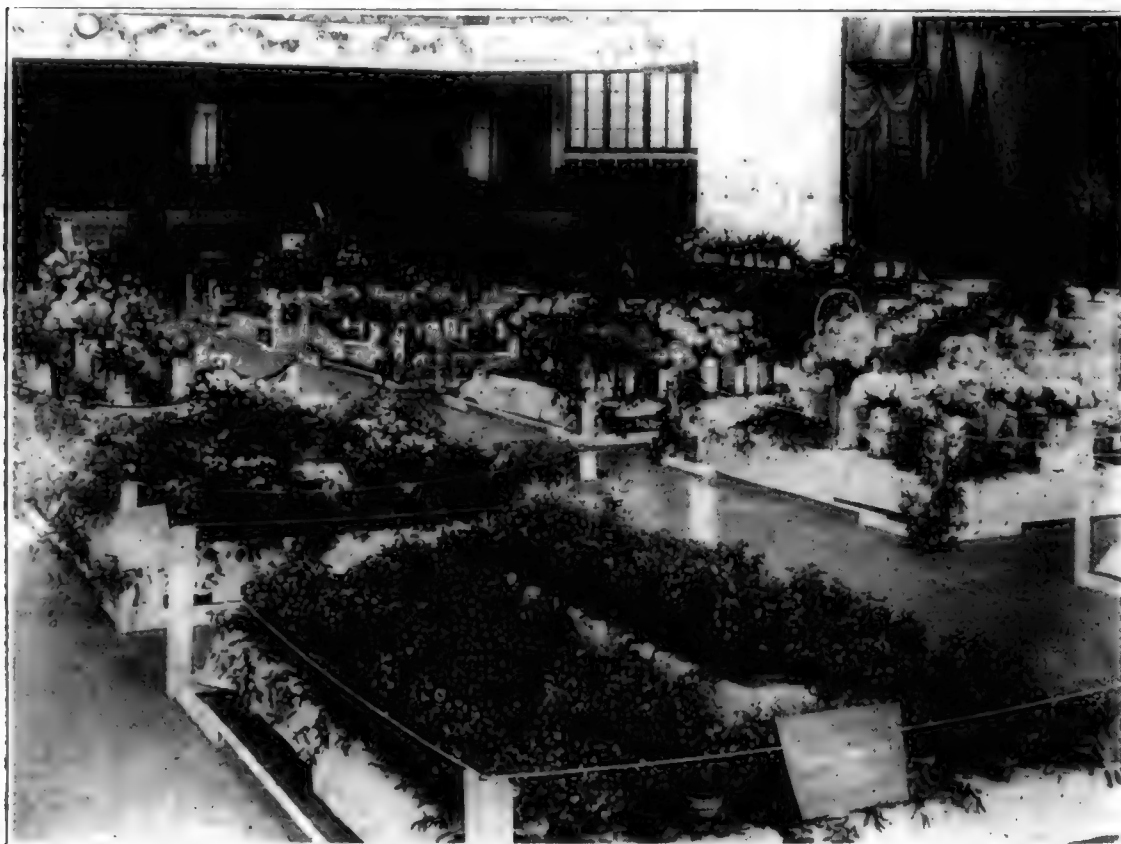

As soon as the roots are active in the soil the feeding can commence. You can apply liquid cow or sheep manure, or, if preferred, use a mulch of old manure. Feeding can be more liberally carried on as daylight increases, toward spring. C. W.

BEGONIA LEAVES DISCOLORED.

Enclosed you will find some Cincinnati begonia leaves. My plants grow well, but every leaf on them is affected in this way. I have them potted in 4-inch pots, in good soil mixed with well rotted manure and a little bone meal, and I wondered if they were burnt and if I ought to knock them out of the soil they are in and repot them in new soil. They are just beginning to bloom. Any information on the matter will be thankfully received.

any of this type of winter-flowering begonias. Well decayed cow or horse manure is a perfectly safe potting medium to add to the loam. Also, if you have any leaf-mold that is not too much decayed, add sufficient to make one-fourth of the whole compost. These begonias delight in a light, moderately rich soil, sufficiently porous so that water passes through it readily. I would suggest shaking out the plants and giving them a compost as recommended.

TULIPS FOR CHRISTMAS.

October 4 I planted the following single tulips: Artus, Rose Grisdelin, La Reine, Yellow Prince, Thomas Moore and Keizerskroon. Are there any among these, besides Yellow Prince and La Reine, that I can have in bloom for Christmas, and what time must I bring them in? Our house is cool and I do not know how much time to allow.

A. K.—Neb.

You may be able to get a few La Reine and Yellow Prince for Christmas if you plant them sufficiently early, but such bulbs always come quite short-stemmed and I doubt if there is any money in them. October 4 is not an early date to plant these tulips, and it would be of no use for you to attempt forcing them for Christmas. Tulips should be started a couple of inches before being placed in heat. Then, early in the season, they should be put in a warm, dark place to draw them up before gradually exposing them to the light. Bulbs potted early in October would be better if not started before January. Then allow a month to flower them in your cool house. C. W.

PANICULATA, NOT SERRATA?

"I have tumbled across one of those curious instances of where a plant has for years masqueraded under a name not belonging to it, and for this little contretemps our American friends are entirely to blame," says W. A. T., in the Horticultural Trade Journal (British). "As stated in some previous notes, the Stevia serrata I grew twenty years ago bore large panicles of pure white, starry flowers, and for this reason I have never been able to reconcile the statement in my dictionary that Stevia serrata was flesh-tinted. Moreover, the form of leaf was not edged sufficiently to warrant the term serrata. My tests this season have brought out the fact that the plant the Americans list and grow so largely for cutting is not Stevia serrata, but Stevia paniculata. More than ever convinced that the plant I have been growing is of market value, I brought it to the notice of several market friends, not one of whom had ever seen it. Carrying it further, I showed it to many botanical and horticultural experts. Most of the latter jumped to the conclusion that the stranger was an asperula or a eupatorium. A botanist from Wisley, however, scouted this idea, and, convinced that it was a stevia, thereupon investigated the matter and duly informed me that it was Stevia paniculata, a species that he had never seen and had no knowledge of whatever. Like myself, he at once realized its value for cutting, more so as it flowers after Gypsophila paniculata has finished.

"To me it is amazing that Americans should have nursed this plant for so many years without realizing their error. Still more astonishing is it that no one on this side had ever troubled to try out seed obtained from an American source, for in many United States catalogues it is described as a white, tiny, starlike flower, borne in large panicles."

PESTS ON POINSETTIA PLANTS.

We have a fine lot of poinsettia plants that are forming their bracts. We notice that white fly and mealy bug are appearing in spots on these and we are afraid to use nicotine fumigation as a remedy. Would you suggest using hydrocyanic acid gas, or is there any other remedy with which we can combat these pests until we are ready to cut the flowers at Christmas? J. W. R.—Ohio.

Nicotine fumigation will not harm poinsettias in the least, but it will not avail against the two pests you name.

Hydrocyanic acid gas would kill both white fly and mealy bug, but, though this is a splendid remedy, I would hesitate to recommend its use unless you give a light dose. Poinsettias will not stand anything like heavy fumigation without showing a loss of foliage or burning, and they need a comparatively high temperature while the bracts are opening, which makes the likelihood of damage greater than in a low temperature. You can get rid of the bug by using a spray nozzle attached to the hose, while a soap spray will take care of most of the white fly, if properly directed. C. W.

rising appreciation of flowers—and write it in the book that next year you will be one of those who see to it that the thoughtless are not permitted to forget.

A Happy Augury.

But to the trade there is a more immediate interest than the prospect that next Thanksgiving will be even better than the excellent one of last week. It lies in the assurance of a splendid Christmas business.

The people again have money, it is argued, else nowhere near so many of them would have bought flowers for Thanksgiving, and there is every prospect of a banner Christmas—a Christmas business that is all the more important now that the supply of stock has become so great. On the whole there will be more stock this Christmas than ever before, cut flowers and plants, and the support of the public is a vital necessity if all are to be cleared. What if demand should be less than in other years? But, never fear! It won't; not after such a fine increase as Thanksgiving shows.

Size, 5x7½ inches; 396 pages; nearly 200 illustrations. Price, bound in green cloth, $1.50 net.]

Many horticultural books bear the plain evidences, as plain as if stamped on the cover in big red letters, that they are suitable for the use of only one class of readers, either the amateurs alone or the professionals alone. This book, however, is so written as to be interesting and instructive to both classes. It is neither so elementary as to be useless to the practical expert, nor so technical as to bewilder or repel the poorly informed beginner. It is not a dreary or difficult book to read. Its ideas are presented in such a form as to be easily assimilated, like food that is both palatable and wholesomely nutritious. The illustrations partake of the same character as the text, being both attractive and helpful.

It treats the different stages of the process of home-making in a progressive or chronological order, beginning with the selection and purchase of the site and the construction of the residence, and then depicting the successive steps in the laying out and planting of the grounds. Equally interesting, perhaps more interesting to many readers, are the directions that are given in regard to "renovating and improving old homes." The second part of the book contains a description of some of the choicest of the trees, plants and shrubs, with suggestions as to the purposes for which each variety is best adapted. There is a chapter on the extermination of insects and fungi.

FERTILIZER FOR ASPARAGUS.

I have about 2,400 asparagus plants that do not develop so well as they should. I kept the plants, which are 3 years old, on the dry side all summer. During the last week of August I began to water them abundantly, but they did not appear to respond. Last winter they did not do so well as some I saw in other houses. Would a small amount of nitrate of soda stimulate the plants? Granting that it would, how much nitrate would you advise me to use on a bed 6x100 feet? I could grind the nitrate of soda fine, spread it on the bed by hand and wash it in with the hose. Kindly advise and oblige a subscriber in trouble. F. C.—Pa.

Nitrate of soda would be a rather strong stimulant to apply to a bed of asparagus that is not in active growth, and I do not advise its use.

A top-dressing of cow manure about two inches thick would be more likely to give permanent results, provided that a proper night temperature is maintained—about 60 to 65 degrees. It is quite possible that the asparagus has been kept too dry during the summer and that this is one of the reasons for the poor start it is making. W. H. T.

FERTILIZER FOR SMILAX.

What is a good fertilizer for smilax that has been planted a short time, and how soon shall I start feeding the plants? In the bench of young plants I also have some older plants from last year. Please advise as to the fertilizer to use. W. G. F. G.—Mo.

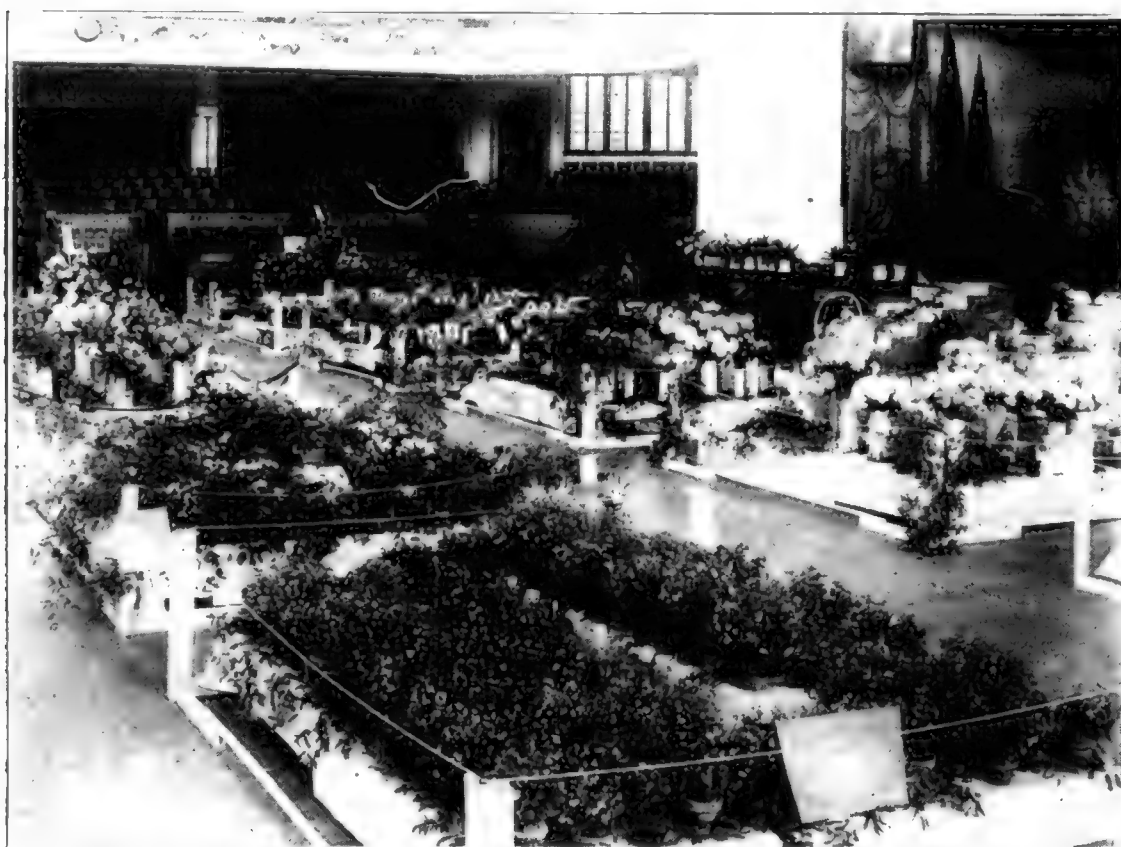

As soon as the roots are active in the soil the feeding can commence. You can apply liquid cow or sheep manure, or, if preferred, use a mulch of old manure. Feeding can be more liberally carried on as daylight increases, toward spring. C. W.

BEGONIA LEAVES DISCOLORED.

Enclosed you will find some Cincinnati begonia leaves. My plants grow well, but every leaf on them is affected in this way. I have them potted in 4-inch pots, in good soil mixed with well rotted manure and a little bone meal, and I wondered if they were burnt and if I ought to knock them out of the soil they are in and repot them in new soil. They are just beginning to bloom. Any information on the matter will be thankfully received.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

When the National Flower Show committee took a lease of Convention hall, the building in which the National Flower Show is to be held in Philadelphia March 25 to April 2, 1916, the committee had some misgivings as to whether the show could occupy the tremendous amount of floor space presented. Subsequent preparations, however, have shown that instead of being too big, the hall is really too small. Consequently, the floor plan as originally arranged has had to be altered to accommodate the pressure already felt upon the space. The space set apart for the trade exhibits has been minimized and every available inch has been relegated to the area required for the competitive exhibits. It is not too soon to state that the exhibition will fill the building completely. The National Flower Show committee advances the idea of "show first;" therefore other interests must give way. Those who have already taken space in the trade section have acted wisely, for even at this early date the space available for trade displays is nearly all reserved and it is only a matter of a few weeks before all the space will be taken up. Among those who have contracted for space are the following:

The schedule committee has just completed the second preliminary schedule and it will be mailed to those interested in a few days. The prizes offered approximate a grand total of $20,000, eclipsing the schedules of all preceding National Flower Shows. The bid for feature exhibits is well exemplified in the offer of $600 for rose gardens, with a prospect of the prizes being increased to $1,000 in this class.

DEPARTMENT OF REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., offers for registration the cannas mentioned below. Any person objecting to the use of the proposed names or registration is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Canna Lafayette—In some respects it resembles the famous Meteor, but the flowers are a more intense scarlet. The heads of bloom are carried erect above the healthy, green foliage, producing a brilliant effect in mass planting.

Canna Windmar—This canna is rather dwarf in habit; the flowers are medium in size; fine, rounded petals; color, clear, distinct orange, broadly margined with canary-yellow; an early and free bloomer; self-cleaning; erect trusses, carried well above the foliage, which is a marine shade of green; parentage, Buttercup x seedling.

GLADIOLI IN MARCH.

H. Youell, Syracuse, N. Y., secretary of the American Gladiolus Society, invites correspondence from all who are interested in the forcing of gladioli, as a fine list of premiums has been offered the members of the society for a display of flowers at the National Flower Show in Philadelphia in March. Almost identical classes are to be provided for commercial growers and for amateurs. The full schedule will be included in the premium list, shortly to be mailed by Secretary John Young, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

WHAT COLOR IS SUPERB?

A question of fact has arisen over the action of the judges regarding Carnation Superb at the Chicago show. In The Review's report of the show it was stated that the Thompson Carnation Co., the exhibitor, had protested because Superb was disqualified when entered as a flesh pink, as being too dark. N. P. Miller, secretary of the show committee, came back with a letter in which he quoted the judges as saying the variety scored too low to get into the awards. Now Charles M. Fish, manager for the exhibiting corporation, says:

"We notice in The Review of November 25 a statement by Mr. Miller, concerning our carnation, Superb, and the ruling of the judges at the Chicago Grand Floral Festival.

"We wish to state that Superb was ruled out by the judges at the Chicago show on account of its color, and for no other reason, as it was said to be too deep a pink to go in the flesh pink class. This statement was made to our superintendent, Mr. Peterson, by Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Hess, two of the judges, and up to 7 o'clock in the evening no action had been taken by the judges on our protest against the ruling out of Superb from the flesh pink class on account of color.

"We have never yet made any complaint or protest for not receiving prizes at flower shows and the only reason we protested on this occasion was that we wanted a ruling on the classification of color on Superb so we would know in what class to enter it at future exhibitions. If the committee will publish the protest we made it will be easily understood why we made it. It was for no other reason than disqualification for color.

"By publishing the above you will right the wrong impression that has been given in Mr. Miller's statement in your publication of November 25."

CARNATION PHILADELPHIA.

I am forwarding to you a sample of my Philadelphia carnation plants. They were planted about the end of August. The soil I have is a sandy loam. The plants seem to be growing too slowly. Please tell me what can be done. I am also sending you a sample of the soil.

A. A.—Ill.

Your Philadelphia carnations are probably coming along at their natural gait. We find that this variety, unless planted quite late, will not come into crop as early as most varieties. Strange as it may seem, early planting does not affect it in the same way as other sorts. The only beds I have seen come into crop early in the fall were planted late in September. We consider it just as well to have it come into crop about December 1, because the blooms seem to have poor texture up to that time. During the winter, however, there seems to be no complaint along that line and the color is certainly fine. We top back any stray shoots that start up during August and September, in order to throw the crop into December and later.

Those light spots are caused by the disease known as stigmonose, which can be eliminated only through selection of the cuttings. This variety seems to be more susceptible to the disease than most other varieties are. A. F. J. B.

BUD-ROT AND BRANCH-ROT.

I am sending you by mail some dead and dying branches from my carnation plants. On some of the plants from one to four branches die. In most cases the bud seems to rot and then the whole branch dries up, but a few of the branches dry up all over at the same time, without the rot in the bud. If you can inform me what the disease is, and the remedy, I shall greatly appreciate the favor.

G. L. B. & C.—Va.

You have two separate and distinct diseases to contend with. The decaying of the buds is what is known as bud-rot. This is due to a tiny mite, which gets into the bud and causes the petals to stick, thus preventing them from developing and causing them to rot. Continuous spraying with one of the nicotine preparations will destroy the pest. Keep these decayed buds picked off and burn them.

The other damage is caused by the disease commonly known as branch-rot. It differs from the better known stem-rot in that it does not attack in the same manner. Neither is it a wet form of decay, but is known as a dry rot. Almost any fungicide may be used to combat this disease; our favorite remedy is Bordeaux mixture. Get it right into the heart of the plant, as that is where the disease harbors and attacks. Bordeaux can be used as often as once each week until the disease is under control, without injury to the plants.

Give plenty of ventilation at every opportunity. Paint a heating pipe in each house with one-half lime and one-half flowers of sulphur, mixed with water to make a thick liquid.

A. F. J. B.

WITHERED LEAVES AND BUDS.

Enclosed you will find a few samples of Pocahontas carnations. The leaves at first become dry at the ends and finally wither entirely. Some of the buds are like the one I am sending you. I have the same trouble with the leaves remedy for this disease, as has been frequently stated in these columns. The only escape from this trouble, as far as is known at present, is elimination at the time the cuttings for propagation are selected.

It is nothing unusual to see a few buds blasted in the fall, especially if the plants were benched late or if they suffered a good deal at the time. It will probably disappear in due time, if normal culture is given.

A. F. J. B.

SPIDER AND SPOTTED FOLIAGE.

Enclosed you will find some foliage of Champion carnations. The foliage has been coloring from the tips down to the stem. Will you kindly inform me what the trouble is? Will you tell me, also, what is the best way to get rid of red spider?

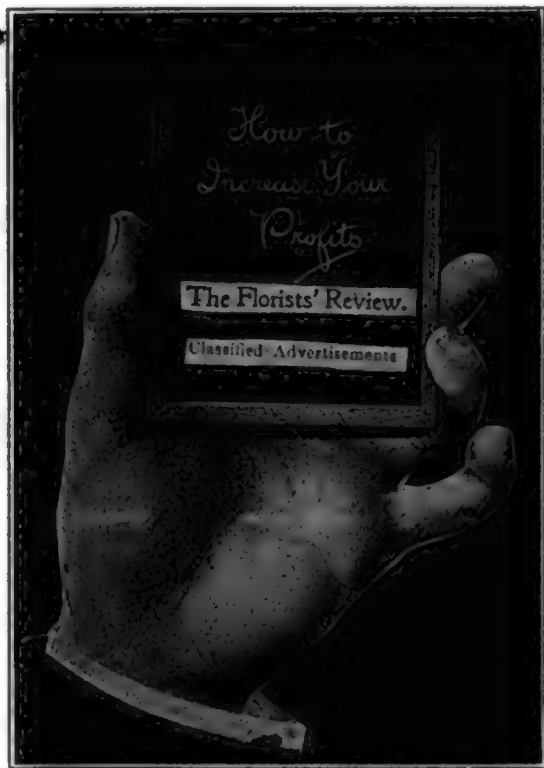

J. G. L.—Minn.

The leaves submitted were so badly dried up that it was impossible to tell much about them. They looked merely like dead leaves, although one leaf showed what looked like a single leaf-spot. If these round spots are what is troubling your carnations, I can suggest a remedy. Get some Bordeaux mixture. You can procure it in a paste state or you can get a recipe and make it yourself. Spray the plants thoroughly with it, after having picked off all the leaves that show any of these spots. Paint one of the heating pipes with a mixture of one-half sulphur and one-half lime, and enough water to make a thick paint. Give plenty of ventilation and water moderately until you have the disease under control.

For the red spider get an Evans salt sprayer and use it according to directions. By using it once every week or ten days, you can keep your plants free from spider.

of Philadelphia carnations. Can you suggest a remedy for this?

E. L.—Mass.

The discoloration of the leaves on your Pocahontas is caused by the disease known as stigmonose. Many growers are misled by the color of the spots, which is a purplish brown in most of the crimson and scarlet varieties, instead of the lighter brown as in the light-colored sorts. There is no

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

EDUCATING THE PUBLIC.

According to all the accepted standards, the value of a flower show is measured by the number of people it interests, so the South Dakota State College at Brookings must be doing good work for the trade.

Fully 10,000 people visited the recent eighth annual chrysanthemum show, in the three houses 41x115 feet, where an unusually attractive display of more than 7,000 plants had been arranged by the college florist, F. C. Stoltenberg, a display comprising 340 varieties and over 40,000 blooms.

The State College chrysanthemum show is becoming an important educational feature in eastern South Dakota. On one day more than 300 auto loads of visitors came from a radius of sixty miles to see the display. During the evenings of the 10-day exhibit, music was supplied by the college orchestra and members of the music faculty. Many visitors who had attended similar displays in the east stated that Mr. Stoltenberg's decorations were as good as they ever had seen.

STEMS CRACKED UNDER BUDS.

What causes chrysanthemum buds to crack in the neck, just before opening into full flower? E. F. E.—N. J.

The cause of stems cracking under the bud, before flowering, has been many times discussed in these columns. This, of course, only happens in the case of strong-growing varieties, such as Wm. Duckham and Wm. Turner. When the plant is growing vigorously and receives a heavy dose of fertilizer, the roots start working and push the sap up more quickly than the bud can assimilate it. Nature then steps in and checks the flow of sap to the bud by snapping off part of the stem at the neck. Where this snapping off is noted, it is a danger signal, showing that the plant is getting more feed than it can take up. It does not necessarily follow that the flower will not finish because the bud is snapped, as I have seen flowers finish perfectly though only hanging by a shred.

A GOOD COMMERCIAL WHITE.

We desire a good white commercial mum for next season, one that is a good keeper and showy. We shall appreciate any information you can give us on this subject, as we wish to add to the whites we are now growing. We are growing William Turner and Mrs. Robinson and a few Western King, but would like to add a few more. We do not want Chadwick or White Eaton, but would like to know about the White Bonnaffon. Is it as good as the Yellow Bonnaffon? We have never seen White Bonnaffon growing, and would appreciate any information you can give us in regard to varieties and when to take the bud on each. R. & S. G.—Mont.

Try White Chieftain instead of White Bonnaffon. It has been a more or less general experience that the white sport of Bonnaffon is not so good as the original variety, although it can not be said that all growers find Bonnaffon an easy doer. Chieftain, pink, and White Chieftain, a sport, are mid-season varieties, coming just a bit ahead of Bonnaffon, and have the Bonnaffon form and substance. White Chieftain comes pure white on the second crown bud.

DATE OF FLOWERING.

Please state the average height of these chrysanthemums: Oconto, Unaka, Chrysolora and Early Frost. How early can these be flowered, and what are the right dates for taking the buds? E. F. E.—N. J.

The chrysanthemums mentioned will grow to a height of two to four feet, depending a good deal on when they were propagated. With us they average about three feet and come into flower the first week in October, if we take the buds that show early in August. Chas. H. Totty.

SOME OF THE NEW MUMS.

At the fall flower shows, beginning at Madison and concluding at Cleveland, C. H. Totty exhibited a number of new things in chrysanthemums, some of which are illustrated on page 21.

First in order of interest Mr. Totty considers a yellow sport of Wm. Turner; next a yellow sport of Mrs. Gilbert Drabble. This is a good shade of yellow and likely to be grown extensively by exhibitors who grow the parent successfully. It has been given the name William Rigby and Mr. Totty thinks it will prove an ideal exhibition flower, as the color is good and the fact that it was awarded first for the largest flower in the show at Cleveland, where quality was the distinguishing feature, will give an idea of its size. As for the foliage, anyone who has grown Mrs. Drabble knows the wonderful foliage of that variety.

Another variety that is of large size is Mrs. J. Gibson, the prevailing color of which is a light shade of pink, which deepens towards the edge of the petals. This is larger than any pink ever distributed and when it comes out will be likely to appear in all exhibition sets.

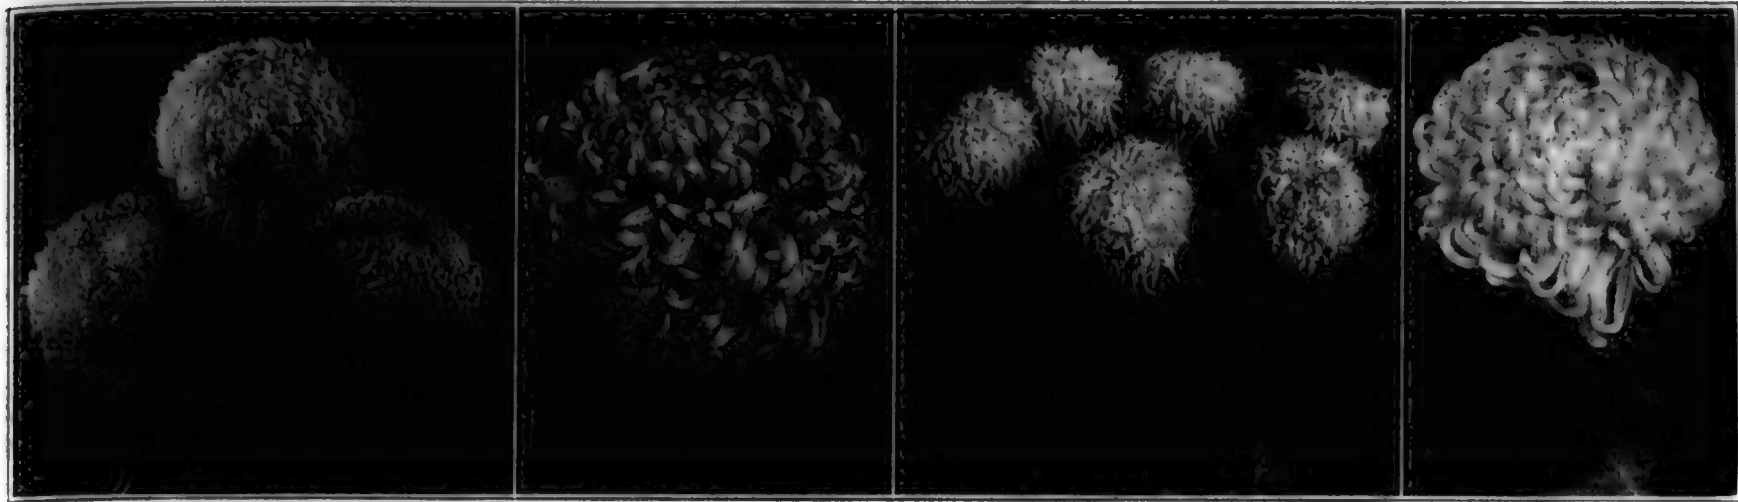

Morris Kinney is an incurved flower of pure white. It is as large as Wm. Turner and even on the earliest buds is without the topknot which so often makes Turner objectionable from the finished bloom standpoint on the exhibition table. Kinney is said to be an easy doer and the stem is as rigid as in the old Golden Wedding, which for years has set the standard for stiff-stemmed varieties.

For commercial use Autocrat has been certificated by the C. S. A. It is an English seedling, sent over by Lowe & Shawyer, and is one of their best late bloomers. It is in the place on the lists where most growers now have only Jeanne Nonin. The shape is good and the foliage medium in size, which permits of rather close planting. By planting this variety late, Mr. Totty says it can be brought in for Thanksgiving or Christmas, as desired.

Pompons and singles occupied an unusually conspicuous place this year. In Mr. Totty's new set the pompon Nippon is described as a handsome grower, forming fine pot plants without pinching. The color is a delicate flesh, with yellow center, which fades as the flower gets older. Among the many excellent singles is Mrs. E. H. Wells, the color of which is a creamy lavender. Richard Delafield is a stiff-stemmed flower, the color terra-cotta, shading to scarlet, almost startling in its brilliancy. Another promising variety is Mrs. John A. Stuart, Jr., bronze, with a yellow zone around the center disk. Isabel Felton was classed in Europe as the finest single. It is bright yellow.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

F. L. White, store manager of the Mills Co., Jacksonville, Fla., says the fall opening last year was such a big success they then planned to repeat the occasion this year during Thanksgiving week, because of the lateness of chrysanthemums. In conjunction with the leading local paper, Mr. White created interest in that important event. The Mills Co. was a heavy loser of stock through the recent rain storms. At this time of writing, Jacksonville is aglow with bougainvillea, hibiscus, plumbago, hardy passifloras, etc., against backgrounds of Cocos australis, Phoenix Canariensis and Latania Borbonica.

A. C. Oelschig & Sons, Savannah, Ga., pioneers in the rubber cutting business, still find a good demand for ficus. Mr. Oelschig has undergone an operation successfully and will soon be around as usual.

A. W. Richardson, of Savannah, who is proud of his carnations, remarked that there was not a straw growth to be seen, which conveys an idea of the vigor of his carnations. Chrysanthemums are grown with an eye to quality rather than quantity. Radiance is the favorite rose.

John Wolf, of Savannah, speaks highly of Radiance. The conditions seemed to be ideal for this rose. Mr. Wolf says that he conducted a continuous show until Thanksgiving, stock being in first-class condition. The matter of azaleas is a puzzle. Rumors of shipments, without anything positive, at this late date, mean considerable risk.

Robert Lockerbie, grower for the Scholtz Co., of Charlotte, N. C., called my attention to two beds of Enchantress carnations, one bed being in soil two years old and the other bed in soil three years in use. It was impossible to see any difference in the plants and both beds were in prime condition. A house of roses, five years planted, will be replanted with Radiance or Russell. Chrysanthemums were fine, but there are not enough high-grade blooms to meet the demand; last season it was vice versa. A fine crop of Eaton was in sight, to sell at $5 per dozen. Nephrolepis Smithii is doing splendidly and is a good seller. This fern requires care in watering. The store has been re-decorated in white enamel and equipped with full-length mirrors.

Charles A. Moss, Spartanburg, S. C., remarked that when two of his men, who held responsible positions, left at a critical moment, it reminded him of the story of the teacher who, during the question period at school, noticed one little boy deep in thought and asked him to give an interrogatory sentence. The boy, with a grave face, recited: "If you was in a soft mud heap up to your neck and I was to throw a brick at your head, would you duck?" Mr. Moss did not duck, but with true Spartan spirit rose to the occasion, with the result that his stock was never in better shape.

Howard Gardner, proprietor of the Summit Avenue Greenhouses, Greensboro, N. C., is of the opinion that his mums have not received the proper medicine, as they were not up to the usual high mark, although a batch of William Turners were top-notchers.

G. M. Edwards, superintendent of the Von Lindley greenhouses, Greensboro, says that the placing of evergreens outside the principal stores has not only added to the beauty of the town, but also created much outside business. Among the good things supplied the store is Hadley rose, of fine quality, and in excellent demand, according to Store Manager Edgar Sutton, who also pays high tribute to the F. T. D. as a means of extending the shipping trade.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Spiræas, or Astilbes.

Spiræas, or astilbes, are now due. On their arrival, soak the clumps well in a tub of water and leave them in a frame so that they can have one or two moderate freezings before being potted. The old S. Japonica is now but little grown, being largely displaced by such varieties as Gladstone, compacta and astilboides. Do not forget the beautiful pink variety, Queen Alexandra, and that equally fine sort, Peach Blossom. These will not force as early as the white varieties, but they are fine in the spring. The cut sprays realize double the price of the white ones for Memorial day.

Lily of the Valley.

Pots of valley are readily salable at the holidays. It does not seem probable at this time that there will be any special scarcity of pips the coming season, as Denmark seems to have suddenly acquired a tremendous crop of them. Though many of these perhaps were not grown in that country and may be subject to seizure, yet there seems to be no likelihood of any shortage the coming winter. Use 6-inch pots for the pips, placing eighteen to twenty in each pot. Distribute the pips as evenly as possible, leaving the points showing above the soil, which should be fine and preferably sandy in nature. See that the soil is well shaken and pressed among the pips. Cold storage valley needs but little bottom heat, and if allowed a month from the time of potting will be in nice condition for Christmas. The plants must be kept in the dark until the stalks are well drawn up; then they should be gradually exposed to the light. If given a somewhat lower temperature when open they will keep better.

Schizanthus.

Schizanthus has jumped wonderfully into favor since the advent of S. Wisetonensis. It can be flowered from February until May, but is at its best in March and the first half of April. From an early batch sown late in August plants are now in 4-inch pots and ready for a shift. There is still ample time to sow a batch of seeds. These germinate quickly, and when of sufficient size should be pricked off into flats; later pot off singly. Always grow them in a cool and airy house, as they are impatient of heat and are soon spoiled in a warm house. Schizanthus is a strong feeder and should have a rich soil, abundant supplies of water and plenty of feeding.

A Winter Supply of Loam.

We now may expect winter soon, and it behooves every owner of greenhouses to lay an adequate supply of loam, sand, leaf-mold and well decayed manure under cover at once. Never mind if there is merely a roof over the compost; that will be vastly better than having to dig it out of a bank of frost and snow a little later. We never have quite all the outdoor operations completed before winter sets in, but we should plan to have the soil supply under cover and convenient of access. Doing this work now will save considerable hard, disagreeable work later.

Plow Vacant Land Now.

Probably the land on which asters, sweet peas, carnations and other crops have been growing is now bare. In such a case it is good policy to plow the ground deeply in the fall and leave it rough over winter. If some barnyard manure can be turned in, all the better. This plowing mellows the soil and kills lots of soil pests. In the spring such land, when well harrowed, will be in fine shape for early planting. Where vacant ground was seeded down with winter rye it is better to defer the plowing until spring. Far too much plowing is usually left until spring. Get as much as possible of this work done now and ease the strain at the rush season.

SUPPORTS FOR FREESIAS.

I wish you would tell me how to support freesias. So far as we have been able to discover, small branches of Berberis Thunbergii are the best means of support, but these are not entirely satisfactory. If there is a better way, we should like to know of it.

J. R.—Pa.

Birch or wild cherry twigs stuck among the growths make a better support than berberis. If you want fancy stalks, a light stake should be tied to each growth. Another plan is to use four or five stakes around the outsides of the pans, or a larger number where flats are used, and a few others inside, running green twine or raffia from stake to stake. Still another plan, and one which holds up the plants surprisingly well, is to cut pieces of ordinary chicken wire netting to the shape of the flats or pans, lay these over the plants while they are small, and as they grow raise the netting by attaching it to a few stakes around the sides of the receptacles. Continue to raise the netting as the plants grow; it will hold them quite erect. Cut away the netting when you wish to cut your crop.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

MUMS IN THE SOUTH.

Care of the Stock Plants.

The season for chrysanthemums in the south is now over and there remains only the care of the stock from which to get good, strong cuttings in the spring. Many growers in the south practice the plan of setting out enough plants of each variety in a frame or bed, outside at planting time, and these plants, so grown, give the finest kind of cuttings. Plants grown in this way, and not disturbed, need no protection in winter, even in the coldest sections of the south. Where this plan is not practiced, enough stock plants of each variety can be replanted, after the flowers are cut, in fresh soil on a table or solid bed in a cool house, or in a coldframe outside. In the latter case, in the colder sections, sash protection is necessary in freezing weather; otherwise a good many of the plants would be winter-killed.

The season has been quite favorable for chrysanthemums, though the absence of an early frost brought out a great many in private gardens in good shape and this interfered considerably with the sale of the greenhouse stock.

The best all-round seller with us this season was White Bonnafon. This variety also made the best average flowers. We grew three flowers to each plant, in a space 8x10 inches, and none of the flowers of this variety retailed for less than $3 per dozen; a good many reached $4 and $5 per dozen.

Closely following this as money-makers are Virginia Poehlmann, Major Bonnafon, Golden Wedding, T. Eaton, Lynnwood Hall, Ramapo, Pres. Roosevelt and Silver Wedding.

An Annual Problem.

The taking of the bud is an annual problem with many. Below is a list of the varieties we grow, showing when the first bud was taken on each and the date of cutting the first flower. It is hoped that the table may serve partly as a guide to some growers for next season. Of course, all the buds on any one variety were not taken on the date mentioned, as the operation extended over from seven to ten days, but all the buds developed into satisfactory flowers. The fact that there were no bullheads among them shows that the bud was not taken too early.

SCALE ON NEPHROLEPIS.

We notice that W. H. T., in The Review of September 9, recommends a solution of fish oil soap with nicotine extract for scale on nephrolepis. His directions are as follows: "If the plants are in pots, the best treatment would be to dip them in a solution of one ounce of fish oil soap and one teaspoonful of nicotine, forty per cent solution, to one gallon of water, repeating the dose at intervals of one week for a time. If the ferns are planted out, they could be sprayed with the same solution. After dipping, the plants should be laid down to prevent the drip from draining into the soil. As this pest is a persistent one, several treatments may be needed to overcome it."

Now, we have some scale on Boston and Roosevelt ferns and wish to treat them effectively, but our druggists know nothing of fish oil soap and so we are at a loss to know where to get it. Will you please tell us where it can be purchased, and also state whether any other remedy can be used? We have the nicotine extract and can get whale oil soap here. Could we use it instead of fish oil soap?

Do any of the manufacturers of insecticides make a preparation suitable for such use? We generally have great difficulty in securing any of the newer ingredients, as mentioned in formulas, from our local druggists, and we do not know the name of any firm that can supply us. For instance, we had to give our druggist a week's notice when we wanted some cyanide of potassium and then we did not get what we ordered, and we could not get potassium sulphide at all. Y. P. C.—Mo.

The whale oil soap is the proper soap to use for such a purpose, but from the fact that practically all the so-called whale oil soap now in the market is manufactured from fish oil, the more correct expression, "fish oil soap," was used in the article referred to.

The nicotine may be had in the forty per cent solution from any of the larger dealers in horticultural supplies. The difficulty in getting cyanide of potassium is due to the European war, as Germany has been the chief source of supply, but cyanide of sodium is equally efficient for fumigating and is now manufactured in quantity in this country. W. H. T.

FIGHTING FERN SCALE.

We are sending you under separate cover a few leaves of our ferns, which are diseased. We would be pleased if you could tell us the trouble. We have sprayed them with nicotine.

W. E. P.—Okla.

The ferns in question are badly infested with the white fern scale, an insect that is not easy to overcome.

Cut off the worst fronds and burn them, then dip the plants in a 1 to 300 solution of nicotine, after adding one-half ounce of fish oil soap to each gallon of the solution. Repeat the dip two or three times, at intervals of one week, always protecting the plants from the sunshine for at least twenty-four hours after they have been dipped.

W. H. T.

HE DIVIDED OLD NEPHROLEPIS.

I am sending you fronds of a deceased fern, which was one of many that died in the tubs. Please diagnose the trouble for me. We have to use deep well water. Would that cause death to the ferns? As the plants had been in the tubs for about three years,

I divided each of them and repotted in fern pots. This may have some bearing on the case. C. M. H.—Tenn.

The condition of the specimens enclosed with this query would indicate that the old central crowns of this nephrolepis had been potted after they were divided, with the result that these crowns did not start growth readily.

Young plants from 4-inch pots would make more satisfactory stock and by potting two or three of them together in a 7-inch or 8-inch fern pot, one may have good plants in a short time. The division of old plants of nephrolepis is not a practicable method of propagation. W. H. T.

Duluth, Minn.—More than 5,000 rose plants in the J. J. Le Borious greenhouses recently were asphyxiated by gas escaping from a defective main underneath the houses. Mr. Le Borious has filed a complaint against the city in which he asks $8,240 damages.

News from Abroad

Ghent, Belgium.—It is stated that Count Joseph de Hemptinne, widely known as an orchid grower and as one of the managers of the 1913 quinquennial show here, has been executed by the German military government. The charge against him is not named.

Paris, France.—A comparative test of rose novelties will take place in the park at Bagatelle, in 1916-17 as in former years. Plants should, as far as possible, have been raised in pots, and at least five specimens must be sent to the committee before April 15. The new plants will be put in the ground in the public rosary as soon as they reach Bagatelle. They will remain there until October of the second year, so that the jury may be able to study them during two seasons. A similar exhibition has been held at Bagatelle every year since 1907. Gold medals are awarded for the most meritorious novelties.

Hillegom, Holland.—Over the signature of W. Warnaar, chairman, the Dutch Bulb Exporters' Association has promulgated resolutions adopted at its meeting November 4, expressing "indignation at the utterances of some traders and growers in their catalogues, price lists and advertisements in Dutch and foreign papers, giving misleading impressions of the state of the bulb trade—serious as it may be at present—and making this a ground for undignified appeals to the kindness of the public. Considering this to be injurious to the interests of all and to the reputation of the Dutch bulb trade, the association expresses its strongest disapproval of the same."

Saffron Walden, England.—C. Engelmann, who is well known as a specialist in American carnations, says the shortage of capable labor, many of his men having gone to the war, will materially curtail propagation this season.

Southampton, England.—Toogood & Sons, who do a large export trade, say the uncertainties of the present season make it extremely difficult to ship perishable stock and that the business of exporting houses is seriously affected.

London, England.—The new British postal law bars seeds from distribution through the so-called sample post and it is feared will work great hardship on the trade. The Horticultural Trades Association and leading seedsmen have worked hard to obtain the concession, now denied.

Hillegom, Holland.—Certain of the growers who are not exporters have united under the managing directorship of C. Reim to dispose of their surplus of bulbs and roots. In their announcement they say: "In August, 1914, at the time when the great war started, nearly everyone of us was lucky enough to have sold the greatest part of their bulbs to the large exporters, who always used to send our bulbs to England, America, Russia, France, Germany, etc., but this season it was not so easy to sell out again, because every one of our old buyers would not take half the quantity of hyacinths, late flowering tulips, narcissus, crocus, etc., which they did before, and therefore we are still overloaded and we have now united ourselves, to offer our enormous stocks."

August Gontram.

The news of the sudden death of August Gontram, of Holmesburg, Pa., was received with deep sadness in Philadelphia. Mr. Gontram was in the prime of life, and in full vigor of health until ten days ago, when pleuropneumonia attacked him. He died November 28.

Mr. Gontram was a native of Alsace-Lorraine. He came to this country when a young man and soon accepted the position of gardener at the Catholic convent near Holmesburg. There he grew fine plants, flowers and vegetables for many years. Mr. Gontram embarked in business as a commercial

Otto Stumpp, of West Hoboken, N. J., whose death took place recently, in his sixty-ninth year, was a well-known figure in the seed trade of New York and its vicinity. Up to September 20, 1915, for thirty-two years, Mr. Stumpp had been with Peter Henderson & Co., as their selling agent at 88 Gansevoort street. Since that time Mr. Stumpp had been in business with his son, Otto J. S. Stumpp, at the same location. The son will continue the business in his own name.

W. Atlee Burpee.

W. Atlee Burpee, founder of the famous house that bears his name, died Friday, November 26, after a long illness, at his home, Fordhook, near Doylestown, Pa.

Mr. Burpee was 57 years of age. He was for years one of the leading figures in the American and in the international seed world. His rise to the high position he held was in part due to his keen appreciation of merit in plants; he was able to select the best types of vegetables and flowers almost at a glance and persistently strove to improve them. He was far-seeing in all his business arrangements and never attached his name to anything that was not the best of its kind. But most of all Mr. Burpee owed his success to his wonderful facility of description; he described vegetables and flowers so that the reader could see them while reading and, so seeing, wanted them. The descriptions were never overdrawn, never untrue; they were perfect. It is said that Mr. Burpee wrote his entire Annual—it frequently took him six months—year after year.

So much for the cause of Mr. Burpee's eminence in the seed world. Among men Mr. Burpee won hosts of friends. He was big-hearted, sympathetic and easy of approach. Strangers who came to him for the first time felt at home at once in his presence. The messenger boy who was in trouble received counsel and comfort, while important matters were put aside for the moment. That was W. Atlee Burpee. Do you wonder that he had friends everywhere?

W. Atlee Burpee was born at Sheffield, in the province of New Brunswick, Canada, April 5, 1858. His parents brought him to Philadelphia when a child and educated him at the Friends' school and at the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Burpee preferred business to medicine, leaving college at the end of his second year to raise chickens and fancy stock in an experimental way. He founded the firm of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. in 1878, at 221 Church street, Philadelphia. There he dealt in seeds. His farm was on Long Island, where an expert grew many of the seeds he sold. It took hard work and was pretty slow at first, but Mr. Burpee stuck at it and things steadily improved. When his seed-growing arrangement on Long Island ended, he looked about for a seed farm of his own. The late E. D. Darlington, who had joined Mr. Burpee, interested him in the country near Doylestown and in 1888 a farm of 125 acres was purchased. It was named Fordhook. The year prior to this, January 10, 1887, Howard M. Earl came to Mr. Burpee and has remained with him ever since, rising to the most important position with him. Mr. Darlington was made manager at Fordhook and Mr. Earl, who moved out to the farm, was manager of the newly acquired building at 475 North Fifth street, Philadelphia. The present Burpee building was built on this location in 1898 and it was increased in 1911 to three times its original size.

types of vegetables than any other man in America, Mr. Burpee is, perhaps, best known to the seed world through his development of the sweet pea. It came about in this way. The Rev. W. T. Hutchins, an enthusiastic amateur grower of and writer on sweet peas residing at Indian Head, Mass., interested Mr. Burpee in his hobby. That was in 1892. Mr. Burpee admired the sweet pea, saw its possibilities and went to work. The grandiflora type then led. Selection and hybridizing were diligently followed. Meanwhile Mr. Hutchins wrote about sweet peas and interested people in them. Then Mr. Burpee went out to California, saw the wonderful possibilities of the country and its climate and interested the great seed house of C. C. Morse & Co. in the work. Lester L. Morse gave the improvement of the sweet pea his personal attention for years. The Cupids followed; then the bush varieties; then the Spencers. People became interested as the types improved and Mr. Burpee's rise was rapid. In 1899 Mr. Burpee arranged that his friend, Mr. Hutchins, should go to the bicentennial of the sweet pea held in England to commemorate the bringing of the first sweet pea seed to England from Italy. In 1900 Mr. Burpee arranged with his competitor, Henry Eckford, of England, with whom he was on the most friendly terms, that all the Eckford sweet pea novelties should be sent out simultaneously in England and in America. The vegetable seed growing farm at Swedesboro, N. J., was added and then, in 1909, the sweet pea growing farm called Floradale, in the Lompoc valley, California, where the late Edwin Lonsdale was manager. The fame of the Floradale sweet peas was such that before the war great quantities of the seed were exported, in addition to the immense quantity used in this country.

The scope of the mailing seed business of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. is too well known to need description here. It is said to be the largest in the world.

Mr. Burpee was a man of many interests. He was a director of the Market Street National bank in Philadelphia, of the Northwestern Trust Co., and the Colgate Co. He was a director of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, ex-president of the American Seed Trade Association, ex-president of the American Sweet Pea Society and vice-president of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain. He was a member of the Trades League of Philadelphia, the Board of Trade, a trustee of the Howard Hospital and Sanatorium Association, and of the National Farm School. He was also president of the Canadian Society of Philadelphia and a life member of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain and the Societe Nationale Horticulture de France. He was a member of the Union League, Art, University, City, Racquet, Bachelors', Barge, and Poor Richard clubs of Philadelphia, and of the Merion Cricket Club, Country Club of Lansdowne, and National Arts and City clubs of New York city.

Mr. Burpee's funeral took place Monday afternoon, November 29, from the home at Fordhook. Interment was at Doylestown cemetery. There was a large attendance, including, besides friends of the family, over 200 employees. Among those in the trade whose presence was noted were: S. S.

Otto Stumpp.

Otto Stumpp, of West Hoboken, N. J., whose death took place recently, in his sixty-ninth year, was a well-known figure in the seed trade of New York and its vicinity. Up to September 20, 1915, for thirty-two years, Mr. Stumpp had been with Peter Henderson & Co., as their selling agent at 88 Gansevoort street. Since that time Mr. Stumpp had been in business with his son, Otto J. S. Stumpp, at the same location. The son will continue the business in his own name.

Otto Stumpp was born in Württemberg, Germany, March 9, 1846. His father and grandfather were seedsmen, and two of his brothers are in the seed business in Germany. Mr. Stumpp came to this country in September, 1865. In

W. Atlee Burpee.

W. Atlee Burpee, founder of the famous house that bears his name, died Friday, November 26, after a long illness, at his home, Fordhook, near Doylestown, Pa.

Mr. Burpee was 57 years of age. He was for years one of the leading figures in the American and in the international seed world. His rise to the high position he held was in part due to his keen appreciation of merit in plants; he was able to select the best types of vegetables and flowers almost at a glance and persistently strove to improve them. He was far-seeing in all his business arrangements and never attached his name to anything that was not the best of its kind. But most of all Mr. Burpee owed his success to his wonderful facility of description; he described vegetables and flowers so that the reader could see them while reading and, so seeing, wanted them. The descriptions were never overdrawn, never untrue; they were perfect. It is said that Mr. Burpee wrote his entire Annual—it frequently took him six months—year after year.

So much for the cause of Mr. Burpee's eminence in the seed world. Among men Mr. Burpee won hosts of friends. He was big-hearted, sympathetic and easy of approach. Strangers who came to him for the first time felt at home at once in his presence. The messenger boy who was in trouble received counsel and comfort, while important matters were put aside for the moment. That was W. Atlee Burpee. Do you wonder that he had friends everywhere?

W. Atlee Burpee was born at Sheffield, in the province of New Brunswick, Canada, April 5, 1858. His parents brought him to Philadelphia when a child and educated him at the Friends' school and at the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Burpee preferred business to medicine, leaving college at the end of his second year to raise chickens and fancy stock in an experimental way. He founded the firm of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. in 1878, at 221 Church street, Philadelphia. There he dealt in seeds. His farm was on Long Island, where an expert grew many of the seeds he sold. It took hard work and was pretty slow at first, but Mr. Burpee stuck at it and things steadily improved. When his seed-growing arrangement on Long Island ended, he looked about for a seed farm of his own. The late E. D. Darlington, who had joined Mr. Burpee, interested him in the country near Doylestown and in 1888 a farm of 125 acres was purchased. It was named Fordhook. The year prior to this, January 10, 1887, Howard M. Earl came to Mr. Burpee and has remained with him ever since, rising to the most important position with him. Mr. Darlington was made manager at Fordhook and Mr. Earl, who moved out to the farm, was manager of the newly acquired building at 477 North Fifth street, Philadelphia. The present Burpee building was built on this location in 1898 and it was increased in 1911 to three times its original size.

Although he is said to have introduced more new varieties and improved types of vegetables than any other man in America, Mr. Burpee is, perhaps, best known to the seed world through his development of the sweet pea. It came about in this way. The Rev. W. F. Hutchins, an enthusiastic amateur grower of and writer on sweet peas residing at Indian Head, Mass., interested Mr. Burpee in his hobby. That was in 1892. Mr. Burpee admired the sweet pea, saw its possibilities and went to work. The grandiflora type then led. Selection and hybridizing were diligently followed. Meanwhile Mr. Hutchins wrote about sweet peas and interested people in them. Then Mr. Burpee went out to California, saw the wonderful possibilities of the country and its climate and interested the great seed house of C. C. Morse & Co. in the work. Lester L. Morse gave the improvement of the sweet pea his personal attention for years. The Cupids followed; then the bush varieties; then the Spencers. People became interested as the types improved and Mr. Burpee's rise was rapid. In 1899 Mr. Burpee arranged that his friend, Mr. Hutchins, should go to the bicentennial of the sweet pea held in England to commemorate the bringing of the first sweet pea seed to England from Italy. In 1900 Mr. Burpee arranged with his competitor, Henry Eckford, of England, with whom he was on the most friendly terms, that all the Eckford sweet pea novelties should be sent out simultaneously in England and in America. The vegetable seed growing farm at Swedesboro, N. J., was added and then, in 1909, the sweet pea growing farm called Floradale, in the Lompoc valley, California, where the late Edwin Lonsdale was manager. The fame of the Floradale sweet peas was such that before the war great quantities of the best were exported, in addition to the immense quantity used in this country.

The scope of the mailing seed business of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. is too well known to need description here. It is said to be the largest in the world.

Mr. Burpee was a man of many interests. He was a director of the Market Street National bank in Philadelphia, of the Northwestern Trust Co., and the Colgate Co. He was a director of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, a president of the American Seed Trade Association, ex-president of the American Sweet Pea Society and vice-president of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain. He was a member of the Trades League of Philadelphia, the Board of Trade, a trustee of the Howard Hospital and Sanatorium Association, and of the National Farm School. He was also president of the Canadian Society of Philadelphia and a life member of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain and the Société Nationale Horticulture de France. He was a member of the Union of Art, University, City, Racquet, Clubs, Barge, and Poor Richard of Philadelphia, and of the Union Cricket Club, Country Club of New York, and National Arts and City of New York city.

Mr. Burpee's funeral took place Friday afternoon, November 29, from home at Fordhook. Interment was at Doylestown cemetery. There was a large attendance, including, besides members of the family, over 200 employees. Among those in the trade whose presence was noted were: S. S.

W. Atlee Burpee and Family at Fordhook.

Mr. Burpee is survived by his widow, whom as Miss Blanche Simons he married in 1892, and by their sons, David and W. Atlee, Jr. The business of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. will be continued by the sons, who have been active associates of their father since the end of their school days, in preparation for the great responsibility now put upon them. The seed trade and allied interests at Chicago held a meeting at Hotel Sherman November 29 and adopted resolutions on the death of Mr. Burpee, and similar action was taken at the meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League at New York November 30.

The Review brings results.

THE prospect is that there will be more blooming plants this Christmas than in any previous year.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

Good holly will be scarce this season. According to a florist at Laurel, Del., who also deals in greens, the summer drought is responsible, as it caused the berries to fall off while still green.

WHILE a few lots of azaleas still are missing, on the whole the importations have arrived safely and all danger of a scarcity is passed. Indeed, the opposite condition now confronts the trade, as Easter is so late much the greater part of the azaleas will have to be disposed of without the assistance of any special demand.

EXCEPT for special purposes, the public prefers colored flowers and naturally yellow chrysanthemums have the preference over white; but pink would sell as well if good, clear, bright colors were offered. There was a large increase in the supply of pink mums this season, due to the advent of such a promising sort as Chieftain, but in many cases the color was not all it should have been and, also, the trade was not sufficiently well informed as to the increased supply in this color, so that sale was slower than it should have been.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

How can business be otherwise than good when new high records in the foreign trade of the United States continue to pile up the greatest favorable trade balance the country has ever known? The movement of merchandise and gold shown in figures made public this week by the Department of Commerce discloses how decidedly the United States has been converted from a debtor to a creditor nation.

During the twelve months ending with October, the foreign trade exceeded $5,000,000,000. Imports were $1,691,748,013 and exports $3,318,634,636 as compared with imports $1,880,414,501 and exports of $2,140,847,829 during the twelve months previous.

During the twelve months ending with October, $326,528,779 in gold came to the United States to pay the debts of other nations.

How can the flower business be otherwise than good this season?

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW.

In recognition of the public interest attaching to New York's big flower show, to be held April 5 to 12, 1916, the park department, through Commissioner Cabot Ward, has communicated to Secretary John Young its intention of staging an exhibit at the forthcoming show which shall at least equal the magnificent display made at last spring's show. It goes without saying that Superintendent J. H. Beatty will seek to eclipse his former staging by making the "people's exhibit" one of the most noteworthy in the exhibition.

Space in the trade section is being taken up readily and this section of the show bids fair to be larger than in former years. The following have made reservation for space:

Max Schling, New York.
Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.
Bon Arbor Chemical Co., Paterson, N. J.

The preliminary schedule should convey the idea that the management is making a feature of displays. The rose garden display will be most notable in the classes looking to the artistic end of the show. Considerable interest also attaches to the rock garden class. During the fall planting season, growers intending to compete in this class were busy over the problem of what to grow, and it is safe to say that we shall see many plants strange to American flower shows.

What was perhaps the most interesting feature of the last show, the table decoration class for hotels only, will be given similar prominence in the forthcoming show. Judging from the interest taken in this class, the stagings will be much more magnificent in their appointments than at the last show.

It is to be pointed out that the class calling for New Holland plants is not to be interpreted literally. The meaning is that the plants to be offered in this class are to be what are known as New Holland plants, such as tree ferns and the flora of Australasia. Why this term should continue to be customary is beyond comprehension. Australia, as a name, needs little explanation nowadays.

KLEINHANS NOT EMBARRASSED.

George W. Geiser, attorney for A. B. Kleinhans, Easton, Pa., states that there is no truth in the report which has been in circulation that a receiver has been appointed for Mr. Kleinhans and that Mr. Kleinhans has left Easton. Quite the contrary, he states, Mr. Kleinhans is still on the job, managing his own affairs and not in any way embarrassed except by the report that he is involved in matters which do not concern him. The Review is pleased to assist in correcting what Mr. Geiser brands as a wholly false report.

THE GARDENERS' CONVENTION.

Everything is in readiness for the annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners, which will be held in Boston next week, December 9 and 10.

The committee on arrangements, W. N. Craig, Duncan Finlayson and William J. Kennedy, announces that the convention will be opened in Horticultural hall promptly at 2 p. m., December 9. That day will be devoted to the disposing of the business before the convention. Friday will be given up to visiting points of horticultural interest in and around Boston. The Copley Square hotel has been selected as the headquarters of the association.

A committee of the horticultural interests of Boston and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston is planning to make the visit of the gardeners to their city a memorable one.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Taking it by and large, the Thanksgiving business was quite satisfactory. Roses, with the exception of the white varieties, were short of the demand. Russell, as a matter of course, cleared with great rapidity in all but the extra lengths. These were inclined to hang, as the demand manifested a strong tendency toward the shorter grades. Milady proved its wonderful popularity as a winter rose by clearing everywhere and leaving unsatisfied demands in every house. Richmond, with its dark, rich color and its excellent quality, made an appeal that cleared it from the tables soon after its receipt. Carnations were in oversupply and prices fell rapidly after the shipping orders had gone out. There was a shortage of yellow mums. Of pinks, also, there were not enough to go around. Whites were available in quantity. Pompons did not fare so well as many anticipated, and the closing hour November 25 found many hundreds of bunches still unsold. Neither did violets seem to be a commodity with which to conjure. Cattleyas were at a premium.

Market conditions during the week immediately following Thanksgiving have exhibited no material change. Good Beauties are a little more plentiful, but are clearing splendidly. Poor ones are difficult to move. Russell, Milady and Richmond continue to fall short of the demand, while Killarney is demonstrating its worth as the old reliable variety. For the season of the year, white roses are not selling badly, but the fact remains that they are not moving with a degree of celerity calculated to arouse enthusiasm.

Carnations seem to have overleaped themselves. Their cue is to come on heavily immediately following chrysanthemums. Chrysanthemums are still here and carnations are abundant. One or the other must suffer in consequence. The flood of carnations is a bit ahead of the demand, so they suffer.

Chrysanthemums are still here, to be sure, but in greatly reduced numbers. Their day has passed, and they cease to be an important factor in the market. Pompons have experienced some regeneration, but it is only slight. Cattleyas have a way of creating popularity and demand by absenting themselves from the market. It does not always work, but it did this time. Lilies in large numbers are on the market, and there they are likely to stay, judging from present indications. Violets are not creating any furor. Paper Whites have arrived and sell fairly well. Romans are just feeling their way. Gladioli and snapdragons may be had if desired. Mignonette is gaining favor. The supply of valley is again meeting the demand.

Plumosus and Sprenger cleared easily. Winter berries and pine branches are arriving in abundance. Boxwood is selling well. In fact, anything in the way of greens will sell now.

Mr. Pyfer's 'Patent.'

Talk about care in keeping the books of a bank; it's nothing to the painstaking exactness required in a commission-house. Once let the growers' accounts get mixed and one never hears the last of it. The usual method is to keep with each lot of stock a wood label bearing the grower's number, but it is impossible to provide a numbered label to go with each bunch of carnations from the minute of its arrival to the moment of its departure. So A. T. Pyfer "invented" a better scheme: Pyfer & Co. supply the twine with which their growers bunch their carnations. Each grower gets a different color or kind, always the same. The result is that no matter how the stock is mixed, each grower's bunches can be instantly identified; labels can not be lost or mixed.

There has been a lot of talk about the advantage a good grower would get if he could trade-mark his stock. The string does that, too. At Pyfer's place buyers frequently ask for the Enchantress with the blue string or the Winsor with the white tie!

Various Notes.

The vacant store space on the ground floor of the building located on the southeast corner of Lake street and Wabash avenue has been rented temporarily by Joseph Ziska & Sons for additional storage space. In the same building is the wholesale cut flower house of Miller & Musser. Joseph Ziska is at present negotiating for a permanent addition to their space. This has been rendered imperative by the growth of business.

Has Mrs. Russell been overtouted? Albert F. Amling says no rose ever had the steady boosting that has been given this new favorite and that if it should prove to be overdone next season The Review will be largely responsible, because it has been the chief means by which Russell has been pushed to the attention of the trade.

Having cut all his mums for Thanksgiving, Emil Buettner is filling the space with stevia and Paper Whites, to take out a crop before the houses are needed for Easter lilies.

Its annual importation of boxwoods, etc., reached the E. Wienhoeber Co., on Elm street, November 26, a month later than usual. It was exceptionally fine stock, but a few of the cases evidently had come over in too close proximity to the ship's boilers. Mr. Wienhoeber commented that the costs of transportation showed an increase of about fifty per cent over those of other years, on this shipment packing, freight, insurance, duty, etc., amounting to 195 per cent of the invoice cost of the plants.

There was a meeting of the flower show executive committee at the Morrison November 26, A. Henderson in the chair, at which bills were audited. The guarantors in due time will receive a report from Treasurer Poehlmann.

High School Association and the Tribune published an excellent portrait of her. It is merely a coincidence that the Senn school, built while he was president of the board, is one of Peter Reinberg's hobbies and that Miss McNulty is one of his highly prized assistants.

It is reported that the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., shipped nearly 700 cases of stock, principally large mums, into this market during Thanksgiving week.

At the W. J. Smyth establishment, at Thirty-first street and Michigan avenue, where the automobile traffic flows past in a never ending stream, business is said to be fair this season, but erratic, some days big and some days dead. Thanksgiving was good.

There is interest in the Chicago market regarding the whereabouts of Oscar Schwartz, formerly in business at Basic City, Va. Anyone who can give his present address is invited to correspond with F. S. Webb, 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago.

How quickly some growers decide against a variety is shown by Erne & Klingel, who say they hear of growers who already have decreed Hoosier Beauty shall go to keep company with Hadley, and that right speedily.

An automatic reminder, a strange alliance between sentiment and card index efficiency, has been devised by Oscar J. Friedman, 522 South Michigan avenue. There is no longer any excuse for a husband permitting the wedding anniversary to pass by unmarked by some token of remembrance. Victor Bergman has devised a card with blanks to be filled out with the date of the wife's birthday, date of wedding anniversary, and many more blanks for other occasions of which a man might wish to be reminded. The card is filled out and filed with the florist, who notifies the customer twenty-four hours in advance of the important date. This scheme should assist any florist to add materially to his orders.

Carnation Alice steadily gains in favor, both with buyers and growers. N. J. Wiator says it makes about the nicest plant that ever grew on the benches of Wiator Bros.

The month of November has been the largest in the history of the A. L. Randall Co., says F. M. Johnson, who says the supply department is working nights and Sundays.

When sizing up the Thanksgiving business it is not enough to say merely that it was ahead of last year, according to John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., unless it be recalled that last year's Thanksgiving was an exceptional one and relatively better than any of the other special flower days last winter.

The Richmond rose, all things considered, is the best winter red rose on the market, in the opinion of Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann. One thing greatly in its favor is the fact that it crops right for the Christmas market. Mr. Zech, who is captain of the florists' club bowling team, should be particularly fit for the contest December 9, as he will celebrate his thirty-first birthday on that date.

At Winterson's seed store J. P. Degnan says the baby Christmas tree for the table already is in demand, the trade having found it a good seller, whatever may be said of large trees.

While holiday business grows regularly, C. W. McKellar notes that the orders come later and later, thereby increasing the florist's difficulties.

A large importation of azaleas has been received by the Poehlmann Bros. Co., and Thomas Conlin, superintendent of the plant department, says he will have fully 5,000 of them in bloom for Christmas.

As vice-chairman of the Chicago Greenhouse Manufacturers' Club, Alfred Dietsch states that "it was resolved at the last meeting to disband the club, as it had fulfilled its purpose. This organization was originated with the idea of contributing $500 worth of silverware for premiums at the Chicago Grand Floral Festival November 9 to 14. It was also resolved that we meet again when the occasion arises for such a worthy cause."

One of those in the city this week buying Christmas supplies was Mrs. J. E. Lord, of Topeka, Kan.

Fred C. W. Brown, manager of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, and F. C. Bartels, the company's greenhouse superintendent, were in town this week. While their first object was to purchase large quantities of plants, cut flowers and supplies for Christmas trade, they also took the opportunity to look over the local novelties, the Belle Washburn and Aviator carnations and the Champ Weiland rose.

That you can't down a good man is proved by the presence in this city last week of James Hayes, Jr., and his wife, of Topeka, Kan. The day before Thanksgiving the store of James Hayes, Sr., was destroyed by fire. By courtesy of his fellow florists he was enabled to take care of his holiday business. Last week his son was here buying new fixtures and a large quantity of Christmas supplies.

The duty of laying in a heavy supply of Christmas stock was responsible for the presence of Charles P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., on the Chicago market last week.

Olaf Johnson, of Johnson's Greenhouses, Memphis, Tenn., has been in town, buying stock for Christmas.

D. T. Matchen, of Indiana Harbor, formerly with Peter Reinberg, comes to town quite regularly, for stock, and shows by his looks that life in the steel town agrees with him.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

The first week of "the season," from Thanksgiving until the opening day of December, has been moderately satisfactory. There were too many flowers to make it wholly satisfactory, because with such an immense number of chrysanthemums to sell there was some cutting in prices. When you come to look over the situation the number of chrysanthemums disposed of at Thanksgiving was surprising; prices were fairly satisfactory on the good stock, but poor on the low-grade stock and on the pompons. Some of the wholesalers report that chrysanthemums are well cut out, while others assure big cuts for three weeks to come. There were some surprising figures on the scarce varieties. For instance, cattleyas brought $1, a few $1.25 each, which takes your breath away, while Hadley reached 30 cents each, but little below the price of the best Beauties. Roses generally sold well, except white, but it was noticed that in the standard varieties the fancies were overabundant. Carnations were shy and reached $4 for Gorgeous and Mrs. C. W. Ward; light colors would not bring that price, nor would short or weak stems. Violets started out well, but failed to keep the pace. The price of $10 to $12 per thousand prevailed at Thanksgiving, but it receded immediately afterwards. Valley has been selling well. Sweet peas are welcome but not plentiful. Paper Whites have arrived.

The market was barer of flowers November 29 than at any time since the exciting week in mid-October, with indications of fair business ahead.

Current Events.

It is a well recognized fact among his associates in business that J. D. Eisele is always trying to push steadily ahead. No rush, no wild effort—just a steady determination to keep the Henry A. Dreer places, at Riverton, Riverview and Locust Farm, in the fore. No improvements are made without careful consideration; no plan is discarded unthinkingly. The result is that the places year by year keep abreast of the times, in equipment and in quality of product. It may be that when you see those Cocos Weddelliana houses, those ranges of Phoenix Roebelenii and those kentias, you will say: "Ahead of the times." Let that pass. What I want to speak of today is the building improvement that Mr. Eisele is carrying out at Riverton. Just three propagating houses—but the walls! Have you seen the walls? They are made of building tiles covered, inside and out, with concrete. A drier, less expensive wall than solid concrete. It is said that R. O. King himself was surprised. Practical, enterprising builder that he is, it was new to him. I have it on good authority that Joseph Heacock was so much pleased with this wall when he saw it that he plans adopting it when he next builds.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, to be held Tuesday, December 7, is to witness, so Secretary Rust informs me, the second of the great debates planned by G. C. Watson for the enlightenment and enlivenment of his fellow-members. The subject is to be: "Is it Wise for

Various Notes.

The business of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., seedsmen, 475 North Fifth street, Philadelphia, will be continued by David Burpee and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., sons of the founder, under the same name and policies.

J. Otto Thilow delivered an illustrated address before the Garden and Orchard Club November 30, in the Presser Auditorium, on "Everybody's Garden and How to Make It Beautiful."

Jack F. Neidinger was badly injured while putting a tire on his car on Broad street November 27. He was knocked down, it is believed, by joy riders, and hurt about the head and body. At last accounts he was improving at home.

The family of Beavis has been calling on some of the growers of Montgomery county. Grandfather, a grower of fame; his son, who ably aids him; his grandson, in stature the greatest of the trio.

Franklin Ely is pleased that the preliminary seed list of the Henry F. Michell Co. is out.

Samuel M. Rankin is sending splendid single violets to Stuart H. Miller.

Frank M. Ross, the clever West Philadelphia florist, says that the demand among the better class of flower buyers is excellent. The cheaper buyers, who would ordinarily use a low-priced bouquet or a boutonniere, are missing. Mr. Ross thinks business conditions better than a year ago and believes there will be further improvement.

There is talk on the street of a credit association that will aim at promptitude in money matters pertaining to flowers.

NEW YORK.The Market.

Thanksgiving week will be long and favorably remembered. If the rain had not spoiled a good Saturday, the record would have been above expectation. The holiday, for most of the retailers, was an unexpected success, the stores everywhere being closed in time for the subjugation of turkey, hardly a desirable flower being left unsold. Prices were not advanced unreasonably. The public seemed to appreciate the appropriateness of table and home decoration as never before.

Chrysanthemums and lilies were the only surpluses. The latter seldom sold above $5 per hundred. The supply was still large when the week closed. Every chrysanthemum grower seemed to have saved his largest shipment for Thanksgiving. Prices were kept to a level that appealed to buyers and decorators, leaving only a reasonable surplus for the remainder of the week and for the Sunday trade. Shipments of chrysanthemums are growing lighter daily. Another week should see them practically shelved, though there will doubtless be occasional receipts of the late varieties until after Christmas. Some grand Chadwicks, Bonnaffons, Eatons and Golden Weddings are still arriving. The selects, worth $5 per dozen, seldom sold above $3. Most of the arrivals were disposed of at $10 down per hundred. November 27 the top price was close to 12 cents. Pompons still were in evidence, the outdoor stock being abundant, no frost having visited New York and vicinity.

Few carnations sold above $3 per hundred, at which figure almost all the novelties were distributed. The demand will not become marked until the mums are gone. But the quality rapidly is approaching perfection and early in December their usual popularity will materialize. For most of the present arrivals $2 down is asked. November 27 the week's accumulations were cleaned up at $10 per thousand.

Cattleyas still are scarce and prices high. For the best, $1 per flower was the selected; 75 cents to $1 is the predicted Christmas value. This week the opening quotation is 40 cents. The best Prima Donna sold at 30 cents November 27. A thousand flowers weekly is the present supply. Of the other twenty-five varieties of roses, the novelties have been advancing, but 10 cents to 12 cents was the quotation for the best Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Hadley, Shawyer, Sunburst and Stanley. Never has there been so grand a variety of roses in the New York wholesale market. Even the short-stemmed roses command fair prices. Nothing worth while is obtainable under $2 per hundred.

Christmas already is featured in the supply houses. Holly is arriving, and even Christmas trees are here. Everything now indicates a record business in every department of the trade.

Various Notes.

Remember the final 1915 meeting of the Florists' Club December 13; election night, and the novelty exhibits, with Chairman Phil Kessler's special holiday collation.

J. J. Coan left the Growers' Cut Flower Co. November 27 and has opened a wholesale florists' store at 115 West Twenty-eighth street, an excellent location, next door to William Kessler and the Pennock-Meehan Co.

W. J. Elliott's injury proved to be more serious than first reported. He is slowly convalescing.

Frank Traendly is back in the harness after a hard fight against rheumatism.

William Hanft, salesman for Young & Nugent, has been in the hospital several weeks, suffering from rheumatism.

Adam Trepel, buyer for his brother, C. C. Trepel, entertained the stork last week, and between a new automobile and a new girl baby seems to be treading on air. Without the quartet of Trepels in the business the wholesale cut flower district would be lonesome.

E. N. Kroninger, of Allentown, Pa., one of the largest carnation growers in the east, was in this city last week. His shipments are handled by M. C. Ford.

Ed. Van Riper, formerly and for years with the Growers' Cut Flower Co., and later with Riedel & Meyer, Inc., has been appointed to the position of manager, lately vacated by J. J. Coan. "Van" has been many years in the florists' business, in all its branches, and has many friends who wish him success.

The New York Florists' Supply Co. is greatly pleased with the conveniences of its new store at 103 West Twenty-eighth street.

The Kervan Co. will begin to use its new building this week, just in time for the Christmas trade.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. has been receiving some of the largest bay trees that have ever reached New York.

A. T. Boddington will remove from West Fourteenth street to Chambers

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was all that could be desired—weather conditions, good; stock, plentiful; demand, excellent; prices, good. Business continues good, especially for flowers for wearing purposes, such as valley, violets, sweet peas and the small roses. Mums are about played out, the few coming into the market showing that they are near the end. Spencer sweet peas have made their appearance in limited quantities.

Show Exhibitors.

The following concerns had displays at the recent poultry and pet show held at the Armory:

Jacob Schulz had a choice lot of palms, ferns and other decorative stock.

The Nanz & Neuner Co. showed a fine collection of boxwoods.

Anders Rasmussen exhibited a fine lot of the cut flowers he grows for the retailers.

The Jacob Schulz Co. had a display of pedestals, pottery ware and other accessories tastefully arranged by means of cut flowers.

August R. Baumer showed a choice lot of cyclamens, begonias, ferns and other plants suitable for the holiday trade.

These exhibits were non-competitive, being staged for their advertising value only, and were principally testimonials to the popularity of George E. Schulz, of the Jacob Schulz Co., who is one of the members of the Poultry and Pet Stock Association. A. R. B.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving day trade was the main feature of last week's business and nearly everything in the cut flower line sold up well, with the possible exception of large mums. There was a good supply of mums, but, while many were sold, no large prices were realized, the smaller and medium-sized blooms selling most easily. Pompons sold reasonably well, but only at fair prices. The small yellow button pompon was in good demand. Chadwick, Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon and Frick form the bulk of the supply of mums now coming in. They are all of good quality. Carnations sold well and toward the end of the week were hard to obtain. Roses in the small and medium sizes

The club meeting held November 22 was rather poorly attended, but was interesting nevertheless. F. C. Bauer and I. H. Moss spoke on interesting topics, followed by a discussion. At the next meeting, December 13, Vice-president Rider will address the meeting. William Feast, chairman of the show committee, will present his final report and will speak on the recent merger of the Maryland Agricultural Society, which was accomplished at the Maryland Week meetings held in the Armory during the show. These facts will be interesting and it is hoped a large number of members will be present.

The Market.

There has been a decided improvement in the local market. Weather conditions are ideal and there is a feeling that greater prosperity is at hand. Stores are busy with wedding and dinner decorations, and for these prices are better. The business incident to the social seasons for the last two years has been a disappointment. The coming White House nuptials, it is expected, will create a heavier demand for flowers this winter than has been the case for several previous winters. Thanksgiving business was exceptionally good. All stock sold well, although prices were not so high as was to be expected. Valley cleaned up and some of the houses were unable to fill their orders. This was brought about by the entire absence of orchids. It is reported that a single order for two dozen white orchids last week was turned down by both growers and exchanges.

American Beauty roses sold up closely, bringing up to $4 per dozen for ordinary stock, with some choice lots movdaisies, as well as snapdragon, which is always popular in Washington for dinner decorations. Cornflower is in some demand but scarce. Chrysanthemums still rule the market. Nagoya, yellow and white Timothy Eaton, Dr. Enguehard, Black Hawk, Roman Gold, golden and white Chadwick, and Chadwick Supreme, white and yellow Bonaffon and Turner are among the present offerings. Poinsettia has made its appearance and sweet peas are to be had in limited quantities.

Various Notes.

A wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. McCabe, in Anacostia, just before Thanksgiving day, when Miss Marie Lott, who had been in their employ for several years, became Mrs. W. C. Fry. The young couple have gone to Miami, Fla., where Mr. Fry is in business.

Harry McCabe, who is with his father in the florists' business in Anacostia, has returned from Detroit.

The Market.

The arrival of cold weather has given business a much needed boost and has shortened the supply to a marked degree. There still is, however, plenty of stock to go around, and there has been no marked increase in prices. Society dances and dinners are beginning and each registers a call for flowers which, along with funeral work, keeps trade healthy. Thanksgiving day helped to round out a rather quiet month in good shape. Everyone reports good business and everything cleaned up well, with the exception of carnations, which was due to the large call for pompons, of which there was a decided shortage. Next year will see several growers increase their space of pompons for this market.

A few sweet peas are coming in, but not in quantity to amount to much. They are mostly white. Mums still are plentiful in such varieties as Golden Wedding, Wells' Late Pink, the Chadwicks and Enguehard. A football

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Houston Florists' Club November 22, the election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, C. L. Brock; vice-president, H. H. Kuhlmann, Jr.; secretary, A. L. Perrin; treasurer, P. M. Carroll. The latter two were re-elected. The executive committee consists of S. J. Mitchell, H. H. Kuhlmann, Sr., H. Dirken and R. C. Kerr.

Preliminary plans for entertaining the S. A. F., which will hold its annual convention at Houston next August, were discussed. A bowling tournament will be held during the convention. H. H. Kuhlmann was appointed chairman of the bowling committee.

Thanks were extended to those who helped to make the recent flower-fashion show a success. Particular mention was made of out-of-town exhibitors, including the Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, Mo.; J. F. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia.; Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago; A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago; Pikes Peak Floral Co., of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Park Floral Co., of Denver; Furrow & Co., of Guthrie, Okla.; Joy Floral Co., of Nashville, Tenn.; Rosemont Gardens, of Montgomery, Ala.; C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, Neb.

At the next meeting of the club R. C. Kerr will read a paper on "The Best Greenhouse for the Southern Climate."

SAGINAW, MICH.

Business in general for Thanksgiving was better than ever it has been previously on that day. Demand had all the salable and half-open mums exhausted by noon. Roses were probably the only flowers left over. Pompons are a big factor now, being used for every occasion. Carnations are increasing in quantity and improving in quality and big crops are expected for Christmas, providing the weather continues to hold fair.

Society held a chrysanthemum show at Frueh's. The results were as follows: Charles Frueh & Sons, first, 92 points; Boehringer Bros., second, 84; Martin Keit, third, 80; John Marsh, fourth, 73; J. B. Goetz Sons, fifth, 68; William Roethke Floral Co., sixth, 46. Twelve large blooms in a vase for competition. The pompons were shown in a wide range of colors, in which Boehringer Bros. received first, Charles Frueh & Sons second, J. B. Goetz Sons third, William Roethke Floral Co. fourth. The society's next meeting will be held at the William Roethke Floral Co.'s greenhouses, Gratiot avenue, December 6, at 7 p. m.

Grohman the Florist had a set table decoration in his window last week which attracted a great deal of attention.

Charles Frueh & Sons had an extremely large run on funeral flowers, which kept the store force working early and late last week.

The William Roethke Floral Co. has an exceptionally choice lot of pompon chrysanthemums. They are being eagerly picked up by the flower lovers.

J. B. Goetz Sons are cutting some choice long-stemmed orchid-flowering sweet peas and single violets, which are not plentiful enough for the demand. Their cyclamen plants, of which they have a houseful, are a fine sight, and just right for Christmas. Gee.

Geneseo, Ill.—W. S. Tyner, proprietor of the Tyner Floral Co., has a lemon yellow sport of William Turner, of which great things are expected. It is said to possess all the attributes of Turner, including great size. His stock now consists of twenty-four plants, propagated from the original sport, which appeared last season.

Daily shipments have been made to the New York and Philadelphia markets since October and the prices returned by the commission men are said to have run as high as 30 cents for the longest stems the few days before Thanksgiving.

Nazareth, Pa.—A settlement has been reached in all the cases brought by Mrs. Mary L. Geiger against cement companies operating in the vicinity of her range. She sued the companies for an aggregate of $60,000 damages for injuries to her houses and stock. Mrs. Geiger stated that the dust from the cement works made the propagation of plants impossible and that the heavy blasting in the quarries broke steam pipes and cracked the walls of the boilers. The terms of settlement were not made public, but it is reported that one of the companies may buy Mrs. Geiger's property.

Dallas, Tex.—At the recent debutantes' ball given by the Idlewild Club, where the Rische-Chollar Floral Co. had charge of the decorations, the entire ballroom was encircled by 1,000 yards of scenic tapestry. Limned against the chalk-white skyline of the tapestry were evergreens done in black, giving the eerie appearance of a dense forest at the witching hour. The ceiling was covered with white canvas, the panels being outlined with wild smilax. The somberness of the scene was relieved by numerous mums, which filled the window boxes and the curve of the large stage. The black and white motif was continued in the banquet room, where supper was served at midnight to the 450 guests. Each table had as a centerpiece a slim basket filled with pompons. The walls of the reception room were banked with arborvitas, palms and ferns, with doorway arches festooned with southern smilax. The decorative motif also was carried out in the programs, which were enclosed in black and white-striped folders bearing formal bouquets.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business last week, which included Thanksgiving day, was satisfactory to wholesaler, retailer and grower. According to reports from the trade in all parts of the city, Thanksgiving business was excellent. The wholesalers report a clean-up of all fancy and first-grade stock at satisfactory prices. There was an abundant supply of mums, which had first call, and many of the blooms were extra fine, but the season for mums is rapidly closing. Roses are arriving in large quantities and the demand for them is good. Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond are in the majority. Other varieties are not so plentiful as they will be later. Carnations are selling well at advanced prices. Extra good quality is seen. The supply of violets is not as heavy as in former years. Sweet peas are in fine shape and soon will be plentiful. Paper Whites and calla lilies now are conspicuous. Good valley and Easter lilies may be had in quantity. Greens are plentiful. Ferns have advanced to $2 per thousand. Asparagus and smilax have an excellent demand.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Retail Florists' Association, November 22, at the Mission Inn Garden, the following were elected to membership: O. K. Sanders, Nathan Kingsley, Alexander Siegel and John Connon. The next meeting of the association will be held December 20.

Windler's Flower Store had a charming Thanksgiving window display last week. A large cornucopia, from which fell a wealth of fancy fruit, filled the center of the window and was surrounded by vases of pink, white and yellow mums. This concern reports an excellent Thanksgiving business.

The poultry show at the Coliseum last week, as usual, had its charm for some of the florists who are chicken fanciers. Among them were George Waldbart, W. C. Smith, W. J. Pilcher, Frank Weber, Frank Fillmore, Jr., and
A. G. Fehr. They were almost daily visitors.

John Held has a fine lot of extra-most satisfactory Thanksgiving day business. The volume of business done was greater than that of last year.

George Walters, wire worker, at Six-a telegram stating that his mother was

George Waldbart, the Grand avenue takes daily trips to his farm in the fancy chickens and ducks. He says his efficient store help makes it possible for him to take such pleasures daily.

The Ayres Floral Co. attracted a great deal of attention last week with an excellent Thanksgiving window display. It consisted of a large plaque, on which a design of natural fruit was

The Market.

Dark, gloomy weather the day before Thanksgiving had a somewhat depressing influence on the cut flower market. Prices on chrysanthemums, which appeared in immense quantities, were low in the morning, but improved considerably in the afternoon. Good stock was all cleaned up, but a good many second-rate flowers were carried over. Thanksgiving day was, fortunately, clear and fine and there was considerable business at the wholesale markets. The retailers also did a large business. Bonnaillon, as usual, was the predominant Thanksgiving mum. Pom-pons had a large sale also. Roses were in short supply and were cleaned up easily. The best Beauties made $50.
On other roses the prices varied from $3 to $20. Carnations in a few cases made $5, but the regular price was $2 to $4. The whites, as usual, were the poorest sellers. Violets sold well at an average of $1 per hundred. Yellow marguerites, cornflowers, pink snapdragons, valley and gardenias all sold fairly well. In pot plants the calls were not heavy, but a fair number of cyclamens, begonias, azaleas, chrysanthemums and poinsettias were sold.

Since Thanksgiving there has been a fair market. Mums still arrive in large numbers and unbalance the sales of other flowers. They are likely to be abundant until Christmas. Roses are selling well and are not abundant. Carnations do not move ahead any as yet; with many growers they are in light crop and high Christmas prices seem probable. Violets are a little lower. Orchids continue scarce and gardenias are in short supply. There is an abundant supply of lilies, but the demand is somewhat weak. Valley has been selling well. Paper White narcissi and stevia are now fairly abundant. Asparagus is not selling as well as it did before stevia made its appearance.

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of 150 at the club meeting November 23. W. J. Kennedy, for the legislative committee, reported on a number of bills of importance to gardeners and florists, which would soon come up at the state house. Some discussion took place over the landscape classes, which it was decided to start at Horticultural hall November 29. The teachers will be L. G. Van Leeuwen and Paul R. Smith, and it is hoped to have twenty-five sessions during the winter. Thomas Roland read a financial report on the Boston, 1914, convention. The report showed a balance on hand of nearly $1,000. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, P. Welch, William Downs, F. E. Palmer, W. J. Stewart and others spoke on the report and various matters connected with it.

Eight new members were elected. A communication was read from Richard Vincent, Jr., asking dahlia specialists in the club to identify themselves with the new dahlia society. A communication from John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., regarding a renewal of affiliation, was favorably acted upon. M. C. Ebel spoke on the convention of the National Association of Gardeners, to be held in Boston December 9 and 10, and, after some discussion, the arrangements for the entertainment of visitors were left in the hands of W. N. Craig, D. Finlayson and W. J. Kennedy, to cooperate with a committee to be appointed by the "horticultural interests" of Boston.

The lecturer of the evening was George B. Gallup, president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association, who gave a most delightful talk on "Advertising, the Light that Serves and Saves." A number of questions were asked the speaker, after which he was given an enthusiastic vote of thanks.

The following were nominated as officers for the ensuing year: President, James Methven; vice-president, W. J. Patterson; treasurer, Peter Fisher; secretary, W. N. Craig; executive committee, H. H. Bartsch, Peter M. Miller, W. J. Kennedy, A. K. Rogers, George W. Butterworth, W. C. Rust, L. G. Van Leeuwen and William H. Judd.

The exhibits included specimen chrysanthemum blooms of grand quality; Begonia Ensign, from Alexander McKay, the latter awarded honorable mention; a good collection of flowering plants, from the W. W. Edgar Co.; Bouvardia Humboldtii and Solanum Capsicastrum, Montreal type, from W. N. Craig; Carnation Miss Theo, from Littlefield & Wyman, and a new pink seedling rose of a promising character, from Charles E. Holbrow.

Various Notes.

William R. Nicholson finds Alice a wonderfully free carnation, which is going to give Pink Delight a tussle for supremacy. Matchless he likes well, but it is a slow opener in winter. He still finds Beacon the best scarlet, having discarded Champion. He has several plants of a pure white Benora which should prove a winner. Good Cheer, among the new varieties, is well liked; also, a white seedling of A. Roper's. His chrysanthemums are practically all cut now.

The W. W. Edgar Co. sold a large number of azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens and Lorraines for Thanksgiving day. They have quantities of Mme. Petrick azaleas in bloom and also some nice Vervæneana. All their Christmas plants are looking extra well. This week their stock of giganteum lilies will be potted up.

Mrs. E. K. Farr, of Stoneham, is sending in an extra fine grade of carnations, the flowers being far superior to the general average seen here. Fenn, Benora, Yellow Prince, Ward, Matchless, Beacon and White Wonder are the leaders. Spencer sweet peas also are grown, for a late winter and spring crop.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. reports good Thanksgiving business, with a good clean-up in nearly every line.

R. E. Wadsworth & Co. are unusually successful carnation growers. Some of their favorite sorts are: Pink Delight, White Wonder, Matchless, Gorgeous, Benora and Beacon. They still have a

The convention of the National Association of Gardeners, in Boston, December 9 and 10, is the leading coming event of local horticultural interest. The "horticultural interests of Boston" have appointed a committee consisting of J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Thomas Roland and J. B. Shea to cooperate with the committee appointed by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club to care for visiting members. Plans are under way for a sight-seeing trip to points of horticultural interest on the second day.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, is cutting fine crops of stevia and Paper White narcissi. Their Freesia Purity is already well budded and they will have a large batch in flower for Christmas.

J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, are cutting a splendid lot of their new carnation, Pink Supreme. They also have their usual fine lot of lily of the valley.

J. W. Foote, of Reading, has the market largely to himself here with Bouvardia Humboldtii, which always meets with a quick sale. His carnations look remarkably well. His favorites are Beacon, Pink Delight, White Wonder and Benora. He is marketing some good solanums and well flowered geraniums.

F. H. Houghton and Samuel Kravath, formerly of the Houghton-Gorney Co., opened an up-to-date flower store at 445 Main street, Melrose, in the Melrose theater building, November 20, and report satisfactory business.

nations never looked better, but are not at present in heavy crop.

Owing to Thanksgiving day falling on the regular Florists' League bowling day, there were no contests last week. Competitions will be renewed December 2.

Thomas Capers, of Wellesley Hills, has some splendid mignonette, the best I have seen this season. He likes Carnation Alice particularly well, while in the older sorts he finds Beacon, Pink Delight, White Wonder and White Enchantress reliable.

Thanksgiving business at Penn's was heavy. Enormous quantities of chrysanthemums, roses, violets and valley were sold. Work is being pushed ahead on the new store at 124 Tremont street, which will be in active operation before Christmas.

J. W. Simpson is already getting a fine pick of English primroses and single and double violets. He still finds White Lawson a profitable carnation for retail trade. Other varieties grown are White Wonder, White Enchantress, Beacon and Pink Delight.

Paul F. Brigham, of Westboro, has Pink Delight with wonderful stems and flowers for so early in the season. He likes Eureka, which he finds a satisfactory scarlet. Matchless, Beacon and White Wonder are other favorites.

H. J. Borowski & Sons, of Roslindale, recently acquired an additional piece of land adjoining their greenhouses and have started work on a Moninger all-steel house 40x150; also, a steel-frame service building thirty feet square. The whole will be completed by January 15. The stock of cyclamens, azaleas and Cincinnati begonias is in fine condition; no better plants are to be found in this section.

There was a good attendance at the opening of the landscape classes at Horticultural hall November 29. Those who

Thomas Roland says there is a wonderful improvement in the call for flowering plants compared with a year ago, and salable stock moves as fast as it is ready. He will have one of his big rose houses at Revere in full crop about the middle of January. Another house of sweet peas will start flowering about the middle of December.

November has quite belied its reputation here. The skies have been clear nearly the whole month. We have had far less rain and fog than the average and the month has been a remarkably open one. It is unusual to see geraniums and other tender plants blooming outdoors at Thanksgiving, as they were this season. W. N. C.

PLANT BASKETS

Our Plant Baskets have been so well received that they are now a very important feature of our Christmas business. Last year we offered only one style in three sizes. This year we have about twenty-five different numbers. All are first-class, both as to style of basket and filling. Nothing but highly-colored, well-grown stock is used, such as Dracaenas in variety, Crotons, Pandanus, Ferns, etc. On account of being filled early and becoming established, they are bound to give you and your customer satisfaction. We cannot recommend them too highly. Many of the baskets and window boxes are in two-tone effect. All baskets have zinc (not tin) liners.

Window box shape, 18 inches long, 6 inches wide, 6 inches deep, $3.50 and $4.00 each.

Our new Seedling Crotons, some of which we disseminated in June, 1911, are varieties that should be in every grower's and private person's collection. They are far superior to many of the older varieties of Crotons and the types range from narrow to very large leaf. We particularly call your attention to our set of thirteen, named after the "Thirteen Original States," which have won highest honors wherever shown.

They are also especially attractive to use with Chrysanthemums. Cut Crotons will last in a cool place from three to four weeks. We can supply them every day in the year.

Very highly colored sprays at 25c, 35c and 50c.

Cut leaves, $3.00 and $5.00 per 100.

When you have orders for funeral or table work out of the ordinary, order "Craig's Cut Crotons."

DRACAENAS

There is no variety of foliage plants as attractive as the highly-colored Dracaena. The small and medium sizes can be used to great advantage in making up the popular Christmas baskets, while the large specimens have always been in great demand for decorative purposes. 150,000 NEPHROLEPIS (In Variety)

We are the largest growers of Nephrolepis Ferns in the country in the following varieties; in fact, we are the headquarters for them. The demand increases each year, and it is our aim to have every variety of Nephrolepis, in every size, every day in the year.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzei, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzei and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2½-inch pots, strong plants $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.
6-inch pots, strong plants, $50.00 per 100.
8-inch pots, strong plants, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
Large specimens, $2.50, $3.00 and $4.00 each.

NEPHROLEPIS ELEGANTISSIMA IMPROVED

This variety is a greatly improved Elegantissima and shows a tendency to revert to the Boston. This will prove a valuable addition to the crested varieties.

Larger plants, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50 each

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

6-inch pots.....$6.00 per doz.
8-inch pots.....$12.00 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS ROBUSTA (New)

Place orders at once for Nephrolepis Robusta. The Silver Medal Fern at the National Flower Show, winning over all competition. We claim this variety to be the finest of all crested Nephrolepis, being exceptionally fine in large sizes. It is the strongest grower of all the Nephrolepis Ferns, never reverts and every plant is symmetrical and salable in all sizes.

The fronds are long and narrow, the pinnales beautiful plumose, which are of light color, giving the fronds a beautiful effect on account of the two distinct shades, as well as its graceful waviness, and will be found a great and distinct addition to collection ferns.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

As a result of the Dutch embargo on spinach seed, the price already has reached 25 cents per pound.

THE death of Otto Stumpp, of West Hoboken, N. J., is reported in the obituary column this week.

JOSEPH W. EDMUNDSON, manager of the California Seed Growers' Association, left Chicago Thanksgiving night for the east.

BEET is one of the items that the catalogue man may well think about. There are offers of stock that look tempting, but the non-warranty applies, strictly.

THE people who have been cherishing last year's valley pips as with the idea they might never get any more are beginning to indicate a willingness to let go.

THE market for bouquet green firmed up at Chicago at the opening of this week, due to wintry conditions. Some suppliers of bulk green are reported to have withdrawn all offers.

THE acreage of onion in the Santa Clara and San Juan valleys of California will be increased this season, bulbs being shipped in from the northwest and from Colorado for the purpose.

THE letters from European growers indicate rather more than the normal eagerness to book contract orders for seeds of 1916 crop. There seems to be no fear, either of labor shortage or interruption of business.

THE death of W. Atlee Burpee, although his illness was of many weeks' duration, has come as a shock to the trade, for he was probably as widely known as any man in the business. An account of his life and a group picture of the Burpee family appear in the obituary column of this issue.

THE cool weather of the last two weeks has been favorable for onion sets, but the shrinkage in the warehouses will be heavy, owing to the wet weather that prevailed during the harvest time. They are not keeping well. It will be necessary to hand-pick them and throw out a large per cent of them before shipping. Present indications are that there will be a fifty per cent loss by January 1 in white onion sets.

THE European seeds have come to hand in a way that has been a pleasant surprise. Orders from Holland, England, even France, have been filled, if anything, more promptly than usual and important quantities of German seeds have arrived via a neutral port. While certain items have for a time been put under embargo and are not permitted to be exported, the situation has worked out better than most seedsmen thought possible.

THOMAS CHISHOLM, of the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., left Los Angeles Thanksgiving day for his annual winter trip east.

JOHN F. GEABY, who has charge of the pea and bean growing station of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, at Columbus, Wis., was in Chicago a few days last week.

SAYS W. E. Haile, Monticello, Fla.: "We have had lots of inquiries from our little ad in The Review and have entirely sold out our surplus stocks of both watermelon and okra seeds."

In an English trade paper we read Holland correspondence to the effect that "bulb growers are at their busiest planting their stocks and many millions of bulbs are again being entrusted to mother earth for propagation. Nevertheless, from the present outlook it may safely be predicted that considerably less will be planted out compared with last year, as the results of this year's trading are disastrous, owing to the prevailing low prices, which are in nearly all cases less than the cost of production. Besides this, the cost of labor has been going up owing to the higher cost of living, and this of course cuts both ways." This seems scarcely to accord with the situation as understood in this country, where the demand for bulbs has cleaned up the heaviest imports ever recorded, prices paid having been about the same as those of other years. Except for his European trade the Hollander has no reason to complain.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

Schultz's Seed Store, of Washington, D. C., reports the best season of its experience. G. E. Schultz has had remarkable success in keeping stock true to type.

F. W. Bolgiano & Co., P. Mann & Co. and C. M. Wolf & Co., of Washington, are all sanguine regarding future seed business.

B. Sweeney, one of the largest market gardeners in the District of Columbia, estimates that there are 250 truck farms in his vicinity producing stock for home and foreign markets. Many of these gardens soon will be absorbed by the city of Washington.

T. W. Wood & Sons, of Richmond, Va., are preparing for a banner seed season. The problem of getting stocks that are held in Holland, such as spinach, for instance, is keeping the dealers guessing.

The Alexander Seed Co., of Augusta, Ga., has secured a farm which will be used chiefly for trial purposes. Manager C. E. Brush commented that "demonstrations are the order of the day."

The Virginia experimental station, at Norfolk, Va., is making strenuous efforts to combat the pea louse, which is doing much damage along the south Atlantic coast.

W. M. McIntosh & Son, of Charleston, S. C., found their increased space of great benefit last season and may possibly add more room if the business continues to expand at the present rate.

J. Bolgiano & Son, of Baltimore, Md., have found that the handling of plants required too much detail; instead, they are making a special drive in bulbs. Catchy names seem to take; for instance, baby hyacinths are having a quick sale for children's gardens. "Anything out of the ordinary," remarked Manager R. J. Bowen.

The Meyer-Stisser Co., Wiseman, Downs & Co., and the Griffith & Turner Co., of Baltimore, have their catalogues about completed. There is much speculation as to how near the mark they are for the coming season.

S. L. Fell & Son, of Wilmington, Del., will be known as Fell's Seed Store in the future.

The Phillips-Thompson Seed Co., of Wilmington, reports a good season, with a steady call for grain for fall sowing.

SARAH BERNHARDT'S LEGS

They say Sarah Bernhardt has 26 legs—25 of which are cork, 24 of them of foreign make and one American manufacture. And she likes the American leg best. Of course, 26 legs are not many compared with the number she has pulled in the good old U. S. A. during her last fifteen farewell tours, but still the number is unusual. The reason we mention this is because the subject is more attractive to the average reader than is Ward's bulbs; and as the first duty of an ad is to get attention, we must begin with something that will be most apt to get your attention. So now we want to tell you that if you grow lily bulbs it is best to get Ward's bulbs. They are grown by experienced lily growers in a way to insure the greatest efficiency for the commercial florist. You can make more money with them than with any other brand. If you need some for Easter flowering we offer a few cases of Formosum of desirable size, which, if planted soon, should flower well for Easter. CUCUMBERS WITH TOMATOES.

Will cucumbers and tomatoes do well under the same conditions? What night temperature should they have?

L. A. W.—Mo.

The same house will grow both cucumbers and tomatoes, but if you want the best results stick to one or the other. Cucumbers want a warm, close, moist atmosphere, with a winter minimum of 65 degrees. Tomatoes, on the other hand, need a dry, buoyant atmosphere and 60 degrees as the lowest temperature, although they can be grown five degrees cooler. Tomatoes also set better in winter with a limited root run. Cucumbers require syringing, while no water should ever be sprayed on tomatoes.

C. W.

WINTER STRAWBERRIES.

Enclosed you will find some sample strawberry plants, with which I have a large space planted. Is there any chance of getting a winter crop from such plants as these? If not, would it be too late to plant potted ones for a winter crop?

L. A. W.—Mo.

If your strawberry plants average no better in quality than the sample forwarded, I am afraid your winter crop will be a small one. The season is now so far advanced that plants from pots would have no time to develop sizable crowns before cold weather. It would be better now to wait until spring before doing any planting. You would then be sure to have strong plants, which would yield a good crop the following winter. For forcing purposes, strawberries must be thoroughly established in their pots, which should be six or seven inches in diameter, and they should be kept outdoors as late as possible without running any risk of frost breaking the pots.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

WEST INVADING THE EAST.

Californians, always noted for the modesty with which they view and point out the progress of their state, are in reality delighted with the progress they are making in the florists' business, especially in the matter of shipping flowers east. As yet this business is in only a few hands, as there are not many places large enough to supply stock regularly in quantity and the commission man is only beginning to be a factor. But it has been proved that flowers from the coast cities can be shipped long distances as an everyday business proposition and plans already are on foot for the inevitable increase in the supply.

In recent issues of The Review there has been frequent comment on the presence of California flowers as a factor in the markets of other cities. It was noted that Los Angeles greens were received in Rochester; that many Los Angeles mums were used in New Orleans at All Saints' day, where formerly Chicago supplied all the stock not grown locally. In the Minneapolis notes it has been said that San Francisco violets have relieved a local shortage and Mrs. R. E. Darbee, of San Francisco, reports that she has been shipping mums regularly to florists as far east as Des Moines. It was Mrs. Darbee who sent two big boxes of mums, ten dozens of them, from San Francisco to President Wilson, at Washington. The flowers reached the White House on the afternoon of the fifth day and were refused because of the lateness of the hour, whereupon they were taken to the store of Gude Bros. Co., and opened but not unpacked. As the stock was in good condition, the boxes were stored in the cold room till morning, when they were delivered. Mrs. Darbee now prizes a nice little note of thanks from the White House.

One of the aids in building up the shipping trade out of the coast cities has been the interest of the express companies, which have established a number of refrigerator car routes for handling perishable articles.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Thanksgiving cleaned up quite a lot of stock and retailers report better business than usual for that holiday. The weather has been so perfect for outdoor sports, motoring, etc., that probably decorations were less numerous than usual. More plants than usual were sold.

A shortage of azaleas for Christmas is likely, the plants having arrived late and in some cases in smaller quantities than ordered. A number of plants were held over from last season, it is true, but these do not, as a rule, flower regularly all over and are often poor or deficient in foliage. This season, with a possible shortage in view, growers have taken a little better care of their plants, so possibly there will be some of them in fair condition. Begonias are plentiful, the Lorraine type being helped out by Chatelaine, a variety likely to become popular here. Cyclamens will be good; are good now, in fact, and will be far better by Christmas.

Cut flowers are fine, especially indoor roses, and unless the nights become colder, a considerable cut of outdoor roses is likely. Last week I noticed some fine pots of Frau Karl Druschki, from outside, which were as good as those usually seen in May. Red carnations are on the scarce side of the market, but pinks are plentiful. The supply of valley is uncertain and the quality is not of the best. Orchids are plentiful, but the demand for them is better.

Various Notes.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Pasadena Horticultural Association, November 19, when various matters connected with the recent flower show were taken up. The show, as already reported, was a success in every way and the only regret was that the tents were not twice the size they were. After the usual meeting, there was a meeting of the stockholders of the Pacific Garden to consider informally what was best to be done in regard to the resignation of P. D. Barnhart as editor and manager of the paper.

T. Chisholm, well-known representative of the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., of San Jose, and Mrs. Chisholm were in town for a few hours November 20, Mr. Chisholm leaving next morning on an eastern trip. Mrs. Chisholm will stay in Los Angeles for a time, visiting friends. Mr. Chisholm reports business good and it is pleasant to find a man so optimistic as he is, notwithstanding standing the mildew and pest troubles seed growers in the San Jose district have encountered. Probably this cheerful manner has had a lot to do with his success. Mr. Chisholm's father is our old friend, T. Chisholm, of Pasadena, so long identified with everything making for the good of the nursery and seed business. The younger Tom had a good grounding with his father, with the Germain Seed & Plant Co., and with other local concerns before taking the flights that have been so eminently successful.

Robert Murdoch, son of Duncan Murdoch, well known landscape gardener, recently was cut about the face and his knee hurt in a taxicab accident.

Tom Wright, of Wright's Flower Shop, says that many orders for wedding bouquets are being received, but that the decorations for weddings are not so elaborate and costly as usual. His is about the only local concern growing Beauties in any quantity.

George Eischen, the latter manager of Wolters' Flower Shop, took a day or two off to go after duck in Ventura county. All got good bags and Mr. Lichtenberg, it is said, was successful in bringing down several geese and turkeys—in a raffle.

A car of azaleas consigned to the Germain Seed & Plant Co., and containing stock for the Morris & Snow Seed Co. and E. H. Rust, has arrived. Three more cars consigned to the same house, with Holland nursery stock, are close by.

Fred Hills is adding another greenhouse, 30x100 feet, to take care of his increasing trade in ferns and other pot plants.

At Frank Lichtenberg's, one of the finest palls ever made in this city was put up for a recent funeral. It was composed entirely of orchids and violets.

C. E. Morton is well satisfied with the business done at the new store on Eighth street.

At the L. A. Floral Co. the Thanksgiving business was extremely heavy and taxed the staff to the utmost. Paul Miller was down with the grip, which made it the harder for the others.

H. W. Turner again is propagating heavily on Prima Donna. Although by no means new, this rose seems to increase in favor faster than it has been propagated. Heavy orders for spring delivery are already reported here.

The Crane Co., which has a large branch in this city, has sent out a few cast-iron pen and ink stands, made of the same quality of iron used in casting valves and other work. The writer was fortunate in receiving one of these, which are got out as a souvenir of the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the concern. H. R. Richards.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

There was more than the usual stir in business previous to Thanksgiving day and the buyers for the stores in some cases had their troubles in procuring stock in anticipation of that event. The chrysanthemums are now mostly of local origin and some good flowers are coming in, while second-grade stock is as plentiful as usual. The sale of the best grades improves and will reach its maximum this week. The best carnations are in demand and wholesalers have raised the prices accordingly, but even now the flowers are not bringing their usual winter prices. There is more than the usual variety in carnations this year, as most of the growers have added new kinds, but this does not appear to add to their merits as sellers. Roses are not any too plentiful and the demand is good. Chrysanthemum plants, of which there is a fair supply, are selling well and some of the single varieties are moving with unusual rapidity. Cyclamens and obconicas are the other pot plants offered, and of these there is a good supply.

Various Notes.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Apparently, the Thanksgiving retail trade ran far ahead of that of last year. Several of the leading retailers so reported and others were too busy to be approached. The stores were piled up with outgoing packages, including a good proportion of fine stock. Flowers were in sufficient, but far from excessive supply. Many growers had held back stock for the occasion, but even then all offerings cleaned up readily at fair prices. As Thanksgiving wholesale shipments were finished several days before, that department had a little lull. Mums continue to be the principal feature, but it is said there will be no more heavy offerings. Nonins were fine; there was a fair amount of good Appletons; Bonnaffons were abundant and well up to standard. There also were some good red, pink, and bronze varieties, all of which found a strong demand. Pompons moved in large quantities. Carnation offerings were the largest and best of the season, and the price of medium-grade stock was boosted, but practically everything moved early. Violets have been a little short-stemmed, but otherwise are fine, and the market is in good shape both here and for shipment. Roses are better, most lines bringing satisfactory prices. More baby roses and Beauties could be used, but both show good quality. The movement of orchids is unusually heavy, including many kinds, and gardenias have been a bigger item this year. There is no shortage of valley and more Easter lilies are selling than for some time. Flowering plants have been fairly plentiful and have found a heavy demand. Many small local poinsettias came in and a lot of the large cut flowers came from San Diego, being a prominent feature in the downtown stores. Cyclamens, both plants and cut flowers, have done well. A few azaleas came in last week. There were nice primulas and Lorraine begonias to be had. Heather is fairly plentiful and quite a bit of it is cut. California holly is not so prominent as last year, supplies being within moderation. No English holly has appeared so far. Greens sell heavily; smilax, plumosus and Sprengeri are all prominent.

Various Notes.

William S. McLellan, a brother of E. W. McLellan, of the E. W. McLellan Co., was stabbed to death November 19 while grappling with an insane farm hand.

L. Piccetti, manager of Charles Navlet's branch in the Emporium, has had a large display in the front windows of the department store lately and, as a result, notes a marked gain in both flower and nursery departments. He got in quite a nice lot of poinsettias for Thanksgiving, as well as some fine cyclamens, and both cleaned up well.

C. Kooyman is now getting in a nice cut of roses from his own place, including some good Richmond, Killarney and a few Beauties. He expects to have a fine cut of the latter for Christmas.

Our New Rose, PRIMA DONNA

It is most gratifying to note the reports in the trade papers, and especially those of the great Cleveland Show, where Prima Donna won hands down for best vase of 50 roses. We had every confidence in introducing it as a forcing rose, knowing if it had a fair trial it would make good. Note the prices it has been bringing in the New York market, which has been glutted with good roses. It is of splendid, quick, strong growth, throwing an abundance of two to three-foot canes, healthy and exceptionally free in production of blooms. A truly distinctive rose that is a big money-maker for the grower. We will have an elegant lot of plants from 2½-inch pots, Feb. 1st delivery and later.

The Francis Floral Co. has made quite a hit with its Thanksgiving specialties and is now preparing for Christmas. A new line of novelty pottery has been put in and Frank Schlotzhauer has worked out a new basket design in the shape of a window box, in old country weave, colored in old ivory and old rose and several other fine tones, for use with combinations of Lorraine begonias, primulas and poinsettias, with Whitmani ferns.

F. Burns, of San Rafael, reports an active Thanksgiving week in his local trade. He is now getting numerous inquiries for roots of his new dahlia, Alaska.

Podesta & Baldocchi made a Thanksgiving window display that drew much attention. The notable feature in one window was two big baskets of unusually fine cypripediums, together with two vases of mixed orchids of varieties not common. The other window contained a striking basket of large poinsettias and golden pompon mums. Mr. Podesta reports a record Thanksgiving trade.

It is asserted that Matria recently acquired twenty-two shares and failed to turn over more than ten. An order restraining Matria from disposing of the share is also sought."

PORTLAND, ORE.The Market.

In spite of the inclement weather which prevailed all of last week, the Thanksgiving business proved quite satisfactory. Wholesale growers moved all of their cut stock and had to refuse several orders from interior points for carnations and mums. None of the stores increased the prices on high-class stock, as they usually do, and the public showed its appreciation by taking everything offered except a few orchids, yellow button mums and California-grown violets.

The best grades of mums sold from fifteen to twenty-five per cent cheaper than usual at Thanksgiving, and, while more flowers were moved, the amount taken in was but little greater than last year. The bulk of the business was in small lots, single dozens or broken dozens. The sales for cemetery decorations were few. Potted stock did not sell well. Arranged baskets made to cost more than $1 moved slowly. Pompon mums were the best sellers, with Mrs. Frank Beu as the leader. The call for ferns and foliage plants was light. Several stores showed tempting baskets of fruit in their window displays. But little outdoor work was done, on account of the heavy rains.

Thanksgiving and they did a rushing business.

Max Smith found ready sale for small baskets of cyclamen blooms.

Theo. Waddell had a large cut of fine Bonnaffons.

Ralph Ladd, son of E. J. Ladd, of the Portland Seed Co., died November 22. The young man had worked in several of the downtown flower stores.

The Tonseth Floral Co. reports a good call for pompons.

S. G. Lubliner featured some large baskets made up of potted mums. He reports an increase over last year's business.

Clarke Bros. had a large stock of carnations and Oregon-grown violets, which sold readily.

F. W. Geiger has opened a store at 430 Washington street, the location formerly occupied by Clark's Flower Shop. He has a greenhouse at 1092 Albina avenue.

A. Rahn, of the Rahn & Herbert Co., said his company moved all of its cut stock at Thanksgiving, selling most of it to Portland stores. His automobile was stolen recently from in front of his residence, but was found by the police a few hours later on Grand avenue.

Hoffman Bros. have closed their store at 768 Glisan street and have built a greenhouse at 1015 East Simpson street, where they will retail their products.

The Martin & Forbes Co. cleaned up all its stock at retail. Several orders from out-of-town dealers could not be filled.

E. R. Chappell has planned to open a flower store at 347 Morrison street, in the Broadway building, to be called Chappell's Flower Shop. He says it will be up-to-date in its arrangement.

Jas. O. Conwill, superintendent of parks, has returned from a vacation trip to California.

J. H. Dundore, president of the Oregon Sweet Pea Society, has been elected president of the board of directors of the 1916 rose festival. S. W. W.

ROSES AT SAN DIEGO.

Having heard much talk about the rose garden in Balboa park, San Diego, Cal., I paid it my first visit Thanksgiving day and found that what I had heard about it was no exaggeration; the display for the time of the year is simply marvelous. I found magnificent beds of the following: Gen. MacArthur, Frau Karl Druschki, Radiance, Mrs. Waddell, Jules Crotery, Lady Ilchester, Lady Battersea, W. R. Smith, Reine Carle de Saxe, Abel Chatenay, Cecile Brunner, Jonkheer J. L. Mock, La Detroit, Edward Mawley, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Mrs. Ward, Laurent Carle, Harry Kirk, Leo Payne-Weber, etc. This rose garden is two acres in extent and is beautifully and artistically laid out and I am sure Mr. Morley, the superintendent, must feel proud of the reward he is now receiving for his untiring efforts with this and with many other fine floral displays he has been the means of giving the exposition visitors and the people of San Diego. J. W. S.

Pittsfield, Mass.—F. I. Drake and Max R. Engelmann, who opened a flower store in the American building December 1, are contemplating the erection of several greenhouses next spring.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

THE death of R. F. Mann, salesman for the Georgia Nursery Co., is reported in this week's obituary column.

THE cost of imported stock is being materially increased this season by advances in freight and insurance.

THE Iowa Railroad and Warehouse Commission has ordered a change in the ratings on nursery stock to make the Iowa Classification correspond with the Western Classification.

TAKING time by the forelock, the Hotel Wisconsin has been selected as headquarters for the forty-first annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held at Milwaukee June 28 to 30, 1916.

DISCUSSION indicates that in the British Isles Sanders' White is considered the best white rambler rose now in commerce; finest flower, most fragrant and almost immune from mildew. It is listed in only a few catalogues, but eventual wide popularity is predicted.

THE Western New York Horticultural Society will hold its sixty-first annual meeting at Rochester January 26 to 28. Many nurserymen will attend. William C. Barry has been president of the organization for many years and its secretary is John Hall, who also is secretary of the A. A. N.

NURSERYMAN WINS LIEN.

Under a decision lately handed down by the District Court of Appeal of California, when a nurseryman contributes to permanent improvement of real estate in a city or town by furnishing seeds, trees or shrubs, he is entitled to a mechanic's lien. This holding, which was announced in the case of Grom vs. Center, 146 Pacific Reporter 186, depends upon the clause of the California lien law which gives a lien to any person who, at the request of the reputed owner of a lot, improves the same, to secure payment for work done or materials furnished. Since the decision turns on the question of whether the furnishing or planting of seeds, trees, shrubs, etc., constitutes an "improvement," the opinion will prove to be an important precedent in other states in which the right to a mechanic's lien is based on the making of improvements, without restriction as to buildings.

In this case, plaintiff sued to enforce a lien for planting a vineyard, and the Superior Court at Napa decided that the lien law was not broad enough to entitle him to that security, but the District Court of Appeals reversed the judgment. It appears that the parties agreed that plaintiff should plant the vineyard at a price of 2 cents per vine, he not furnishing the vines. After referring to the fact that no case just like this one had been found in the appellate courts of the country, the Court of Appeals refers to the following judicial precedents as bearing on the question:

In the case of California Portland Cement Co. vs. Wentworth Hotel Co., 108 Pacific Reporter 103, it was held by another branch of the District Court of Appeals that a lien was properly allowed for the furnishing of trees, shrubs, plants, flowers, seeds, bulbs, etc., for a hotel lot in Pasadena; the court saying:

"The furnishing and planting of seeds, trees and shrubs, and the caring for same for such period of time as would insure that the seeds had become well started and that the plants and trees were thoroughly settled in the ground, would seem to be an improvement to the real estate, which was among those intended to be included in the provisions of Section 1191, Code of Civil Procedure. It is probably not true that under the terms of this section a gardener or tiller of the soil could claim a lien by reason of labor expended in the general care of trees or crops, but under the contract made by Chisholm it appears that he was only to plant the seeds, trees, flowers, shrubs, etc., and to see that they were well started after being placed in the ground."

In an Alabama case (Donehoo vs. Johnson, 21 Southern Reporter 70), the question was as to whether an apple orchard constituted a "permanent improvement" and the court said: "The evidence discloses that the value of the land itself was enhanced by the orchard, and that such improvements are permanent we do not think can admit of controversy."

In a lawsuit which arose in Kentucky (Thompson vs. Buckner, 40 Southwestern Reporter 915), the Court of Appeals decided that a good stand of clover and orchard grass must be regarded as an improvement, since it materially enhanced the salable value of the land.

The Kansas Supreme Court has decided that breaking of wild land constitutes a "permanent improvement" of the land.

Summing up these decisions, the California court says:

"We can see no ground for holding that the planting of a vineyard is any less an improvement to the land than 'the planting of lawns and shrubbery' or 'of an apple orchard' or 'of clover and meadow grass' or 'the breaking and reducing of wild lands to cultivation.' The planting of a vineyard is generally supposed to be not only an important and valuable improvement to the land, but one of a lasting and somewhat permanent nature. It is assuredly supposed to enhance the value of the land, and the vines become a vital part of the realty. It is true that the plaintiff did not furnish the vines, but the statute makes no distinction between the one who furnishes the material and him who performs the labor in effecting the improvement. We have kept the buds and blooms picked off until the plants have reached a good size and they are now ready to burst into full bloom. They will make fine stock for retailing from this time on and through the winter. They will be in great shape for Xmas selling.

We advise that you have them shipped now and allow them to come into bloom in your houses, as a plant in bud will always ship better than one in full bloom.

tion could be raised but that he had improved the land and would be clearly entitled to the lien. Since, however, the work of improving the land, as well as the contribution of material for that purpose, is made by the statute a basis for the claim of lien, the present case could be no different in principle from the contingency suggested. In other words, the plain meaning of the statute is that whoever contributes to the substantial improvement of the lot, either by furnishing work or material, is entitled to the privilege of so enforcing his claim."

MORNING GLOW

A commercial bread and butter Carnation, winner of Certificates of Merit from Massachusetts Horticultural Society and American Carnation Society. Parentage, Winona by the Queen. In color it most nearly resembles Winsor and Gloriosa—a light rose-pink, shading to a silvery pink in the outer petals, resembling the tints of an apple blossom; the color deepens during the summer; the plants stand the hot weather well, so that one dislikes to throw them out when the time comes. Its color is what first attracts customers, its keeping qualities hold them; it sells in the Boston market in spite of its lack of size, which ranges from 2½ to 2¾ inches in diameter. Good for funeral work; makes plenty of cuttings, which root easily; a good keeper and shipper; has paid me better than any standard variety. We have confidence in it ourselves—with the exception of 800 plants of standard varieties and a bed of yellow Marguerites, we have planted all space to this variety, nearly 20,000 plants.

BELLE WASHBURN, the Best Red Carnation

WINNER of the Silver Medal at the last exhibition of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., January 27th and 28th; First Prize at the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, Ill., September 22d and 23rd. It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ to 4 inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family. It has a very spicy odor, much greater than the average Carnation. It comes in full flower by the 1st of December and then continues steadily through the balance of the season.

The present sharp competition in business requires the grower to plant a variety that always produces high-grade flowers, never bursts the calyx, has strong, long stems, is a steady and continuous bloomer, no cropper. The color is the most brilliant red of any Carnation now in market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs, of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18,000 devoted to rooted cuttings. We will have 100,000 strong, well rooted cuttings, guaranteed all first-class, ready for delivery during December. The price of the rooted cuttings will be $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

The Market.

Most of the Newark florists had an entirely satisfactory Thanksgiving business. There was a large sale of flowers and plants, both for home affairs and for social events. The sale of chrysanthemums was so great that it nearly cleaned many of the stores of their supply. In addition to the Thanksgiving day demand for flowers, there was a good call for funeral decorations. The chrysanthemums were of fine quality last week, as were most of the other flowers. Sweet peas are not plentiful as yet. Violets also are scarce. Roses are of good quality and of medium price. Carnations are plentiful and of excellent quality. There is a large sale of chrysanthemums in pots. Pompons are plentiful. A few gardenias are in the market. Easter lilies are arriving in fair quantities and some callas are seen. Orchids are still high-priced. Primroses in pots sell fairly well. Cyclamens are becoming more abundant. Valley is quite reasonable in price for this time of year, and of good quality. The general condition of trade is excellent, being on the gain all the time. Local florists look for good business during the season of 1915-16.

nurserymen on Stuyvesant avenue, Irvington, are much interested in hunting and have been on several hunting trips during the fall. They have several fine hunting dogs and occasionally run down a fox, besides plenty of the more common game.

The Thanksgiving window of Henry Leahy, in Elizabeth, was an unusually attractive one. By the use of greenish oil paper, such as is used to wrap flowers, the floor of the window was made to represent the sea. A large ship, about four feet long and with masts three feet or more high, was "sailing" in this sea. The hull was filled with chrysanthemums. At various places on the masts and yards there were small electric lights. At the rear of the window there was a painting representing a dock, which gave the ship the appearance of just having left the dock for its trip to sea. At the sides and the back, with the exception of the space occupied by the dock, were banked large jars of chrysanthemums, outlining the seashore. On a card hung from the bow of the boat were these words: "Thanksgiving goods arrived—Do your shopping now."

Hahne & Co., on Broad street,

Newark, made a specialty of Thanksgiving baskets of flowers and autumn foliage.

Peter Penek has secured the window of the vacant store next to him for the display of some of his largest chrysanthemums. This, together with the display in his own show windows, attracted much attention.

The J. J. Wilson Seed Co. has sold nearly all of its stock of bulbs. There seemed to be an especially large demand for tulip bulbs. The firm is now testing its seeds for spring sales. It is also getting out a new catalogue for the trade.

Business was good last week, there being much funeral work and many orders for decorations. Thanksgiving business was good, but it would have been at least ten per cent better had it not been for the rain at noon on that day. However, the general report was that Thanksgiving trade was as good as, or a little better than, that of last year. The demand for pot plants was about the same as that of a year ago. Fancy mums were scarce for Thanksgiving; in fact, they were more scarce than in former years. This was due to the warm weather, which brought the mums in a week before their time. Good mums of medium size also were scarce. The mum season is about over, the Fricks and a few other late varieties being the only ones left in the greenhouses in this vicinity.

Roses are especially good, but there are not enough of them to meet the demand. Beauties were scarce, a direct result, no doubt, of the shortage of other red roses and good mums. Carnations were not so plentiful last week, being cleaned up at all times. Violets, sweet peas, lilies and Paper Whites meet a ready sale at a fair price. Green goods were somewhat scarce during the week. Christmas greens have arrived.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray had one of the largest decorations of the season on Thanksgiving day, when he used more than 1,200 cut mums for the Smith ball.

CINCINNATI, December, 1915.

For immediate and the Holiday Trade we have the following choice plants to offer:

New Begonia MRS. J. A. PETERSON. We take pleasure in introducing, for the first time, this splendid novelty. The flowers are of a deep cerise, changing to a dark red as the flowers grow older; the foliage is of a dark reddish bronze, shading into green. It has been awarded a Silver Medal at the International Flower Show, in New York, March, 1915; Certificate of Merit by New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh Florists' Clubs. We offer good, strong plants, full of bloom, 6-inch pots, at $2.00 and $2.50 each.

Begonia GLORY OF CINCINNATI, Begonia MELIOR (new in 1914). No flowering plants of recent introduction have given better satisfaction or more flowers for the money; they last longer in bloom than any other class of flowering plants, if properly grown and taken care of. We have a splendid lot in bloom (now ready), full of flowers, strong plants, at 25c, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 each.

CYCLAMEN PERSICUM GIGANTEUM. This strain is our own personally selected strain, and we do not believe it can be had better anywhere. Strong plants, 4-inch, 5-inch, 6-inch and 7-inch pots, at 20c, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 each. Choice plants, fine flowers, full of bloom; let us select your order early.

PANDANUS VEITCHII. Only large plants left; $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 each.

ASPLENIUM NIDUS-AVIS (Bird's Nest Fern). We have a splendid lot of strong 4-inch plants to offer, at 50c each (only size).

DRACAENA MASSANGEANA, 5-inch and 6-inch, good value, 75c, $1.00, $1.50 each.

DRACAENA SANDERI, 3-inch pots, 10 inches high, 25c each.

ADIANTUM FARLEYENSE, 3-inch at 20c, 4-inch at 50c each.

We make a specialty of the above-mentioned plants and give them every attention needed, so we feel sure that we can give you entire satisfaction. Let us ship your wants early in December, so as to avoid the rush. We aim to send out only such plants as we feel sure will give you entire satisfaction.

Yours very truly,

J. A. PETERSON & SONS.

trade hopes she will have a rapid recovery.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a large wedding decoration last week. Stock from the greenhouses has been good, the carnations being plentiful, but the supply of roses somewhat short.

Edward Ellsworth and the bowling team of which he is a member played against the champion bowling team of Chicago last week. He reports that Thanksgiving business was good and that he could have sold more pot plants. He will have a nice lot of poinsettias and cyclamens for Christmas.

Arthur Newell says that Thanksgiving business was better than that of last year and that the demand for pot plants for that day was beyond his expectations.

W. J. Barnes had an unusual run in basket work for Thanksgiving. Funeral work was good all the week. He still has a large number of Helen Frick and White Frick to cut.

August Luther, Jr., has a fine lot of cyclamens and Lorraine begonias. He reports that business is steadily increasing at his new place.

Edward Humfeld says business is as good as that of last year. His azaleas have arrived in fine shape. He has a nice line of pot plants that will be ready for the holiday trade.

The Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a good week of out-of-town orders. The cut stock from the greenhouses is in good shape and there will be a large supply for the holiday trade; also, a nice lot of blooming plants.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that there is more business than stock; everything is cleaned up well. Shipping orders are heavy, especially in supplies.

R. H. Fields, who is with C. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., is visiting his relatives in Kansas City, Kan. He will return to Wichita this week.

Visitors last week were Samuel Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York; P. M. Koontz, with the McGregor Bros. Co., Springfield, O.; G. L. Freeman, of Fall River, Mass.; E. V. Myers, of St. Joseph, Mo.

A GOOD WORD

from a good firm about a good thing should do good to all.

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg.

Columbus, O., Nov. 19, 1915.
Dear Sir: Please send us 200 plants of your Silver Pink Seedlings and two packets of seed of original Silver Pink Snapdragon. We are now cutting from the first lot of seed sown, from you, and certainly have the finest bench of Silver Pink we have ever seen. The local florists here in Columbus say they are the best ever. Very respectfully,
The Livingston Seed Co.

Never was there a snapdragon which has had so many good things said about it as are said of our original Silver Pink SEEDLINGS. They do business for profit and keep right at it. Sow seeds now for plants to bench after the first of the year. New crop seed of our Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of Nelrose, Garnet, Yellow, White and mixed, 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00.

Plants of Silver Pink, White and Yellow at $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per $1,000. Other varieties later. Free directions. All orders cash.

We also offer a limited number of plants of SILVER QUEEN, our new mammoth flowered antirrhinum, at 50c per plant; $3.00 per doz.

We grow snapdragons by the thousand and can supply your every need.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Thanksgiving week, as usual, witnessed the zenith of the chrysanthemum season. There was an ample supply and some grand blooms were seen. With the exception of choicest stock, mums brought up to $4 per dozen at wholesale. Thousands of blooms retailing at 10 cents each commanded ready sale. Carnations were in better quality and quantity than is generally the case at Thanksgiving, while roses showed some improvement over the previous week. Orchids, bouvardia and valley came in for generous call, while the first sweet peas, cut by Albert Holscher, went with a rush at big prices. As a rule everybody cleaned up before noon on the holiday and the trade for the remainder of the week was sufficient to hold supplies in check.

Various Notes.

Fred C. Green, superintendent of parks, attended the recent annual meeting of the New England Park Superintendents' Association at Lynn, Mass.

A new white, pink-tinged chrysanthemum of the exhibition type, large and fluffy, originated by Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., has been named Mrs. Louis J. Reuter, for the wife of the Westerly florist.

One man was killed and another injured when a horse attached to a wagon loaded with tree-trimming apparatus, owned by George Johnson & Son, of the Elmwood Nurseries, became unmanageable a few days ago and ran away. John Sharkey died instantly from a fractured skull, when thrown from the wagon, while his companion, John J. Brophy, had three ribs broken. Two other men who were in the wagon escaped injury by jumping. All four men were employed by Mr. Johnson.

The W. R. Barrett Co., following a custom of several years, supplied its employees with turkeys for Thanksgiving.

An automobile owned by Johnston Bros. was badly damaged a few days ago by colliding with another machine.

Samuel Resnick, with Joseph Koppelman, who was recently operated upon for appendicitis at the Homeopathic hospital, is out again. W. H. M.

The Market.

The weather is still fine, although one rainy day, with some snow, made it look as though winter were here in earnest; but the next day the sun came out, and it is Indian summer again. The rain of November 25 put a stop to single mum sales. Up to that time this line was brisk. The rain started late in the forenoon, and the football game that all look forward to was a disappointment as far as goes the sale of mums. However, other flowers brought good prices. Fancy mums sold for $4 per dozen, but most buyers wanted a $3 grade. The call for carnations was surprising. Roses, sweet peas and violets also had a good demand. Some mums are on hand.

Various Notes.

Florists had a chance to try out co-operative delivery service for the first time during the Thanksgiving rush. This service is new here, but it worked well. Fine covered trucks are used. The business was handled in great shape. This is a big help to the florist. The charge is small.

The Summerfield Floral Co. reports a fine Thanksgiving business, with several large funeral orders the day following. Among the orders was a casket blanket of roses and chrysanthemums.

The Springfield Seed Co. reports a big holiday business. It kept the co-operative delivery service busy up to about noon that day. It also had large funeral orders.

The J. W. Stokes Floral Co. had a good business Thanksgiving. It had large orders for the football game, but the rain kept the crowd away, so that several orders were canceled. This company reports a good business at its branch store.

Rauch Bros. report a fine business for Thanksgiving. George Rauch, of Monett, was called in to help in the rush.

E. C. Pruner, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, reports having booked several nice orders here for cyclamens and other plants.

WACO, TEX.

In the trade's display contest given by the Young Men's Business League at the Cotton Palace in November, Wolfe the Florist was accorded first prize for a unique entry consisting of an urn-shaped basket, which was about five feet high and mounted on ball-bearing rollers so that it could be easily pushed about the hall. The basket and base were elaborately decorated with ferns, Easter lilies, valley and Cecile Brunner roses. At the start it appeared as if the large basket was empty, but when the massive decoration reached the center of the hall, up popped Mr. Wolfe's charming little niece, Miss Hannah Brigrance, like a jack-in-the-box, so to speak. The crowd was taken by surprise and applauded vociferously. Little Miss Brigrance made such a pretty picture in her little bower that the judges couldn't help but give Mr. Wolfe the first prize, which was $25 in gold. In the Women's day parade, Mr. Wolfe's two sons, Thomas and George, won first prize for a decorated float, on which was mounted a facsimile of the Liberty Bell, artistically decorated. Following in father's footsteps, as it were.

The Market.

The large call for cut flowers during Thanksgiving has quieted down. The demand this season was unexpectedly heavy; everybody seemed to have the flower craze. The growers are glad that Thanksgiving day has come and gone. It is a big worry off their minds, for who should get the stock they cut, and in what proportion? The orders were placed conditionally; that is, the retailer would place an order with the wholesaler, the wholesaler taking the order on the condition that he would fill it as nearly as possible.

The cut of roses was good, but the demand was so extremely large that there were not enough of them to go around. Until the day before Thanksgiving, the weather conditions were entirely in the growers' favor. The day preceding Thanksgiving was stormy, but the following day was clear. The Shawyer, Helen Taft, Hadley and Ophelia roses were advanced in price to 5, 8 and 10 cents each, while the Killarneys, Richmond and Hillingdon sold for 4, 6 and 8 cents. The American Beauty roses sold at 60 cents to $4 per dozen, but not enough of them could be obtained.

Carnations were scarce and nothing more than standing orders could be filled. They were sold at 2, 3 and 4 cents each. The local growers could not begin to satisfy the demand for chrysanthemums. Large shipments were brought in from the Pacific coast, which continues to dominate the market. Violets were plentiful and sold as low as 15 cents per bunch. Rubrums are practically out of the market. Easter lilies and Paper Whites are used extensively for funeral work, which has been heavy. Plants sell well, especially potted chrysanthemums, cyclamens, Cincinnati and Chatelaine begonias and Boston and Whitmani ferns.

Various Notes.

Miss Clara Henderson is manager of the flower department of the Willis-Horne Drug Co., at 8 South Main street. Miss Henderson had a large Thanksgiving trade.

The Miller Floral Co. reports a general shortage of stock during Thanksgiving. The outlook for the holidays is exceptionally bright. Receipts for Thanksgiving greatly surpassed those of any previous year.

Charles Soter had a fine window display of chrysanthemums. He reports a satisfactory Thanksgiving business.

The B. C. Morris Floral Co. reports an exceptionally good business during Thanksgiving. O. F.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Ideal weather characterized Thanksgiving. Flowers were abundant and of fine quality. Chrysanthemums were most prominent and handsome specimens of late varieties brought excellent returns. The varieties most in demand were Eaton, Golden Wedding, Bonaffon, Chadwick and Wells' Late Pink. Pompons in all colors and the single chrysanthemums came in for their share of holiday popularity. Roses were in excellent demand, especially Mrs. Charles Russell, Sunburst, Richmond, Killarney and Aaron Ward for corsages. The trade for corsages was heavy.

Carnations had a good demand and were fine. Valley and orchids were in big demand for wedding bouquets, and Beauties, Easter lilies and the small flowers all met with a fine demand.

The business following Thanksgiving has been good and stock normal.

Various Notes.

Markey Bros., of Washington boulevard, west, report a record sale of blooming plants for Thanksgiving. Their fine new delivery car came into good use last week. They also have purchased a new five-passenger touring car recently.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey featured some charming corsage combinations of pink begonia blossoms and valley for the Shriners' dance and other prominent events. Miss Catherine Vesey was home to spend the holidays with her father, Judge W. J. Vesey.

Miss C. B. Flick has gone to Toledo, to remain for some time with Miss Helen Patten, of the Patten Flower Shop.

The George W. Doswell Floral Co. had an excellent trade at its two stores. Chrysanthemums were in prime condition and sold well.

Knecht & Co. cut a fine lot of Major Bonaffon mums for their Thanksgiving trade.

Edgar Wenninghoff had a pretty window display of chrysanthemums and novel baskets of roses and pompon chrysanthemums.
